Susan sees strengthening community involvement and support for the schools as an important component towards fostering enthusiasm, respect and achievement in education. She also states that the community should be encouraged to use the school facilities for activities such as adult education and

Pierson Announces Candidacy for Selectman

Wigmore Pierson

Wigmore A. Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., is announcing his candidacy for a three-year term as selectman.

"I would bring a special independence to the board that will enable me to represent all the citizens of the town," said Pierson. "I will try to listen to everyone's concerns without bringing my own agenda to the board."

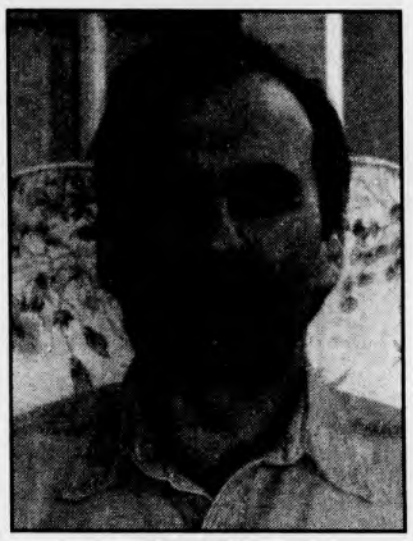
Pierson feels that few public officials are listening to the citizens and that they do not understand or care about peoples' financial difficulties when they agree to higher taxes, however meritorious the need may be.

"I believe we must respond to the rapidly changing society around us while remaining sensitive to already dreadfully burdened taxpayers. We have a big enough government and don't need any further bureaucracy," he said.

Pierson has been active in town affairs since moving to Cohasset in 1985 from Bethesda, MD. He was appointed by the selectmen to the first drug and alcohol committee in 1988 and subsequently was appointed to the Common Historic District Committee.

Since 1990, he has been a member of the historical commission and is currently serving as chairman of the new town history committee, which is charged with writing a third volume of Cohasset history.

He is also a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the town's Historical Society.



Pierson has taken a leave of absence from "Pierson to Person," his critically-acclaimed public affairs cable television program, for the duration of the campaign.

He has been active in public affairs since he was a Peace Corps volunteer in Peru, running twice for the state House of Representatives and serving as the chairman of the Massachusetts chapter of the Partners of the Americas.

On the national level, Pierson served as associate director of the Partners of the Americas in Washington, D.C., and was a member of President Gerald Ford's advance staff.

Pierson earned a bachelor's degree from Lake Forest College, where he served as a trustee for eight years, and attended the Tuck School of Business Administration at Dartmouth College.

He is the father of three children: Elizabeth, 17; Morgan, 15; and Carrie, 13.

Alex Koines

Alex Koines Candidate for Selectman

I grew up in Cohasset and live here with my wife and our daughter. My career has been in sales and marketing. Through my experience as a sales manager, I have developed a clear understanding of priorities and the ability to solve problems expediently, qualities I feel are not just useful, but essential in a selectman. I am a fiscal conservative and believe that every tax dollar should be used carefully. I will work hard to maintain a balance of sensible spending and efficient, reliable services for our town.

Bermuda: A portrait in living pastel color

By Linda Saulnier

At first blush, it is Bermuda's pink sand, turquoise waters, and limestone cliffs that summon you to this semitropical island 650 miles east of North Carolina. But behind the pastel perfection, Bermuda bursts with excitement, daring you to windsurf across the Great Sound, parasail off awesome coastlines, explore Ice Age caves, or scuba dive amid ancient shipwrecks.

Whether you arrive by air or sea, romance is sure to follow. If the island's famous perfumery, exotic gardens, and flora don't create the right ambiance, Bermuda's dazzling nightlife and lagoon sunsets surely will.

But if playing golf at sunset is your idea of romance, you will fall in love with Bermuda's lush greens at first sight.

Golf and Bermuda. It is a match made in heaven. Bermuda's Bureau of Touris mclaims you can play year round on courses designed by Robert Trent Jones and Charles Banks. Stuff a camera in your golf bag if you plan to play courses — like the 18-hole Castle Harbour Golf Club — that have panoramic views.

"Many of Bermuda's major resorts have their own golf course, or offer privileges at a nearby course," says Mike Mota, a travel agent with AAA Travel.

Some guidebooks list private clubs that offer specials to non guests, but greens fees can be pricey. There are a number of exclusive courses, like the Mid Ocean Club in St. George, considered to be one of the top courses in the world. Ask your travel agent about the possibility of playing there.

If your hotel or guest house has a private beach, don't stay put. Beach hop. Otherwise, you will miss seeing some of the most interesting stretches of Bermuda lace, the name for the offshore reefs that jut from the coastline. Elbow beach is a favorite with tourists. Other beach havens are the luxurious Horseshoe Bay, deemed outstanding by Mota. Nearer to St. George is Whale Bone Bay, where the sand is black, not pink.

You can view Bermuda's spectacular beaches from a sailboat, excursion cruise, or helicopter. Or you can descend a rocky hillside and wade through pools of water at low tide to swim in a less-touristy area. According to Bermuda's Bureau of Tourism, lifeguards are on duty at public beaches from May through September.

Dining can be formal or fun. Bermuda cuisine includes a bountiful fare of locally grown fruits and melons. For seafood lovers, mussels are a must. If you are adventurous, you will find shark and game fish a departure from the more popular red snapper. Where else would you find Bermuda Onion Pie on the menu? Bermuda Triangle ale is the local microbrew, and Black Seal Rum is about as stormy as it gets in Bermuda.

Rental cars are not available. To travel the island, you will have to rent a bike or motor scooter, take a taxi, or brave the bus, an escapade that will prove well worth the fare. Bermuda is British, so you will drive on the left side of the road. Follow the Old Railway Trail from parish to parish. Map your itinerary to include a stop in Somerset where you can picnic near the world's tiniest draw bridge, which is cranked by hand.

From the bustling city of Hamilton to the quaint streets of St. George, Bermuda's history comes alive in its 17th century buildings, churches, and forts. Its many museums are filled with exhibits and artifacts from land and sea. You will learn Bermuda's fascinating perspective on early colonization and the Civil War.

Pirates, rum-running, and witchcraft contribute to Bermuda folklore. At the Royal Naval Dockyard, once a naval bastion where legend claims a secret military facility operated as recently as 1993, you can visit a prison built by convicts in the 1800s, and a maritime museum. From the ramparts of Fort Scour Hill, you can catch a great view of the Great Sound. At Clocktower Mall you will find unique crafts and boutiques. Stop to sip a cup of tea served in a china cup.

Shopping in Bermuda is an international experience. French, Italian, and Swiss imports, local wares, Irish wools, and Bermuda pottery are among the treasures you can bring home duty-free. United States currency is accepted everywhere, as are major credit cards.

Mota says a passport is not required to enter Bermuda, but you will need two forms of identification for proof of U.S. citizenship accompanied by a photo ID such as a driver's license. If you are not a U.S. citizen, you will need a green card and federalization papers, in addition to a passport.

You can fly from Boston to Bermuda nonstop on American Airlines and Delta Airlines, or sail away on a week-long cruise. Flights are 2-1/2 hours. Mota says fares vary, but it is usually cheaper to go during the week than on the weekend.

Royal Majesty cruises sail from Boston April through October. Mota says agencies can offer special rates until the ship is 90 percent full. Then, the cruise line usually determines the going rate.

Cape Ann: A land of culture, history, and wildlife

By Stephanie Maughan

Rugged coastline and sandy beaches ... wildlife ... museums ... music ... art and antiques. Cape Ann, a peninsula that juts off the Massachusetts mainland 35 miles north of Boston with bustling towns rich in maritime history and quaint seaside villages, has something for everyone.

To get a feel for Cape Ann — named in the early 1600s by Charles I of England for his mother, Anne of Denmark — head out from downtown Gloucester northeast along Route 127A, the coastal route to Rockport.

On a clear day, it's breathtaking. As you wind your way along the ocean past impressive homes and hotels, you will probably want to stop at several points — such as Bass Rocks — walk around, and listen to the waves crashing against the rocky coastline. Further along there are sand beaches, Good Harbor Beach and Long Beach. Downtown Rockport is a couple of miles ahead of these, past several secluded coves.

This town is one of Cape Ann's centers for art and music. There are often multitudes of people strolling down Main Street and Bearskin Neck toward the ocean's edge, visiting the many artists' studios. Artists also display their work at the Rockport Art Association's gallery on Main Street.

At night during the summer, this gallery becomes a concert hall for the Rockport Chamber Music Festival. From June 12 through July 6, you will be able to hear the Brentano String Quartet, and pianists Russell Sherman and Menahem Pressler among other internationally known musicians.

Driving several miles north along Route 127 from Rockport, you will reach Halibut Point State Park, one of the sites of Cape Ann's granite industry, which flourished in the 1800s. It's a peaceful place high above the Atlantic to walk and meditate as you look out over the wide expanse of ocean.

You can return to Gloucester by taking Route 127, which goes inland south of Rockport, or by Route 127A.

Since Gloucester, the first and largest town on Cape Ann, was colonized by the Pilgrims back in 1630, fishing has been its livelihood. To learn about this history, start with a narrated boat tour of the harbor. As you pass lobster boats, haulers, and draggers, the narrator will tell how fishing has been passed down from generation to generation and that in the late 1800s, Gloucester was the center of North America's fishing industry.

The tour will pass by Ten Pound Island, where Winslow Homer, one of America's great nautical painters, lived for a while.

Further out, to your north, will be Eastern Point, with Beauport, the Sleeper-McCann House built by Henry Davis Sleeper, a prominent collector and interior designer. The building is now a museum. Another museum, Hammond Castle, once the home of John Hammond Jr., America's second-greatest inventor, is to your south.

When you get back on shore, learn the art of eating lobster or enjoy other fare from the sea at the Landmark Gloucester House at Seven Seas Wharf.

Adventure at sea

Gloucester's seafaring past will come alive when you visit the Adventure, one of the last and most famous of the large wooden fishing schooners. This dory trawler, otherwise known as "The Old Lady," has been restored as a national historic landmark by volunteers, and is moored just off Route 127 at the Gloucester Marine Railway's Pier.

Tourists stroll among the many shops on Rockport's Bearskin Neck.

In her 27 years as a fishing schooner under captains Jeff Thomas and Leo Hynes, The Old Lady's crews caught a record amount of fish, mostly cod and haddock. But when you first step on her deck, you'd hardly know that they walked on it day and night, year-round. A lone dory sits on it like a decorative object. Once, it was one of several rugged craft that the fishermen launched from The Old Lady, then cast their baited "trawl" lines. Now, the miles of trawl line are gone.

When you walk around, you'll see a telling sign of this schooner's legacy — a sizable depression in the wood just outside the captain's quarters where the helmsman stood at the wheel and looked at the compass that was in a box in the quarters just ahead.

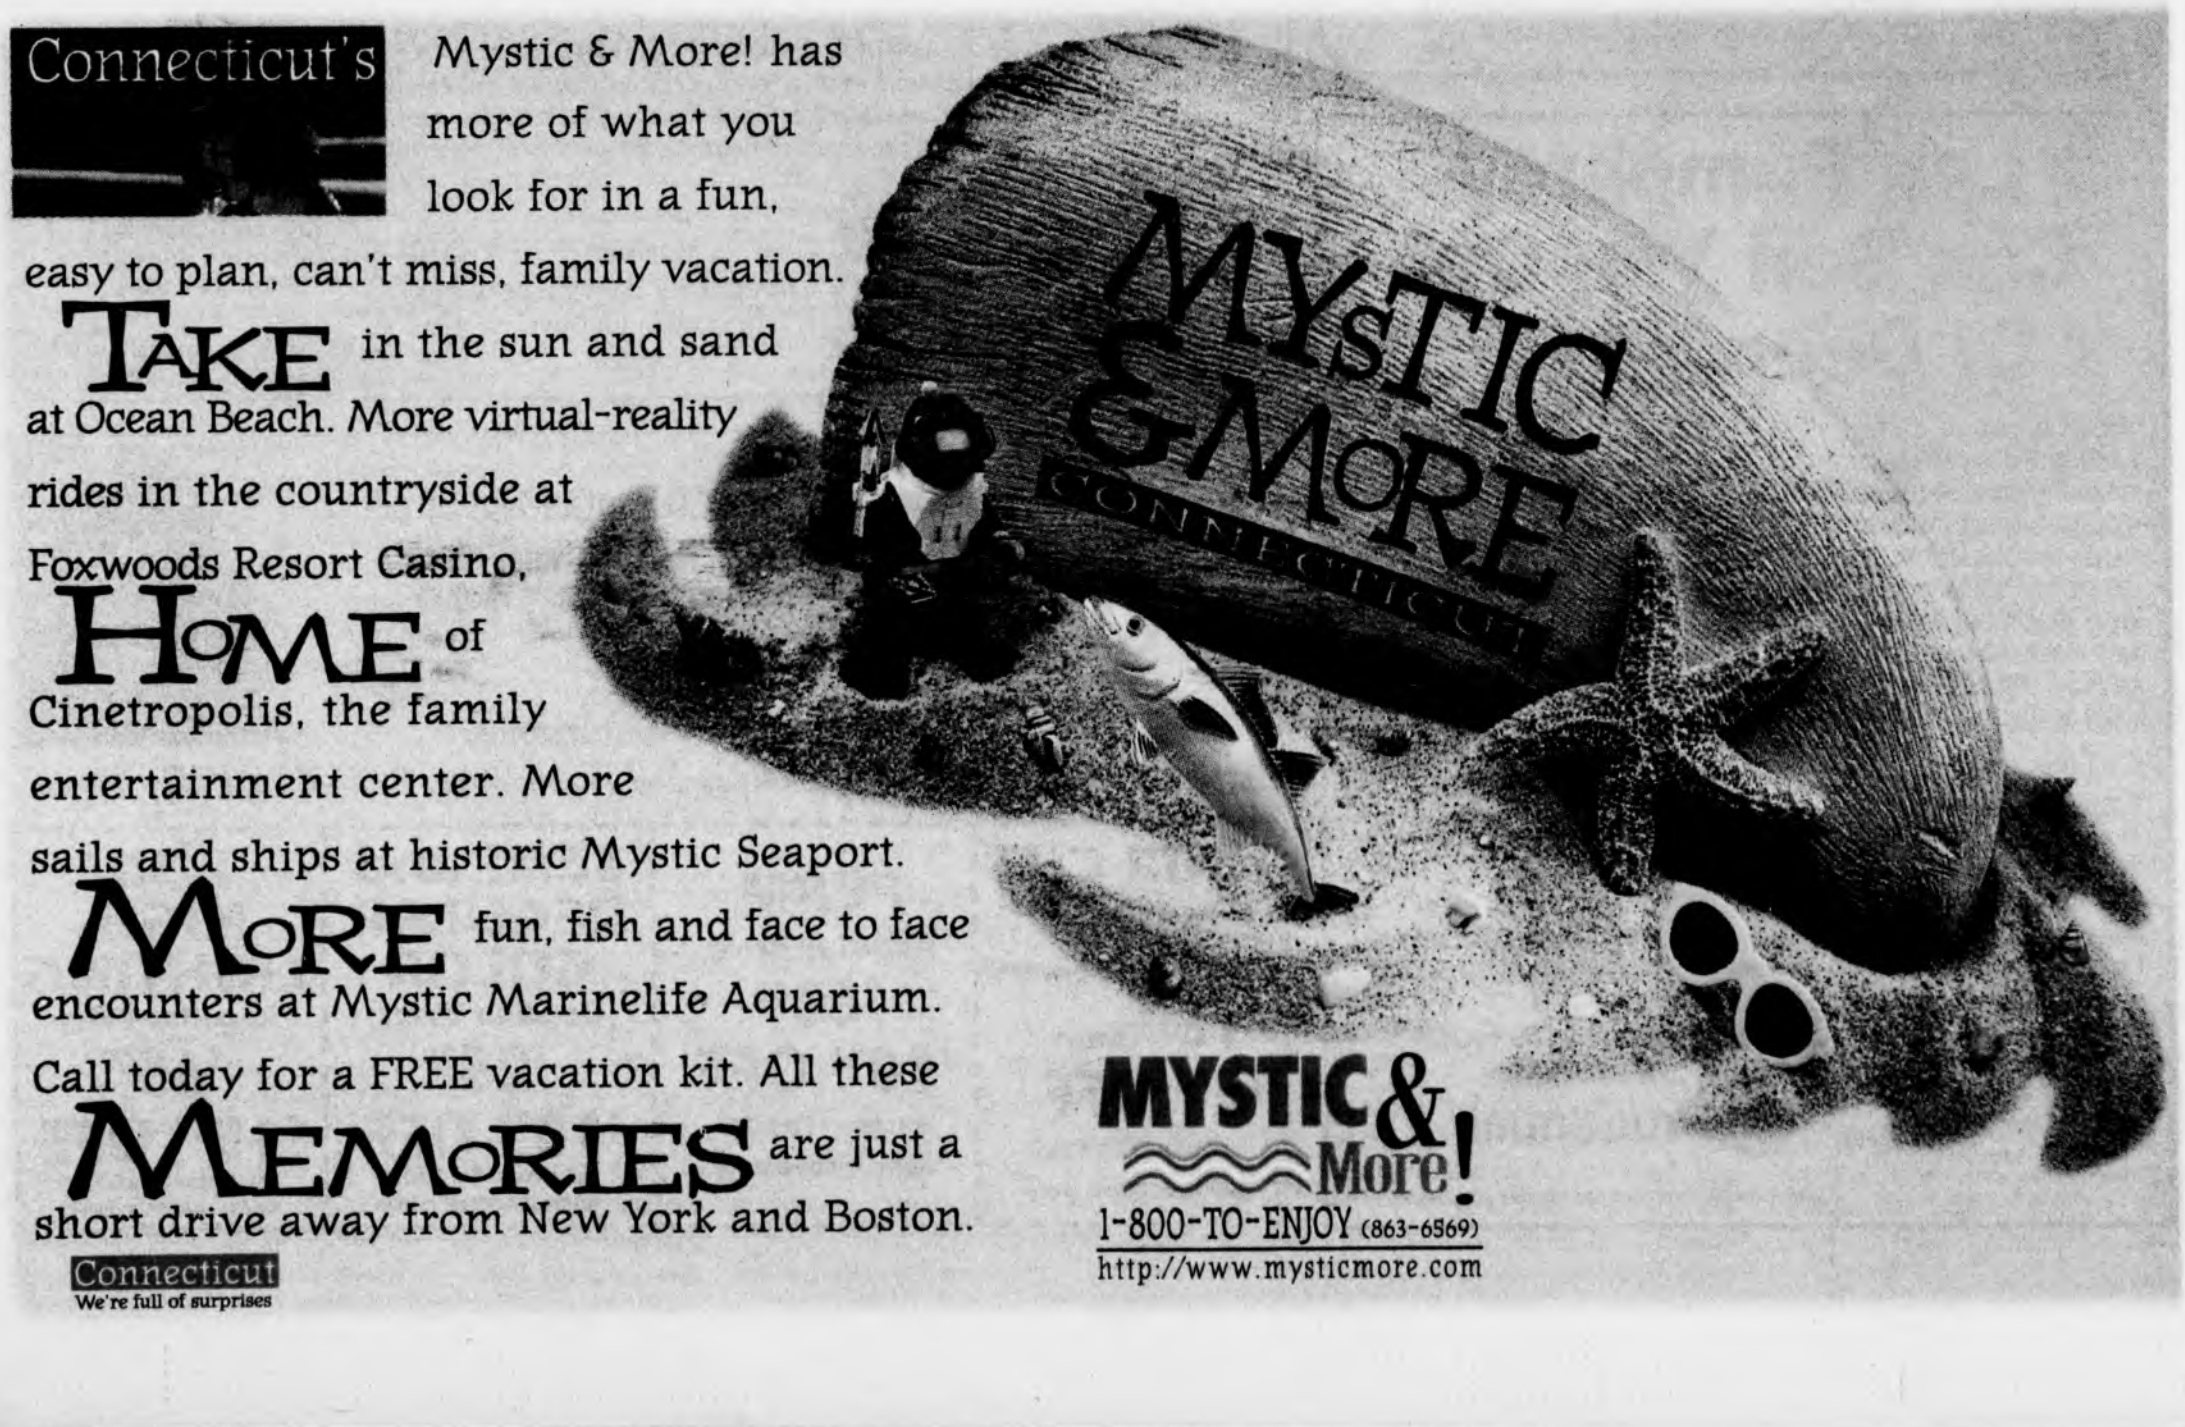
Descend the steep wooden stairway into the captain's quarters to see where both captains and their buddies lived.

The two small electric lamps on either side of its cyprus and fiddleback maple walls cast a low light throughout the cabin, giving it an elegant, yet cozy feel. A small wood burning stove along the far wall adds to the mood.

Sit in Thomas's worn gray caned chair just to the right of the stairway or on benches that run along two sides of the cabin, and listen as volunteers talk about this boat's legacy. They'll share anecdotes about Hynes's daredevil spirit and how he would do whatever it took to find fish, even if it meant being out in a major winter storm or spending hours — day and night — poring over charts, then marking the depths against them, feeling whatever came up from the bottom.

One story they'll tell will be how in 1943 Hynes braved the riptides on George's Bank and brought in enough fish to fill the boat, Adventure's biggest catch.

Get a sense of just how much fish this was by touring the rest of The Old Lady. Walking down the hallway from the captain's quarters, you'll go past eight sleeping cabins on either side where the massive fish hold was. The galley at the end is where the 24 crew members slept and ate.



The Adventure is one of only five fishing schooners remaining out of the nearly 4,000 that shipbuilders constructed in Essex, a town on Route 133 just west of Gloucester. This town was once the largest shipbuilding center in America.

You can learn about these schooners at the Essex Shipbuilding Museum, located on the north side of town. They were sailed up the Essex River, then out into the Atlantic south toward Gloucester Harbor.

Be sure to make reservations to take a similar trip up the Essex River on a pontoon boat with Agawam Boat Charters or Essex River Cruises.

At the end of your day, enjoy the hospitality and charm you'll find at the numerous inns and bed and breakfasts that dot the roads along the way.

Pay Per Bag Committee Comes Armed With Education

But Program is Delayed a Year

By Melissa Boynton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Anticipating concerned citizens seeking more information about the controversial Pay as You Throw Program, committee members Arthur Lehr (chairman), John McNabb, and Selectman Merle Brown were ready at the recent educational forum.

Bags of trash sat at the end of the long conference table containing three microphones for the committee. After three participants came in the committee proceeded with their agenda despite the disappointingly low attendance.

But selectmen this week made it official — the pay per bag program will be put off a year. They hope that through more educational forums, like the one described in this story, townspeople will become entbusiastic about the program

Merle Brown began the March 13 forum by saying, "The purpose of this meeting is to educate those concerned about the program."

He then held up various see-through garbage bags which bear the names of towns around Massachusetts.

"There are 75 cities and towns across the Commonwealth that are participating successfully in the program," said Brown adding, "There is just no reason why we can't too."

He bases this belief in the success of the program on Cohasset's already impressive record of recycling.

"It is obvious to me that people in this town are already doing a good job," Brown said, "we're in the top percentage in the state." Grabbing the first of the three bags from the conference table he adds, "But we can do better."

He pulled a large pile of recyclable items from the bag which including toys that could have been put into the "Boutique", several cardboard boxes and many sheaves of white paper.

"I don't think people are aware of all of the things that are recyclable these days," he concludes.

Arthur Lehr then passed out pamphlets which were generated by Brown on his home PC. It states the basic facts about the program which are:

> 'Unit pricing is part of many things — water, electric, gas. Why not trash removal?'
> — Arthur Lehr, recycling committee.

- Every bag of trash that is thrown away represents a cost to the town of Cohasset. It costs the town approximately $75 per ton to dispose of our trash. The proposed Pay as You Throw system will pay for half this cost. The other half is paid by property taxes.
- The premise of the program is that people who generate larger quantities of trash pay more for disposal than those who generate very little. People who recycle pay less for trash disposal and do not subsidize those who choose not to recycle.
- Special bags will be made available at local stores (TBD), DPW Garage and the RTF. Only the special bags will be accepted at the recycling transfer facility. You have the option of recycling at no cost many things you may now be throwing away. This system provides an incentive to reduce the amount of material you throw away.
- There are two bag sizes — 33 gallons which holds up to 25 lbs. of trash and 20 gallons which holds up to 15 lbs. of trash. They come in packs of 10. The 33-gallon pack will sell for $10, the 20-gallon will sell for $5. The stickers will cost 50 cents and would be used when disposing of large items that would not fit into the bag, for instance plastic toys.

It is the hope of the committee that by recycling more the cost to SEMASS can be reduced.

"If the cost to SEMASS is reduced, the budget for trash removal can be reduced and that money can be put elsewhere," Brown said.

The reason the committee aimed for a May start date is because that is when the existing RTF permit stickers expire. They also wanted to take advantage of the Dept. of Environmental Protection's grant.

"We (as a town) have been offered a grant of $4,600 to be used towards the purchase of the bags," Brown said, "and we're just not certain that we will be given those moneys next year." They realized that they had their work cut out for them if they are going to meet that May deadline.

"We realize that there is a big demand for education on this program, that's why we came with pamphlets in hand."

Committee member Lehr doesn't understand why this concept is so foreign to people.

"Unit pricing is part of many things — water, electric, gas," said Lehr, "why not trash removal?"

Large Field Expected For Annual 10K

By-the-Sea Race Set For April 6

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Spring officially arrived last Friday, but runners participating in the 21st Annual Cohasset Roadrace By-the-Sea 10K, the change of season won't be here until April 6.

The race begins at 1 p.m., in Cohasset Village on North Main Street. For the second year in a row, Herb Elliot, the great Australian miler who won the gold medal at 1,500 meters in the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome, will serve as the race's grand marshall.

The race has long been recognized as one of the most scenic courses in Massachusetts, let alone the South Shore. The certified 6.2-mile route, which features some of Cohasset's most picturesque scenery, has been recognized by New England Runner as one of the top-20 routes among the races in the six states.

"The beauty of the town and natural beauty of the course is an attraction," said race director Roy Fitzsimmons. "I think the race has lasted this long because we focus on what we can do for the runners."

Local businesses have also played a big part in the race's history and this year is no exception. More than 50 sponsors have come forth with donations and prizes.

"The involvement of the community has been the lifeblood of the race," Fitzsimmons said. "It's a real community event."

The race is popular locally, but made a difference at the international level last year. Sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, the 1996 race raised $8,500. The money was used to complete a list distributed by the United Nations. The list described what was needed to eradicate polio in Kenya. That goal has been the pledge of Rotary Club International.

The local donation completed the list and the Cohasset Rotary Club was honored with a visit and banquet at the Charter House by the deputy ambassador to Kenya.

"It was pretty incredible," Fitzsimmons said.

The size of the race's field generally can't be predicted because the majority of entrants post-register on the day of the event. As of Tuesday, 300 entries had been received for the race and another 50 for the walk, which begins at 10 a.m., at Sandy Beach.

Fitzsimmons said weather plays a big part in determining the size of the field. "We're hoping for a good day with little or no wind."

A clear, cool day almost guarantees a large field. Last year nearly 1,200 runners competed, with no more than half of them pre-registering.

The loop course starts on North Main Street, proceeds past Kimball's By The Sea and takes a sharp left onto Atlantic Ave., where homes are nestled at the end of long driveways, concealed by the woods on both sides of the street.

Near the two-mile mark runners emerge from the shade and make their way along the seaside section of the course, passing Sandy Beach and towards the rolling Jerusalem Road section.

Runners stride past scenery resembling subjects of Norman Rockwell works, including Sandy Beach and breathtaking views of the Atlantic Ocean.

Orange Crush Gives Wrestlers Offseason Alternative

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Are you a wrestler, or ever wanted to be one?

If so, the Orange Crush Wrestling Club is your answer to limitless opportunities on the mats.

The biggest club of its kind on the South Shore and arguably in Massachusetts, Orange Crush provides coaching and competition for wrestlers who are new to the sport and champion-calibre grapplers who want to get a leg up on their competition during the winter season.

The club has been received well among local wrestlers. One only has to look at the enrollment numbers to realize a serious, summer wrestling club was in demand in the South Shore.

After coaching a squad of 20 last summer, the enrollment took a gigantic leap to what head coach Mike Kenney believes will be an eventual 125 members from at least 17 different towns by the beginning of April.

Among the wrestlers in the club, 14 are South Sectional champions, seven are State winners and 10 placed in the New England championship.

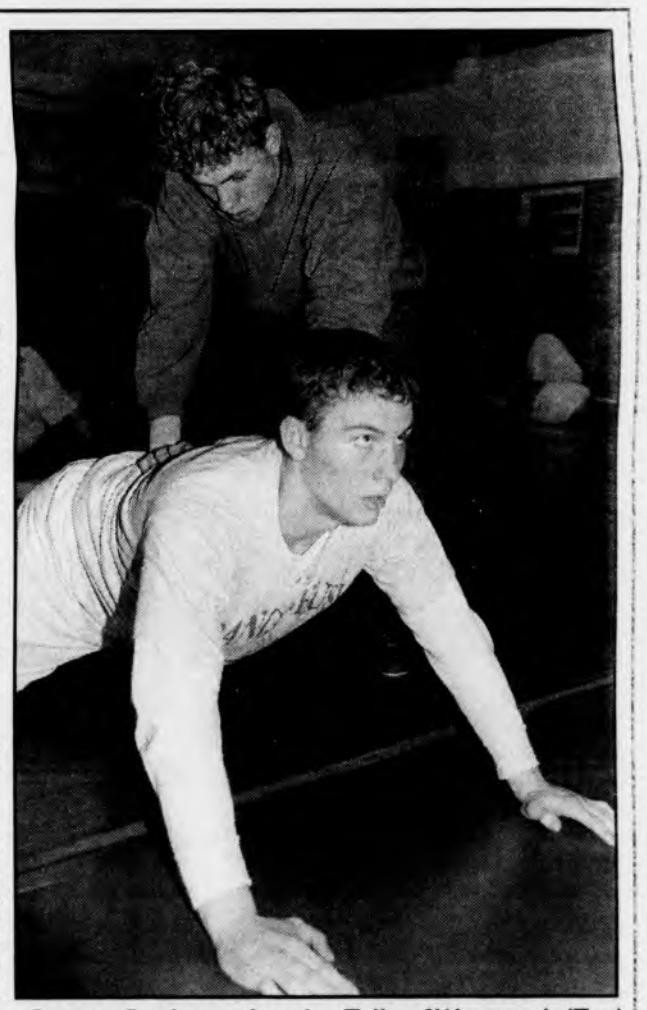
The club isn't without a local flavor. Heading the group is Kevin Duffy, who this winter put together a monster season, culminating with the All-State championship, the first in Cohasset High's history. Division 3 South Sectional champion Justin Buckley is a member, as well as Mike Baird.

The squad is loaded with elite wrestlers, but the doors are open at Hingham High, the official home of the club, for novices as well. Practices are held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8:30 p.m., for anyone from junior-high age through college.

Kenney said wrestlers who don't have a high-school program during the winter season can petition the MIAA and compete for a local school that does.

The club will more than prepare a budding wrestler for the school season and sharpen the skills of the more experienced athletes.

"When you go to these (summer) tournaments you're wrestling the equivalent of two full high-school seasons," Kenney explained. "That gives you an extra 100 matches over opponents you'll wrestle during the (school) season."



Kenney, who hails from Pittsburgh, PA., attended Clemson University where he wrestled on the school's varsity squad. In fact, the club was named for Clemson's school nickname.

"It was a name that kind of jumps out at you and the kids liked that," Kenney said.

Kenney made the most of his talent on the mat and is eager to continue sharing his experiences in developing local wrestlers. Wrestling in the power belt of the sport in the United States, Kenney knows the effort that goes into succeeding at wrestling in the region.

"I've been there and gone through

Skippers Headed For Baseball Ride

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last year the Cohasset High baseball team earned a berth in the state tournament. The Skippers' accomplishment marked the first such entry into the tournament in 24 years. Led by a trio of seniors, Cohasset nonetheless were driven by a corps of underclassmen.

This year, Cohasset has 11 returning lettermen and a solid crop of four seniors, all of whom have a legitimate chance to be South Shore League All-Stars. There is no reason to doubt the Skippers in their quest for a second consecutive spot in the tourney.

Rob Buckley was a sparkplug last year for the team. It seemed as though, whenever the squad needed a key hit, "Buck" would deliver. He saw time at both designated hitter and catcher and should do the same this year. With a strong arm and excellent defensive skills, Buckley is a solid backstop. But it is his bat that makes it impossible to keep him out of the lineup.

Grant Emde, a four-year varsity player, will undoubtedly be in center field for the Skippers this year. With lightning speed, a solid arm and a quick bat, Emde was elected to the All-League squad. Even more is expected of him this year. His leadoff ability is among the best in the league and his quickness in center field makes nearly every fly ball a sure out.

Joe Magner is another senior who has done good things on the diamond for Cohasset. After a hiatus during his sophomore year, Magner rejoined the squad last season without missing a beat. Possibly the best baserunner on the team, Magner used his rocket arm both at third base and on the mound. His powerful bat should make him a lock in the meat of the lineup.

Kevin McKenna hit .431 last season and also was chosen for the All-Star team. Nearly impossible to strike out, McKenna was the team's best hitter last year and, although this year's crew will give him a run for his money, shows no signs of relinquishing the title. McKenna made one memorable play in the last game of the year, diving to his right to miraculously spear a line drive. A team leader, McKenna should have a monster year.

With this nucleus of four seniors, the Skippers once again are strong in the underclassmen department. Infielder Pat Hurley is the only junior, but he brings speed and a quick bat to the team. Hurley will be used primarily as a second baseman, but could see time elsewhere. The crop of sophomores is quite strong this year, as at least seven will see time with the parent club.

Greg Taylor will be playing in his third season as a member of the varsity and continues to get better every year. Hitting third in the lineup last year, Taylor was also a force on the mound. This year he will vie for the coveted spot of staff ace. He is joined by classmate and battery mate Mike Rossi. Rossi started for varsity last year, too, and, once he found his hitting stroke, brought another strong bat to the lineup. Rossi is an excellent opposite-field hitter and has had his baptism by fire.

Big Al Schwerin will compete for the third-base job this year and he brings another presence to the lineup. "Big Al" is an outstanding contact hitter and a sure thing in the field. Sophomore Sean Parkinson was last year's JV catcher and his skills behind the plate improved greatly by the end of the year. He was just short of batting .300 on the season on JV and should bring his hitting skills to the varsity squad this year.

Ben Ketchum also lettered last year, but pitched enough for the JV to record a no-hitter against Hull. He stroked the ball at a .441 clip for JV last season and looks to build on that this year. He is joined by another member of the pitching staff, Jim O'Sullivan. O'Sullivan throws consistent strikes and lets the fielders make the plays. His glove should earn him a little time in the infield as well.

John-Paul Laugelle will bring his talent to the ball club this year, too. A first and third baseman, Laugelle also can be used as a pitcher and should help out CHS with his slugging this year. Freshman Joe Pergola showed his stuff last year as an eighth grader, winning several big games for the Skippers and exhibiting a vicious fastball and a biting curve. Pergola will get better as he grows and promises to be an integral piece of the program for four more years.

Cohasset's baseball team looks to be deeper this year than it has been in a long time. The pitching staff has three strong hurlers in Magner, Taylor and Pergola, and a bullpen full of hungry pitchers. Head coach Ron Ford guided the team to the Promised Land last season, and has an even more talented team this time around. The Skippers should be in for a good ride.

the successes and failures," he said. "I've done the things these kids are doing now. I want to give the knowledge I have to these kids and help them avoid the wrestling mistakes I made competition, as well as the things that proved successful."

Kenney is quick to credit Hingham High Athletic Director Bill Barges for providing the "great facilities" and "for giving these kids an opportunity to compete."

And the work put in by assistant coach Eric Burns, who like Kenney is a Weymouth High assistant, has been worth its weight in gold. Along with Burns' solid coaching, he offers the kids much more.

"Eric's a good role model for the kids," Kenney said. "He's an accomplished freestyle wrestle. The kids respect him and like him a lot."

This summer promises to be a busy one for the club with several tentative opportunities in the works. The club will be participating in 26 tournaments in nine states, including the National Freestyle Tournament in Fargo, North Dakota.

Kenney also plans on bringing 10 to 12 All-American college wrestlers to practices to conduct clinics. He is also considering putting on a wrestling exhibition at the Marshfield Fair in August and holding a camp next summer.

Other towns throughout the state have heard of Orange Crush and are anxious to improve their own wrestling clubs. Natick, Lowell, Fall River, Framingham and Franklin are only a few of the towns who have expressed an interest in forming a summer dual-meet league with Orange Crush as a member.

"With numbers I have," Kenney said, "I can pretty much produce five teams."

And with the talent the club already has on its roster, newcomers can only get better.

Kings Win Hockey Tourney

The South Shore Kings of the Boston Metropolitan Hockey League became champions of the world at the Pee-Wee Hockey Tournament of Quebec at the Colisee Arena in Quebec City, Canada. Two local Scituate youths, Jack Greeley and Ryan Whitney, are members of the team, along with Brendan Bryne of Cohasset and Ben Spitz of Norwell.

These 13- and 14-year-olds played in front of a crowd of more than 10,000 to clinch the championship with an overtime goal and a 2-1 victory over the Toronto Richmond Hill Stars. The Kings fought their way through ten days of competition involving 93 teams from 14 countries around the world. They defeated the only other New England team, their rivals, the Middlesex Islanders, with a 3-1 victory in the semi-finals. They also defeated St. Catherines of Ontario and Zurich, Switzerland on their way to the championship.

It has been 18 years since an American team has won this historic tournament, which has seen scores of Pee-Wee participants go on to the NHL and WHL. The game was televised on TSN (Total Sports Network) of Canada and should be re-aired on ESPN2 at a later date.

Road Race

The race, however, is hardly a sight-seeing event. Jerusalem Road is testimony to that.

The most demanding section of the course is also the most deceiving. While no one hill is all too tough, runners must contend with a half dozen rolling hills and a major climb just past the half-way point. More than a few times the race for first place has been decided on Jerusalem Road as strong hill runners gain a definite advantage.

"It's a challenging course with some rolling hills beginning at three miles," Fitzsimmons said.

Runners face their single biggest test when they turn left from Jerusalem Road onto Forest Avenue and head up the toughest climb on the course. Once at the top of the hill, the road rolls down to North Main Street. The final mile and a half is mainly flat and fast, finishing in front of town hall on the opposite side of the starting line.

Many runners who compete in the Boston Marathon on Patriot's Day enter Cohasset to get a bead on their fitness level heading into the 26.2 miler from Hopkinton to Boston. Runners are able to see how they handle hills and pacing, two musts if they hope to run well at Boston.

The race is USATF-NE sanctioned and also offers a walk, beginning at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. Runners can obtain applications at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shops or Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Pre-registration deadline is April 1 and the entry fee is $12. Post-registration is $15.

Recreation Notes

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with preschool age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The preschool program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

'Girls Night' Set

"Girls Night Out" will be held Friday, April 4, for ages 5 to 11 from 6:15 to 8:15 p.m.

Come join Ruthann, Susie, Jan, Tiffany and George for a fun-filled evening of obstacle course, gymnastics, make your own pizza and bowling. Everyone receives something for participation.

Additional prizes will be given out to top bowlers and winners of the obstacle course. Cost for this evening is $15, must be pre-paid and no drop-ins. Limited space.

CYB Coaches Meeting

Cohasset Youth Baseball will hold a coaches meeting for Farm League, Minor League and Major Leagues March 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Deerhill School. Anyone interested in coaching a team should attend. The draft for Farm and Minor Leagues will also be held.

For more information, call Bob Moody at 383-0385.

Little League Parade, May 3

The Cohasset Little League will hold its annual opening day parade Saturday, May 3. The parade starts at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., Cohasset, at 8:15 a.m. and progresses up Main Street to Barnes Field.

The Deer Hill School Band will lead the parade, followed by an excess of 300 players, a fire truck with last yearÕs champions and our special guest, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. We expect more than 1,000 town residents to participate in the parade and ceremony.

Homework and Time Management

Deer Hill School Council will present an evening discussion for parents entitled Homework and Time Management: Balancing the Fulcrum Between Work and Play, Wed. April 2 at 7 p.m. in the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

Hear results of surveys from parents and students. Participate in an interactive discussion led by a panel of teachers, parents and students. Learn valuable survival skills. Osgood third grade parents are also welcome. There will be refreshments and a door prize.

Teen Center 'Wizard' Benefit

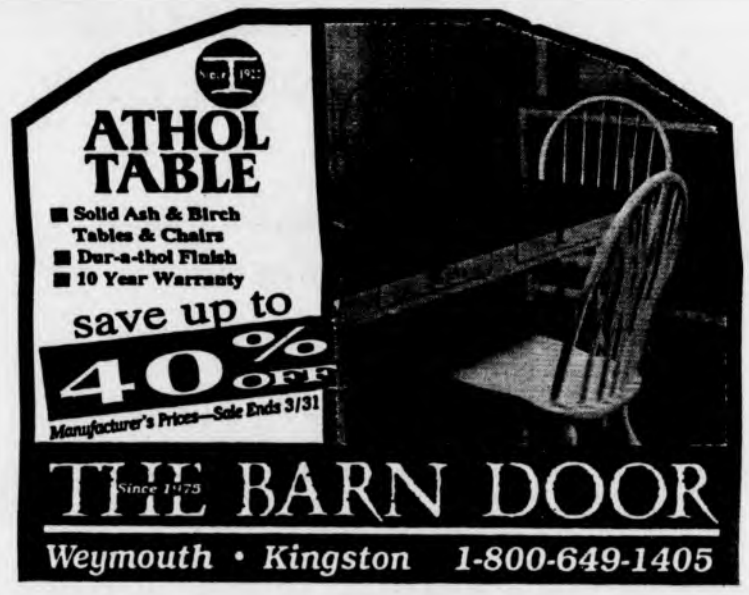
Wednesday, April 9 at 7 p.m. the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present the musical "The Wizard of Oz" in the auditorium of the Scituate High School to benefit the Cohasset Teen Center. The tickets are $10, and are available from Betsy Connolly, 383-1248, the recreation department or at the door.

Attend this fabulous show and support the many talented young actors and actresses from Cohasset. The Cohasset Teen Center appreciates community support.

School Council Elections

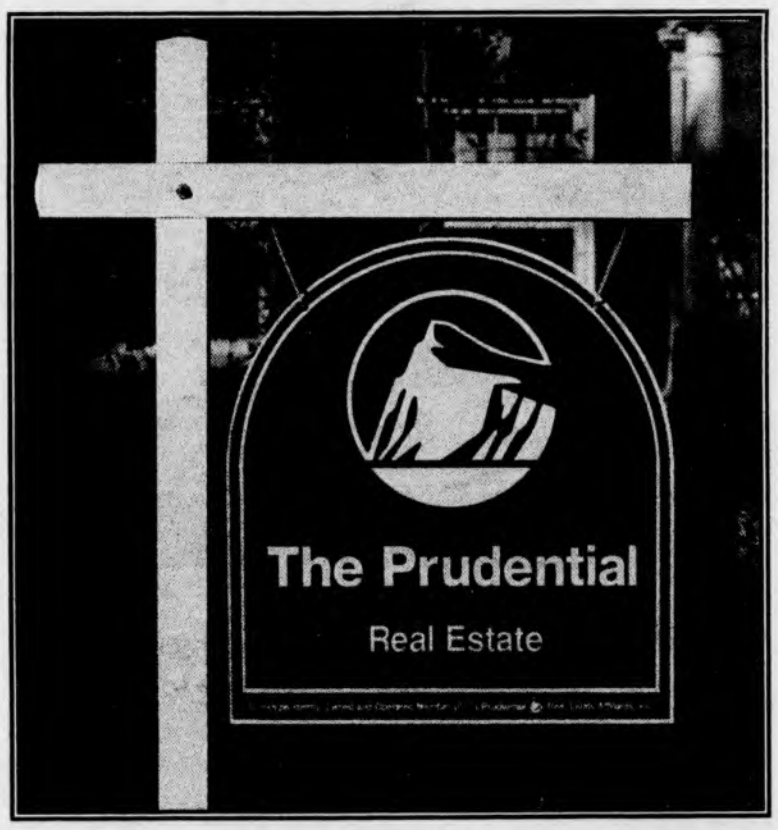
Each of the three public schools in Cohasset have a School Council made up of the principal, teachers, parents and a community representative. The councils are charged with formulating a school improvement plan, and meets monthly. Parent representatives are elected for two-year terms by the parent body for each of the schools.

Anyone interested in serving as a parent representative should submit their name and a paragraph about themselves and their interest in serving on the Council to the PSO Nominating Committee, C/O Sarah Markert, 11 Linden Circle, no later than Tuesday, April 1. The election is April 10 through 17.



If you have questions about the process or would like to learn more about the positions: Sarah Markert (6124), Grace Evans (1163), Kathleen Horigan (6690), Tomi Bukowski (6771), Sarah Pease (1406) or Rosemary O'Connell (6562).

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Jane Flaherty



I would like to nominate Jane Flaherty as student of the month for a number of reasons. First, she donates her time to help behind the scenes in many ways, for many projects. She is a mainstay in the production of Whispers and Shadows, staying long after school to work on typing, layout and printing. She not only performs, but also has done important clerical and organizational work for The Mikado. In all endeavors, she is efficient, reliable, and positive. Most of all, however, Jane is nice. She says positive things to and about people; she encourages others to succeed, and she is at the same time shy about her own excellent qualities. She is a gift to all who work with her. Elle est précieuse.

Investing: A reading list for all skill levels

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Individual investors, new and seasoned alike, often rely on the advice of financial newspapers and periodicals and the opinions of their brokers when making an investment decision. And then, of course, the musings of friends: "I bought shares in XYZ Corp. because my uncle's boss's best friend said they have a big contract in the works."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

The problem with this kind of approach isn't necessarily that it doesn't work — I know plenty of people who have done quite well by it — but that it keeps investors in the dark about the risks they are taking.

Many of these investors have large gaps in their understanding of financial markets. They may have bought shares of Microsoft Corp. when founder and president Bill Gates began to appear on magazine covers, figuring the software company was turning into a technology blue chip like IBM. Meanwhile, most couldn't tell you what events could hurt the company's earnings growth or how a change in interest rates might affect their investment.

The more you understand what's at stake, the better able you are to decide what the best investment would be for you — perhaps municipal bonds would be more appropriate for you than Microsoft shares. I know of people who have put the whole of their savings into the stock market, apparently without concern that a sudden political or economic event could trigger a bear market and diminish their investment significantly. Their confidence comes from the last six years of more or less steady gains in the Standard & Poor's 500 Index, a broad market measure.

If you are guilty of such behavior — and you don't have the time or inclination to take Financial Markets 101 at your local community college — then you can remedy your shortcomings with the following bare-bones reading list. My first editor made a couple of these must-reads for me when I was an intern at Bloomberg Business News, and I've kept them in my library.

The first book to grab explains the most basic concepts of finance: "Understanding Wall Street" by Jeffrey B. Little and Lucien Rhodes and published by McGraw Hill Inc. This book doesn't assume you know the difference between a bond's coupon and its yield — or even that you understand what a stock is. It lays out the investment ABCs, explaining how to read a company's financial statement, how to calculate a bond's yield to maturity, how to trade stock, how stock options work, how Wall Street got its name, why investors buy gold and silver, and how to sell stocks "short" — among other things. You should be aware that this book places a greater emphasis on stocks than on bonds and other investment tools. The writing is clear and succinct and, what's more, it's illustrated.

Having grasped the basics, you can move on to a classic that dwells on investment philosophy. Benjamin Graham's "The Intelligent Investor," published by Harper Collins, has survived the test of time. First published in 1949, the book outlines an investment philosophy most would now consider conservative; in short, Graham advises investors to buy shares in companies with what he calls good underlying value and to hold them for years. Graham pounds home the idea that to buy a company's stock is to buy part of the business. Never mind what the Dow Jones is doing. Never mind the company's short-term outlook and performance.

Do you, based on real information and not on tips or hunches, believe this company is well positioned to prosper in coming years? That's the only reason to own the stock, according to Graham. "The Intelligent Investor" offers methods of analyzing companies based on the belief that slow and steady wins the race. A writer and a teacher, among other things, Graham was a mentor to the famous investor Warren Buffet, whose company, Berkshire Hathaway, has made millions of dollars using a similar investment strategy.

The next step might be to get an idea of the context within which these investing forces and strategies work. Michael Lewis, the author of "Liar's Poker," is no market guru — nor does he proclaim himself to be — but he understands that what we think of as "the market" is, for better and for worse, a collection of people. Lewis, who worked at Salomon Brothers in the 1980s, reports not just on Wall Street culture, but also on how it affects the movement of billions of dollars every day. Conversational, fluid, and funny —Wall Streeters are fond of fraternity-like initiation pranks — Lewis's story follows his stint at the firm as he witnesses the birth of the mortgage bond, the rise of the junk bond, and finally the stock market crash of 1987. All of these events are the more poignant because they precede Salomon chairman John Gutfrieund's downfall at Salomon Brothers. The book is one part Wall Street history and one part personal memoir — and a lot of fun to read.

That's a good start: a mix of hard fact and useful perspective. If you have a taste for more, let me recommend the following:

"The Only Investment Guide You'll Ever Need," by Andy Tobias. will expand your idea of what an investment really is — saving 10 cents on a roll of toilet paper counts because it can be used to buy more toilet paper, or even invest it. Tobias's mantra of "a penny saved is a penny earned" takes on other creative forms, and his prose style is as droll as Lewis's.

Frederic Smoler, an economic historian and an editor of Audacity magazine, recommends James P. O'Shaughnessy's "What Works on Wall Street: A Guide to the Best-Performing Investment Strategies of All Time." Shaughnessy tests popular strategies and conventional wisdom about the markets using financial history dating back to 1950.

Benjamin Graham's 'The Intelligent Investor,' published by Harper Collins, has survived the test of time. First published in 1949, the book outlines an investment philosophy most would now consider conservative.

Richard Brealey's "An Introduction To Risk and Return From Common Stocks" and John D. Brown's "101 Years on Wall Street: An Investor's Almanac" are a couple more of Smoler's favorites. And I keep the easy-to-use and complete dictionary of financial terms "Barron's Dictionary of Finance and Investment Terms" on my desk to explain, say, what a "cushion bond" or a "rising bottoms" are.

And, of course, you can find shelves of other investment books in the business section of most book stores.

Eight Weeks to Optimum Health

"A proven program for taking full advantage of your body's natural healing power." Following the guidelines set forth in Dr. Andrew Weil's book "Spontaneous Healing," a support group will be forming to pursue OPTIMUM HEALTH! Each week of Dr. Weil's approach includes five basic areas of focus. There will be an assigned "Project" which includes such things as studying the local water quality and taking a steam bath. The second area concerns "Diet" where we will explore cutting back on meat and oil, and increasing fruits and vegetables. The "Exercise" component will focus on a gradually increasing amount of time for walking each day. We'll also be attending to our "Mental/Spiritual" health through such things as deep breathing, "news fasts" and bringing flowers into our day. And finally, there will be an "Optional" challenge including such things as vitamin and plant supplements, tonics for specific minor health problems and forms of fasting.

Rev. Gary Ritts will be facilitating the support group to begin its nine weekly sessions Wednesday, April 16, 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. It is recommended that each participant have their own copy of Dr. Weil's book, "Spontaneous Healing" (which contains the eight-week regimen and is available in paperback). His latest book, "Eight Weeks to Optimum Health," (hardback only) will be used as a supporting text. The program is free of charge and is open to the public. If you have any questions, would like a brochure or would like to register for the course, please stop by the church or call Rev. Ritts at 383-0345.

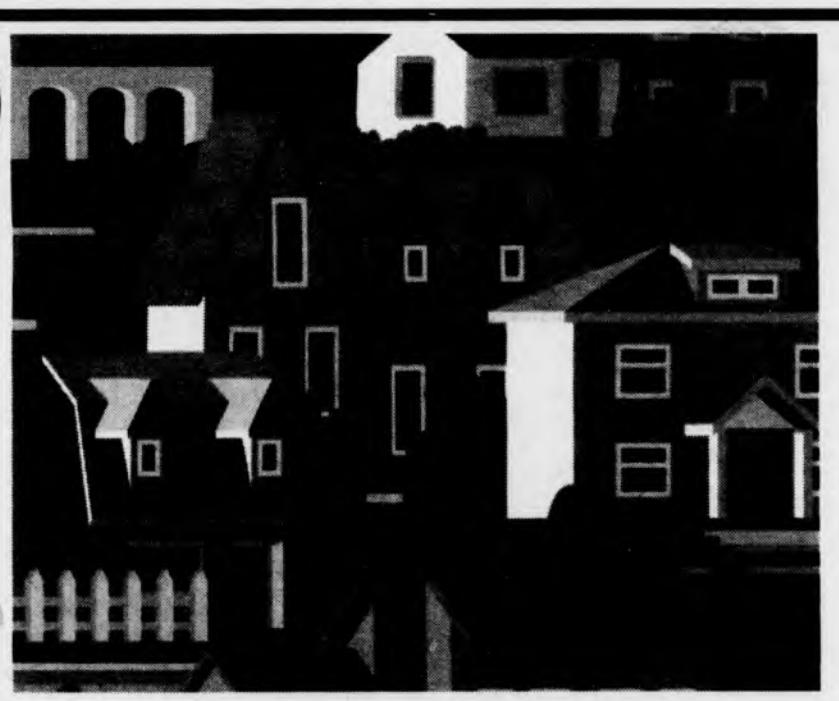
Great Vigil of Easter

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., will celebrate the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service Saturday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. The worship is dramatic, beginning with the church in darkness. Candles are lit and at the moment when resurrection is proclaimed the lights are turned on signifying that the resurrected Jesus is the light that leads the world out of darkness.

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, March 30, will be at 8 and 10 a.m. with the full choir and choristers. Both services, Eucharist with sermon, will be in the church.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church on Maundy Thursday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following the Eucharist will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time — breads, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits, and milk and honey!



A 24-hour Prayer Watch will begin Maundy Thursday at 3 p.m. Parishioners sign up for an hour throughout the day to be in church to read, pray, just to be quiet or meditate. It recalls the words of Psalm 130: "my soul waits for the LORD more than those who watch for the morning, more than those who watch for the morning." It is a powerful experience of prayer each minute throughout the day bringing the church into Good Friday.

Good Friday worship begins at noon March 28 with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book liturgy begins at 1 p.m. A service for children takes place at 2 p.m. followed by a half hour of quiet reflection and prayer to end the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross. A number of parishioners and the youth group will participate in the 20-mile Good Friday walk raising money to assist economically poor areas of the South, particularly in rural Mississippi.

Wellspring Walkfest Slated

Tired of the cold? Picture a June day, a long deep, low tide, Nantasket Beach, an invigorating or leisurely walk from the pavilion to "R" Street and back. It's the Wellspring Annual Walkfest scheduled for Saturday, June 14. The only beach walk on the South Shore, maybe even in the state, or universe, and all are invited. Bring your bridge group, or your baseball team; your extended family or your wedding party. Pay a fee to enter or fill a pledge sheet. We just want you, all of you, to come. Celebrate Wellspring and celebrate summer. Think about it, write it on your calendar, and your toes will start to feel warmer already.

Cruising Lecture to Benefit CHS ExCeL Program

Saturday, April 5, at 8 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, Walton Hall, the Cohasset Yacht Club will present an illustrated slide and chart lecture by Bim Holt who cruised for four weeks on the Hudson River, Erie Canal, Lake Ontario, St. Lawrence Seaway, Richelieu River and Lake Champlain.

All proceeeds will benefit the ExCeL alternate school program at Cohasset High School. The ExCel (Experimental Center for Learning) program is an interdisciplinary accredited program for students in grades 10 to 12 offering unique marine experimential activities and traditional coursework in science, social studies and English. Students may enroll in the program for one, two or three years. Course work includes field studies and lab work in fundamental principles of oceanography, physical science, navigation, aquatic environmantal science and nautical science. Outdoor activities include learning to crew and care for a traditional pulling boat. Students also learn the fundamentals of boat building by working on current wooden boat projects.

This is the second year that the Cohasset Yacht Club has presented an illustrated slide cruising lecture open to the public to benefit the ExCeL program. Advance reservations may be made by telephone before April 1 by calling Meg Bertolami at 383-2968, $8 for adults and $4 for students under 18. Unreserved tickets at the door will cost $10 for adults and $5 for students under 18.

Secret Donor Offers $10,000 To Carousel

An anonymous donor has issued a challenge on behalf of the Friends of the Paragon Carousel, according to board President Susan Fleck, who announced the offer at a recent benefit dinner held at Tosca Restaurant in Hingham. The benefactor will adopt a horse for a donation of $10,000, if another horse is spoken for within 30 days. Horses may be adopted by individuals, families, clubs, businesses or any group wishing to support the restoration of the historic carousel at Nantasket Beach. A brass plaque commemorating the adoption will be placed at the foot of each horse for the thousands of carousel visitors to see.

"There is a stable-full of horses awaiting adoption," Fleck said. "We believe in single-parent families, group homes, even corporate parenting. Let's not let this challenge go unmet."

The Adopt-a-Horse Program is part of a multi-faceted capital fund-drive currently being undertaken by the Friends for the purpose of retiring the debt incurred in the purchase of the carousel and to meet the terms of the Massachusetts Historical Commission $100,000 challenge grant recently awarded to the organization.

More information on the Adopt-a-Horse Program may be obtained by calling 925-0472.

New Courses at Art Center

Spring courses and workshops begin the week of April 5 at the South Shore Art Center including several exciting new opportunities. To fit into everyone's hectic schedule, courses are offered in four-, six- and eight-week sessions and workshops are offered for one, two and three days.

For Young Artists offerings include instruction in sculpting and printing and for teens a figure drawing workshop and a painting and printing studio. A special afternoon for families, True Colors, is planned for Sunday, May 4, where children can try a variety of activities and are sure to find their niche. April Vacation Art Plus Camp and summer camp registration is also offered.

Adult courses include drawing, figure drawing, oil pastel and paint stick, collage/assemblage, pastel painting, watercolor, clay, photography, Chinese brush painting and mono-printing. Special workshops include hand coloring black and white photographs, large format photography, technical rendering, pastel weekend workshop and outdoor watercolor and painting.

Courses and workshops are available for ages Pre-K through adult and for all levels and abilities. The center is located at 119 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset. For a complete brochure or to register by mail call the Art Center today at (617) 383-ARTS (2787). It may be hard to believe, but spring is just around the corner and classes fill quickly!

Spring Lectures with Women Artists

The South Shore Art Center is offering a series of lectures by award-winning women artists April 16, 30 and May 14. April 16 Catherine McCarthy presents her layered paintings, work formed by a strong connection to childhood memories and portraying the interconnection between the physical, intellectual and spiritual experience. April 30 Emily Eveleth discusses her best-known work, a series of heroically scaled paintings of doughnuts, celebrated as being both majestic and funny. Amanda Tuttle, a watercolorist, will share her trompe l'oeil paintings inspired by her love of antiques and found objects.

Each lecture begins at 7 p.m. and you may attend each lecture for $7 members or $10 non-members or purchase the entire series for $15 members and $20 non-members. The lectures will be held at the South Shore Art Center on 119 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset.

Thank You!

We at the Cohasset Mariner would like to thank Kimball's Jane McCoombs and her staff for graciously (and deliciously) hosting our 1997 Annual Citizen of the Year Award, this year honoring Rev. Gary Ritts.

Cohasset's 'Middle' Students Get Their Own School

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset joins the middle school movement to better serve preadolescent students, the age when many students fall through the cracks while their futures are being molded.

In September, the Cohasset Junior/Senior High School will open with the new name of "Cohasset Middle-High School."

In December 1995, the school committee determined that grades seven and eight had to stay at the high school for financial reasons. However, the committee agreed with plans to keep grades seven and eight separate from grades nine to 12 by creating a middle school. The faculty will be separate but the administration will be shared by both schools.

"We do not want to create a mini high school but a school more appropriate for ages 11 to 13," said Curtis Collins, principal of Cohasset Junior/Senior High School.

The Cohasset Middle School teachers will be teamed to include a teacher from each core subject. Each team will share the same students and will have one mutual planning period.

"The intent is to become less developmental- and more team-centered in order to really focus on the students and their needs. This type of team teaching will provide more opportunity for interdisciplinary instruction as well," Collins said.

Plans are being made to add an advisory period into the daily schedule.

"We want to assist the students with their changes and growth. These students need someone to understand them and become their advocate. Advisors can give that support," Collins said.

The teachers will be advisors to the students in their group which will eliminate a need to increase staff.

In addition to adopting a new philosophy and consolidating faculty, the middle school will have its own athletic program and extracurricular activities. This will allow more room for advancement and achievement for the participating students. Independence from the high school will let the middle school students take control in areas that would otherwise not be an option for them.

'Middle schools acknowledge the differences emotionally, socially, intellectually, and developmentally between preadolescent and adolescent students.'
— Robert Spear, of the New England League of Middle Schools.

Grades seven and eight currently comprise the junior high part of the school. In 1967, the left wing of the building was built connecting to the main building by a hallway. The seventh- and eighth-graders spend 85 percent of their day in this wing. Lunch and gym are held in the main building.

Therefore, the change from a junior high school to a middle school will not be a physical move but a philosophical adoptment.

"Middle schools acknowledge the differences emotionally, socially, intellectually, and developmentally between preadolescent and adolescent students," said Robert Spear, executive director of the New England League of Middle Schools.

Spear sees the change from junior high schools to middle schools as much more than a name and grade level configuration but as a specific change in the way teachers and staff work with young adolescents.

Junior high schools were created in the early years of this century to serve as an expedient alternative for schooling when schools were too crowded. Students, typically from the lower class, would attend a junior high school, learn a trade and get a job while the students with a more prominent status would further their education at the high school.

Middle schools were established after World War II when educators discovered that children between the ages of 11 to 14 needed specific appropriate attention and instruction. Both schools are comprised of the same age group of children but were created for different reasons. The junior high school no longer serves as an alternative to the high school but as a preparation for the high school. However, the middle school has kept its original philosophy while adding sophisticated goals and techniques to accommodate change through the generations.

The state of Massachusetts has 44 junior high schools and 214 middle schools. The junior high school notion is progressively being replaced by the middle school. The only towns in the area with a junior high school are Weymouth and Kingston/Pembroke. Duxbury and Hull will be moving from junior/senior high schools to middle schools in September. Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield and Quincy currently have middle schools.

The middle school teachers have already begun training for the fall. Cohasset is a new member of the New England League of Middle Schools. The League is a 23-year-old nonprofit organization with close to 1,000 members. This organization focuses on helping adults work more effectively with young adolescents through professional development training. They hold conferences, workshops and seminars throughout the year in addition to visiting schools to review and help where needed.

With the location and the number of faculty remaining the same, there is no cost for this change-over at this point. There will be a cost for future professional development training to keep the team teachers current on the research and methodology of middle schools.

Lobster Lab Weathers Town Meeting Debate

Decisive Vote Gives Project Clear Sailing

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Not even accusations of using the children as "pawns for the project" could sink the "Lobster Lab" proposed for the Hagerty House on Parker Avenue at town meeting on Saturday.

The proposal survived nearly 90 minutes of debate to win with a decisive vote of 241-118. The vote sets the stage for the town to lease the former Cohasset Colonials offices to the non-profit Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation for $1 a year to establish a learning laboratory for marine biology and genetic research in the 100-year-old house.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan, speaking for the majority of selectmen, led the charge against the lobster lab and asked voters to remember why the town purchased the 2.2 acre Hagerty property, which includes the house, four years ago. He said it was to provide a recreational area and access with adequate parking to the harbor.

"It makes no sense to lease to a private organization with a pilot program with an unproven need, unproven interest

April Fools' Day Storm is No Joke

Spring Snow is a Real Record Breaker

By Alice C. Coyle and Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

Mother Nature played the biggest April Fools' trick of all this week, dumping two feet of heavy, wet snow on the South Shore.

After a sunny, Easter Sunday with temperatures well into the 60s, the spring blizzard, while well forecasted, was especially tough to take.

Heavy rains which began Monday morning, mixed and turned to wet snow by evening, burying the crocuses just starting to bloom, and turning Cohasset into a winter wonderland.

At midnight Monday, six inches of the white stuff had already fallen. During the height of the storm, most of the area experienced white-out conditions along with a spectacular lightning display and rumbling thunder — which, according to Mariner Weather Observer Robert Skilling, is not unusual in severe snow storms. By 9 a.m. Tuesday, the total was

Town Meeting Resumes Saturday

The annual town meeting resumes at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Cohasset High School gymnasium.

The nor'easter that started late Monday afternoon and continued through most of Tuesday quashed plans to hold the second and possibly third sessions of town meeting on those evenings.

Town Moderator George Marlette decided to take no chances and at about 1 p.m. on Monday, he made the decision to postpone the continuation of town meeting.

Interesting business in Saturday's session includes the following proposals: creating the position of town manager, a mechanism to recall elected officials, holiday lighting on the town common, authorizing a study to look at taking the north Cohasset water district by eminent domain, setting new water rates and constructing a new standpipe.

Cohasset's Week

Hingham-Cohasset Sewer Agreement

Town meeting overwhelming approved an intermunicipal agreement with Hingham in which Cohasset will purchase an interest in a pump station at West Corner for $540,000. Half of the cost will be paid for through property taxes if the May 3 override passes, if it fails north Cohasset sewer users will pay 100 percent of the costs.

Hingham's west corner neighborhoods are also hooking up to the Hull treatment plant.

This agreement is in connection to the north Cohasset sewer project approved at the 1995 annual town meeting. The 345 homes in north Cohasset will be hooked up via a sewer main to the treatment plant in Hull. Cohasset officials initially planned to build a pumping station in the old north Cohasset fire station but say the shared-pumping station with Hingham will save money.

"It is more economical for Cohasset to buy a share of the Hingham facility than to construct our own," sewer commission chairman Ted Guild said.

Septic Management Plan is Postponed

Health board chairman Tom Cook told town meeting on Saturday that his board's proposal to put the 1,500 non-sewered homes on a septic-system management plan is being postponed.

The plan would cost the homeowner of a $300,000 home about $177 per year in maintenance fees which would cover periodic inspections and pumping. The program would have also involved the town being able to loan money at below-market rates for septic system repairs and upgrades.

Cook stressed that the health board's intent when developing the program was to put together a town-wide plan that would protect the environment and public health and also provide equity to those whose homes would not be put on the sewer lines. Taxpayers will be asked to subsidize the north and central Cohasset sewer projects at the May 3 override. Some feel that those with septic systems will not support the override because the sewer projects do not benefit them directly.

But legality issues surrounding how the septic management plan would be financed have sidelined the program for the time being.

Health board member Kevin Ulmer said there is "no such thing as a free flush." He said the board would continue to look at programs and try to find an equitable solution.

"We hope to come back to town meeting with a proposal," he said.

Limited Septic Management Plan Okay'ed

Town meeting voters did pass a limited septic management plan required under the same court order that directs the town to upgrade and expand its sewer system. The Lily Pond and Nichols Road areas will be covered under this septic plan which will be administered by the board of health. The town will be able to offer low interest loans to those homeowners in the affected areas who must upgrade their septic systems. The town can borrow $3 million ($500,000 a year for six years) through the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust.

Adviser Dan Evans explained the subsidized loans are in exchange for the houses being subject to mandatory inspections resulting from being in a priority area.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said this program allows the town to offer some financial assistance to those homeowners.

Custodial Services Explained

The Fiscal Year 1998 budget includes money to pay for a part-time custodian at town hall. Since the retirement of long-time custodian Polly Litchfield, the town has contracted out for services. But in July, the town hall may go back to having a custodian on staff because the staff position provides more flexibility, interim-town administrator Ed McCann explained at Saturday's session of town meeting.

"The contracted services do a satisfactory job but do not provide the services that the previous custodian did," McCann said. He pointed out that there were numerous "little things" that the previous custodian did that were accepted as a matter of fact and aren't accomplished with a cleaning service that works from 4 to 6 a.m.

Selectman Nan Roth said selectmen had not made a final decision but money for 21 hours a week for a custodian or custodial services is in the budget to "give us the flexibility to make the final decision."

Martha Gjesteby, 75 Old Pasture Rd., asked that the matter be explained to town meeting on Saturday.

Town Budget Gets Nod

Town meeting approved a Fiscal Year 1998 operating budget of $17,893,904 on Saturday. The new fiscal year starts July 1.

The budget is a 5.5 percent increase over this year's and will add about 51 cents to the tax rate.

Last fall, town officials predicted a $450,000 deficit but improvements in sources of revenue and some savings in anticipated expenses reduced the deficit to about $170,000 which can be covered through free cash, officials said.

Photos of Beacon Rock Sought

The Cohasset Historic Commission is looking for any photos of Beacon Rock — aka Signal Rock — that will show what was there in the mid/late 1800s. Please call Ham Tewksbury at 383-1074 if you have any information and/or pictures of what existed at that historic installation.

Sewer Commission Chairman Ted Guild speaks to the voters at the opening session of Cohasset town meeting on Saturday.

State/Town Sewer Accord Approved

Town Meeting voters approved a court-ordered agreement with the state obligating the town to upgrade, expand and modernize its wastewater system. This replaces the first "agreement for judgement" approved at the October 1994 town meeting and includes new performance dates. It also incorporates a number of benefits to the town including increased flow authorization which will reduce the town's liability for excessive flow penalties and permit limited expansion of the existing system now.

The increased flow authorization will allow the town's new school to hook up to the system. This will save on the school project's costs because the school would not have to build a treatment plant. The increased flow will also allow some increase in allocation for businesses in the village and allow some homeowners currently on the sewer system to increase their wastewater flow.

The agreement also is more loosely worded in dealing with on-site systems which will allow the town more flexibility in determining which homes have to be put on a on-site wastewater management plan. This will limit the town's contractual liability regarding on-site systems, Sewer Commission Chairman Ted Guild pointed out.

Homemade Hat Day At Deer Hill School

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Art teacher Ann Berman with her pupils who knit their own caps at the Deer Hill School.

March 19, Deer Hill School pupils staged a 'Homemade Hat Day' by wearing hats into school that they invented, created, built or knit.

The idea for dedicating a day to hats came from Ann Berman, Deer Hill School's art teacher, who has made hats a part of the fifth-grade students' after-school art activity program this year.

"There are two reasons for hat day," Berman said recently. "Today is the last day of winter. Instead of celebrating the first day of spring like everyone else, I thought it would be fun to wear hats to celebrate the end of winter. Unfinished hats fifth-graders are making are being displayed on a table in the school's front hall. I expanded the idea to include anyone in the school who wanted to wear a hat, whether they were involved in my hat knitting project or not."

She smiles, "It's been fun walking around today, seeing what the kids have come up with."

The hat project started earlier in the year when Berman took classes given by the Massachusetts Art Educators.

"I had taken some really high-powered classes and I saw the advertisement for this class that said, "Learn to knit, make a hat, teach the children, have fun."

Intrigued, Berman tried it, bringing into class with her a #8 16" round needle.

"In two hours, I had started a hat. I was thrilled because it was so easy. I learned how to change colors, but not how to fix mistakes. If there were drop stitches or holes, I'd just tear out."

Berman finished the hat and decided to introduce the project to the Deer Hill children.

"In the last two minutes of class, I'd hold up the hat I was working on so they see my progress. I'd talk about knitting in general and about making that hat. I told them how fishermen were the first knitters because they had to repair their nets. At least one boy in each class would raise his hand and tell me how his father is a fisherman who knits."

Interested students went to Woolgatherers in Hingham. Jan Fish, the owner, would point them in the direction of the proper yarn and needles.

"I'd also have them pick up a skein of yarn, any color, to bring me. I'd make several little balls of yarn out of that skein and put the balls in my basket. The children could make their hats any color they wanted. They had the yarn choices. Everybody used everybody's yarn. It worked great!"

> 'Children would see their classmates and friends knitting in class, and they'd want to do it.'
> — Ann Berman, art

Berman says there are from 40 to 50 children making hats. Many are girls, but there are boys, also.

"Children would see their classmates and friends knitting in class, and they'd want to do it. I had mothers from Hingham and Scituate coming in, asking for the needle, yarn, and instructions because their daughter's friends from Cohasset were showing them. Jan at Woodgatherers began keeping the instructions for the hat in her shop."

METCO students making the long ride in every day from Boston were knitting on the buses. When the flu this winter kept children home from school, they knitted in bed. During vacation, some students finished one hat and began another. Hats were made for family and friends.

One boy decided to make a Bruins hat. He and Berman sat down together and drafted the hat, black with a big yellow spot, on a piece of graphing paper.

"We figured it out," laughs the art teacher, "It took a while, but we did it. He did it, and it looks great! "

"For the most part, it's been a wonderful experience for all of us. For a lot of the kids, this is a very good and therapeutic exercise that helps them relax and concentrate. A few pitfalls, though. One little girl, who'd been working diligently on her hat, placed it one night on the table next to her bed. During the night, her cat got at it. He didn't tear it. He chewed a big hole right in the middle. The little girl came in the next day, practically crying, and asked me to fix her hat. She felt so terrible and was so sad, I couldn't tell her I didn't know how. I patted her shoulder and told her I would have it for her the next morning.

"As soon as school was out, I drove quickly over to Woodgatherers. Jan told me what I had thought might be true. The stitches had to be taken out and started over. Now, just so you know, the hat was about two rows away from being finished. I was heartbroken. Jan was helpful and tore it out and I left for my graduate course with the hat. That night, I sat in class, with the professor up front. My notes and pen were on my desk. I looked up now and then to let him know I was listening. But below the desk, on my lap, I was knitting with fury — 10 rows of red, 10 rows of gold!"

Berman throws back her head and laughs.

"I still can't believe it got fixed. The little girl was so happy, she beamed. It was so important."

"Knitting a hat is not instant gratification," says Berman says. "The children have to work at it. They learn there are no knitting fairies who do it for them. If they bring it home to work on and it just sits there, it doesn't get done. A little a day, I tell them, and it'll be done."

Berman plans to teach knitting to the fifth-graders next year.

"I think it's great that they can make something they actually use. A lot of the children will become knitters for life.

Besides, she smiles, "I'm also having fun with it and learning as well."

Sewer Override Vote is May 3

Central Cohasset Project Gets Nod

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Whether or not the town will subsidize construction of north and central Cohasset sewers will be left up to voters at the May 3 town election, town meeting decided Saturday.

On the ballot will be a debt exclusion override question, which, if passed, would appropriate half of the cost of the about $20 million sewer projects through property taxes. The vote is necessary because the costs of the project cannot be absorbed within the tax base which by law can only increase by 2-1/2 percent over the prior year without an override.

The override would raise the taxes on the average Cohasset home valued at $308,000 home by about $169 a year.

If the override fails, users will have to pay for the entire project through betterments over 20 years.

The advisory board and capital outlay committee said last week that they do not support the town subsidizing 50 percent of sewer projects because the borrowing would put the town dangerously close to its debt limit.

Arne Gjesteby, 75 Old Pasture Rd., took exception to that announcement and asked why the boards weren't concerned when the town approved the DPW garage, high school athletic field, and purchase of the Hagerty Property. Those projects, approved over the past three years, all required override votes.

He questioned why the sewer project was "too expensive for the town but not too expensive for the minority" who will get the sewer.

Through an amendment to the sewer article at Saturday's session of town meeting, Gjesteby, who lives in the central Cohasset sewer district, unsuccessfully tried to have both the north and central Cohasset projects fail if they were not 100 percent paid for through the override.

He tried to make the point that without the enthusiastic support of the advisory board and capital outlay committee, the override vote is a "sham" and has no chance of passage.

Jeff Watson, 15 Spindrift Lane, also questioned the fairness of asking users to pay for a major public works project. He noted that all taxpayers will pay for the new school and not just those who have children in the schools.

North Cohasset resident Maria Plante asks officials to explain some of the sewer articles as last Saturday's session of town meeting.

Gjesteby's amendment failed by a vote of 75 to 185.

The $13.5 central Cohasset sewer project and joint override for the $6.6 million north Cohasset sewer project were overwhelmingly approved with a vote of 264-3.

The town is under a court order to upgrade its sewer system or face stiff fines from the state.

Lobster Lab

when we have a proven need to access the harbor. We didn't purchase the property with the intention of having a regional science center there."

He also said it sets a bad precedent to allow an individual to put his business into the building. The lobster lab is the brainchild of resident and biologist Kevin Ulmer, who plans to rent office space at market rates on the third floor of the Hagerty House for his private business. He will serve as unpaid director of the lab.

Presenting the minority view on his board, Selectman Peter Pratt said one of the town's greatest strengths is in its volunteer organizations. He pointed to the South Shore Playhouse Associates (parent company of the Music Circus), Art Center and Community Center as examples.

"The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation has joined the front ranks of those organizations" and urged voters to move ahead with the proposal. The non-profit Lightkeepers renovated and manage the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island which has become a popular spot for local functions.

The harbor and school committees also backed the lobster lab proposal. And the capital outlay committee preferred establishing the lab over demolishing the building, which is the alternative offered by selectmen.

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder said there was "little downside" to the proposal. He pointed out that if attempts to raise money to put the house in order failed, the structure would revert to the town.

The advisory board took no stand on the lobster lab.

But adviser Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Rd., speaking as a citizen, said the Hagerty property should provide full and maximum use of the only public boat ramp in Cohasset. The boat ramp is at the end of Parker Avenue and is adjacent to the Hagerty property. Jenkins said there would not be adequate parking or turn around space for cars with boat trailers with the lobster lab there.

Proponents said the 8-12 parking spaces that would have to be included with the house under the town by-laws could be shared with the town. They said demands on the limited parking area would be limited to the summer months when people are boating.

Russ Bonetti, 20 Parker Ave., a member of the Hagerty Property Committee that is charged with developing a plan for the harbor front site, said the area was supposed to provide recreation for all townspeople and not solely provide a parking lot for boaters. Giving credence to proponents' arguments about seasonal parking demands — Bonetti pointed out that the need for parking does indeed drop off in the winter as evidenced by the fact that selectmen had allowed the yacht club to store floats there.

Pat Walsh, 270 S. Main St., accused proponents of using the town's children as "pawns for the project."

And Jim Drysdale, 4 Cedar Acres Lane, a professor in the field of marine research, said it is inappropriate to think that high school students can do meaningful work without a larger scale operation.

Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., failed in his attempt to amend the proposal to get the terms of the lease changed to three-year renewable.

Ulmer told town meeting that three years is too short in light of the amount of money that has to be raised. Plans are to raise $1/2 million for improvements to the building and the Lightkeepers would prefer a 10-year lease with conditions for termination written into lease.

The town leases other property to non-profit corporations for a nominal fee including the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island, the boat house on the Hagerty property which is an educational rowing center, and the Teen Center on South Main Street.

Cohasset Colonials, a furniture kit manufacturer, relocated to Hingham when the town bought the Hagerty property in 1993.

It's time to start thinking about Summer Camp

Turn to the Camp Directory in today's South Look

April Fools' Day Storm

up around 19 inches — the greatest snowfall ever recorded this late in the season, said Skilling.

By the time the storm ended at 2 p.m. Tuesday, 23 inches of snow had fallen, making the blizzard of '97 the second greatest storm on record on the South Shore, second only to the legendary blizzard of '78 during which 28.3 inches of snow fell. The main difference in the two storms came in the wind speeds, Skilling said. While winds gusted upwards of 60 miles per hour during this week's storm, winds during the blizzard of '78 reached 90 mph on the coast, he said.

Accompanied by near hurricane force winds at the coast, the storm and heavy snow downed tree limbs and power lines leaving thousands of residents and dozens of businesses without electricity. In its Brockton service area, which includes the South Shore towns of Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover and Scituate, Eastern Edison reported up to 41,000 customers lost power at some point during the storm, said electric company spokesman Hank Senate. Work crews toiled in 16-hour shifts around the clock and by Wednesday afternoon, power had been restored to all but 4,300 Eastern Edison customers — 203 of them in Cohasset. Four out-of-state work crews from Central Maine Power were on hand Wednesday to lend a hand in Cohasset.

By Thursday morning, all but 17 Eastern Edison customers had their power restored, the electric company said. The remaining power outages were due to downed lines servicing individual homes.

Senate said the storm was especially difficult to deal with because it packed both high winds and heavy snows, downing thousands of power lines in the service district.

"It was like hand-to-hand combat," Senate said. "It takes a long time to go from street to street and pole to pole to put things back together again." Treacherous driving conditions made it tough for work crews to get around town, he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said officials were unhappy with Eastern Edison because the lines of communication were not open between working crews and the town.

Sullivan said that when a storm hits, Eastern Edison activates a plan to restore power quickly and keep the town abreast of developments in restorations.

"During this storm, (the plan) fell apart," Sullivan said. "The communication was not there that we had experienced in the past couple of storms. It makes it frustrating to everyone because nobody can give any feedback to the citizens. It increases the level of anxiety."

The town had no idea how many Eastern Edison crews were working, where they were working, what they were working on, or how soon service would be restored, Sullivan said.

Selectmen will discuss the communication breakdown with electric company representatives at an upcoming meeting,.

"I have already talked with (Eastern Edison Vice President) Barbara Hassan and told her we weren't happy," he said.

Police reported no storm-related injuries and only three minor accidents — fender benders and spin-outs as the roadways got progressively worse, going from wet to slushy to snow-covered by late Monday afternoon.

Cohasset Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said that, despite receiving 10 to 20 times the normal number of calls, the storm did not have an "extraordinary" effect on the town.

"For the type of storm it was, there could have been a lot more damage," Noonan said Wednesday. "We're pretty fortunate, for the weight of the snow and the size of the storm, that we didn't suffer a lot more."

Once the snow began to pile up, Public works crews worked around the clock to keep pace with the white stuff, which fell at a rate of almost three inches per hour after early Tuesday morning.

By about 8 p.m.Tuesday, the Cohasset DPW had cleared most of the roads in town.

"The DPW did an outstanding job keeping the roads open," said Civil Defense Director Arthur Lehr.

Nevertheless, school was cancelled Tuesday and Wednesday due to the storm.

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen declared a state of emergency Tuesday morning and requested additional snow removal equipment from the state. Officials never saw any extra equipment; they assumed the assistance went to areas that were harder hit.

Public Works Director Harold Litchfield said the blizzard of '97 cost the town between $15,000 and $18,000. The snow removal budget, which started the season with $45,170, contained $3,195.24 before the storm hit.

Only nine people had to be evacuated Tuesday to a shelter set up at the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue, Lehr said. The building, equipped with heat, power, cots, blankets and a kitchen, kept evacuees warm and sheltered throughout the afternoon. By nightfall, the nine people, mostly from the Elm Court area, found other accommodations. The evacuation center did not need to be reopened Wednesday morning, he said.

"It was one of those days where you hoped people got up in the morning with a certain degree of patience," said Sullivan.

Lehr recommended that residents try to dig out catch basins near their homes to prevent flooding and uncover fire hydrants for safety.

Cohasset merchants tried their best to cope with power outages that lasted to the middle of the week.

Despite a lack of power since midnight Monday, Cohasset News on Brook Street stayed busy with customers Wednesday.

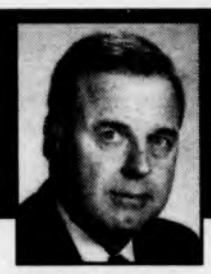
"The door's open and we're doing fine," said Dan Moran. "Hopefully the power will come back on soon."

At the Red Lion Inn on South Main Street, conditions were not as cozy as usual, said Mike Anderson, one of the managers.

"We're not open because we have no food. We have no refrigeration," he said. The inn also had no heat, a temporary phone system and could not open the bar without serving food.

Some die-hard guests were sticking it out on the third floor of the hotel, but no new lodgers had shown their faces in about 48 hours, Anderson said Wednesday.

"We were hit real hard," he said. "This is not a very comfortable place to be right now."



Caroline Wampole digs out along South Main Street. She said she is visiting Cohasset from California to enjoy springtime in New England.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

THAT BEAUTIFUL LEVERAGE

QUESTION: What is meant by "leverage" when used in conjunction with investing in real estate?

ANSWER: In its simplest terms, leverage means using someone else's money to vastly increase your profit potential. Leverage arises because ALL of the income and ALL of the appreciation in value belongs to the property holder regardless of the amount of the loan.

Assume a $100,000 property was purchased for only $10,000 down. Five years later, it is sold for $150,000 (a 50% gain). After paying off the $90,000 mortgage, the investor would realize, not a 50% gain, but a 500% gain on his actual cash investment. That's leverage.

Amanda Cellucci Celebrates her Birthday in Style!

Did you wonder what was going on at Zinnia's Cafe a few weeks ago? Well, we can let you in on the secret now! It was Amanda Cellucci's 13th birthday, and her grandmother decided to have a surprise birthday party in the form of a Victorian Tea! Complete with several tea sandwiches and yummies, the tea was served in china cups. It was a festive time for all, especially Amanda, and we think it was a memorable way for her to begin her teen years! And, hats off to Lynn (owner/chef of Zinnia's) for doing a fantastic job! Sunday, March 9, was the big day.

It was supposed to be a championship tournament held in Lebanon, N.H., to determine the best "B" ranked players in the Northeast. However, when the Seahawks arrived they found most of their competition blatantly wearing hats and jackets showing that they were "A" teams. Their opponents had banners and flags, pamphlets and matching uniforms proclaiming superior hockey players. The Seahawks were clearly outclassed, or were they?

The Seahawks brought with them homemade signs, supportive families and an incredibly motivational volunteer head coach, Frank DiCristofaro. They played in the same jerseys as they did all season. They won, again and again. The Seahawks played spectacularly, and the Cohasset contingent was again present — Michael Rasmussen, Michael Colorio and Michael Hajjar, and they were awesome! Mike Rasmussen scored the tying goal in the final game taking the team into sudden death overtime. Mike Colorio, with his fantastic shot, scored while playing defense. Mike Hajjar played outstanding center position. Every player played with heart and dedication. It was a team effort, they just would not give up!

It was a festive time for all, especially Amanda, and we think it was a memorable way for her to begin her teen years!

The Seahawks are now the champions of the Northeast! Congratulations, Seahawks!

There is another class planning its reunion — this time it is the Class of 1967, CHS — Pam (Flint) Agni and Sue (Williams) Cox are the gals behind this effort, and have planned the date for July 12. They are anxious to have fellow classmates respond, help, give and get addresses, etc. Call Pam at 545-7047 or Sue at 383-0072 for more details.

March 15, the Legion held its annual corn beef dinner, with Rocky Laugelle and Ed Brennock chief chefs. Well, they got the meat all cooked and were about to begin the veggies when the gas valve in the street malfunctioned. The gents put in a call to the Chart House, hoping they would be able to help them out. Even though they had a wedding going on, and a full house there for dinner, they still cooked the four pots of vegetables for the Legion. It takes special people to do something like that, and Ed Sopneski (the manager) and his able crew surely deserve a tip of the hat for their efforts! Not only do Rocky and Ed thank Ed and his chefs, the people who dined that evening do too! Isn't it nice to live in a small town?

Remember Jon Anderson, teacher and soccer coach extraordinaire at CHS some years ago? Well, he was awarded a certificate from Babson College's coordinator of student affairs, Joseph M. Ford, and president William F. Galvin for 10 years of dedicated service to Babson College! We certainly think that's special, and congratulate him! We still miss you though, Jon!

Camp Dresser & McKee Inc. (CDM), the global consulting, engineering, construction and operations firm, is pleased to announce that Robert J. Anton has been promoted to senior vice president and treasurer of the firm. Mr. Anton has been with CDM for 15 years, and was previously vice president of finance and treasurer. He is responsible for the firm's accounting and treasury operations. He has lived in Cohasset for 12 years, and we are proud of him.

Former Cohassetite, Dana Doggett, and his eldest child, Tommy (age 14), went on a trip to Israel and the Holy Land. They traveled with the Brigham Young University tour group and attended a concert at the BYU, Jerusalem Center. Dana and his wife feel that a trip such as this one is one of importance and hope to take each of their five children. The Dana Doggetts make their home in Orem, Utah.

Hats off to Penelope Dane, what a great academic career she has had for herself! She will graduate from Rollins College June 1 (Rollins is located in Winter Park, Fla.), where she was on the dean's list in the spring of 1995; Penelope made the president's list both fall and spring of 1996 and made the dean's list last fall while studying at the Sarbonne in Paris with San Francisco State College. Isn't that great!

Okay everybody, don't forget to let me know what is happening in your lives, it's fun to share good news with all! Just give me a jingle, then read all about it!

Considering a Medicare HMO?

If you're a Medicare beneficiary, you've probably thought about joining a Medicare HMO.

Medicare HMOs offer many benefits, but they may limit your choices.

Before you join a Medicare HMO, you'll want to ask the health plan questions like, "Will I still be able to see my regular doctor?," or "Where will I be hospitalized?"

Give us a call if you'd like more information on how to select an HMO. We'd be happy to talk with you about your Medicare options and to send you free information.

MONACO: MAKING THE MOST OF IT

How's this for a picture of paradise: a stunningly beautiful place with perfect climate, no crime, no poverty, and no pollution. Add to it streets that are virtually paved with gold (or at least with fabulous wealth), and Monaco may be the closest mere mortals can come to paradise this side of the Great Beyond. Monaco is Europe's smallest and richest secular state. Located on the Riviera, about halfway between Nice and the border of Italy, the tiny country combines a reputation for out-of-this-world opulence with an aggressive stance on protecting the environment. The blue-green waters off Monaco's glittering coast are among the clearest on the planet, and almost 40 percent of the usable land has been reclaimed from erosion and wastes by the country's vigorous pro-environment efforts.

We will fly you from Boston to Nice, France. Airfare will vary depending on the time of year you travel. Stay for 4 days, 3 nights at the luxurious Hotel Mirabeau. We will include all hotel taxes, gratuities, full American buffet breakfast, a free room upgrade, admission to local museums, a one-way complimentary HELICOPTER transfer from the airport to the hotel, free casino admission and shopping discount coupons...all for $470. per person, if you use your Visa card as payment.

Call Nancy for details and for information on an extensive list of events taking place in Monaco throughout 1997.

'Breast Cancer Doesn't Take Time Off'

If you are a woman, you are at risk for breast cancer. Although many of the recent reports on mammography have been confusing, the fact is that one women in eight is at risk of breast cancer in her lifetime! The two major risk factors for breast cancer are being female and getting older. Although there is not much you can do to change either risk factor, there is good news!

Mammography screening: Thursday, May 1, the Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring the Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc. (MDSI) mobile mammography service. Appointments are necessary and can be scheduled by calling the Cohasset Social Service League ate (617) 383-0771. The mammograms are performed by fully licensed female mammography technologists in a comfortable, private mobile coach. The films are read by board certified radiologists and results are provided to each woman as well as the physician of her choice.

When used in conjunction with the following total breast health plan, mammography is the most reliable method we have now for early detection of breast cancer. There are proven ,methods for detecting breast cancer early, before it has spread, while it is still treatable. Here is vital information you should know to save a life — your own or a loved one's. The three-step program to breast health is simple:

- Do monthly breast self-examination;
- Have a clinical breast exam by your health care professional annually;
- Have a mammogram every year over the age of 40.

Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc., ACR Accredited, FDA Certified and Massachusetts Licensed mobile mammography service, is a not-for-profit corporation with a history of serving women in Massachusetts for more then nine years. Mammography is their only business. Because cost and accessibility are cited as major factors discouraging women from having mammography, MDSI provides low-cost mammography on a mobile unit, bringing this life-saving 30-minute examination to women at worksites, health centers and community locations.

Insurance can often cover the cost of a mammogram, and MDSI can bill your insurance company directly, or you may pay on the day of the exam and obtain a receipt for insurance reimbursement. Medicare covers their portion of a mammogram examination every two years. Deductible and co-pay may apply, so you should call Medicare at (800) 882-1228 to check your individual status.

KNOCK FIRST?

▶The only indication that many motorists have that the gasoline they have purchased has failed to meet the octane requirements of their cars' engines is the audible sound of engine "knock." Many of today's engines, however, are equipped with knock sensors, which are electronic control systems that have the job of detecting engine knock and then adjusting engine operation to stop knocking. Knock sensors work like this: When they detect the characteristic pinging sound or knocking vibrations produced by detonation, they signal the computer to retard engine spark timing until the detonation stops. These adjustments have the potential to reduce vehicle acceleration performance. With the audible knocking sound eliminated, this reduction in acceleration may be the only indication that motorists have that the gasoline they have purchased is less than what their engines require.

▶It just makes sense to put good gas in your car when you are looking for top performance. If you can't do it regularly, doing it occasionally still makes a difference in how smoothly your car will run. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO (383-9090), we find solutions that work at a price that's competitive and that gets you in and out of here in no time. Finding solutions is what we are good at--no automotive problem is a problem for us. For the best care around, you need look no farther. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (open Thurs. eves).

HINT

Many of today's new cars have also incorporated altitude compensators into their engine management systems, which effectively make octane requirements the same at high levels as sea level.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

The 'Dazzling Uncertainty' of It All

There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration — and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on the people to see how they will go... Yes, one of the brightest gems in the New England weather is the dazzling uncertainty of it.

— Mark Twain.

It's hard to believe that on Sunday before sitting down to Easter dinner, we were enjoying sunshine and conversation with our family on the deck.

Less than 48 hours later, the new snowblower that has been idle nearly all winter was revved up to tackle 30 inches of snow in the driveway.

And by the time you read this editorial — temperatures may be back up to 60 degrees.

As Mark Twain points out, this is New England and our weather, if anything, has variety.

Who could have predicted after the mild winter we've had that an April Fool's Day nor'easter would be the third worst for snow accumulation on record?

This storm stood as a nasty reminder about how brutal winter can be. To most of us the winter of 95-96 with its hundred-plus inches of snow was buried deep in memory until Tuesday. Then it all came back. The mess, the cold, the power outages, loss of cable, the shovelling, and the disruption of our routine.

And to top it off, we spent the day in the 'E.R.' That shiny new snowblower beckoned for a long awaited workout. But unfortunately, a tree limb laden with heavy wet snow had other things in mind and managed to come crashing from the sky onto Dad's head as he forged a path through the white stuff.

A nasty gash on his scalp, a concussion and a sprained neck are souvenirs of what could have been much worse — so, we're not complaining.

We're grateful for the 9-1-1 system, for all those emergency personnel out there, the DPW crews and power people who worked when the rest of us couldn't and looked after us.

While we grumble about inconveniences, they are hard at work throughout the day and into the night doing their level best to dig us out, reconnect wires and put our lives back together again.

For most of this winter we were able to take our daily routine for granted. But Mother Nature brought us all back to reality. So to all the firefighters, EMTs, police, dispatchers, doctors, nurses and road crews out there — we say thanks for being there.

All of us need to be reminded from time to time that the good health and love of our families is what is really important. With those in our camp, we should be able to weather any meteorological difficulty.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Statesmanlike Process Needed

To the Editor:

Another letter on the subject of train service is surely not needed. But if the March 26 Mariner accurately reported the views of the chairman of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, it is worth making clear what he obscured when he said, "the proponents of the village site did not do much better than the straw vote" (where the count was 311-312 in favor of a Route 3A location distant from Cohasset Village).

Even if the issue were a battle of numbers — which it is not — he still has it wrong. At the selectmen's March 10 meeting, we presented three petitions representing a total of at least 540 Cohasset residents or merchants. All three petitions had in common a request that the selectmen revisit their earlier decision against a Village stop. We recommended an objective comparison by a paid consultant of the alternative sites in terms of traffic, parking and impacts on property and residents. I was authorized by the chairman of the advisory committee to say that funds were available — a fact Mr. Brown disregards by now saying the MBTA should pay.

The third petition the chairman did not mention was one signed by more than 90 percent of Cohasset Village's merchants, who consider their livelihood and even survival at stake on this question. It is irrelevant whether or not they are voters. They are at the core of life and service in the "Quaint Cohasset Village" opponents say they wish to restore (and which incidentally had a train running through it).

Others have reported the extraordinarily discourteous treatment displayed by the chairman at the March 10 meeting, including using my time to invite opponents to give pre-planned presentations while volunteer architects, who had worked hard with creative plans for our presentation, were left cooling their heels in the hallway. My own primary concern, as a 40-year resident of Cohasset, is the need for a decision-making process aimed at dissipating the bitterness and division on the train issue that now rends our community. Failure of the board to comprehend that need has turned the crisis into not only one of transportation, but of governance as well. Both crises can be addressed only by a statesmanlike process that is not only fair, but also seen as fair by the people who in good faith have strongly differed on this subject.

Keep Station on Route 3A

To the Editor:

If a major reason for a village station is people will walk, how many really will. New England weather alone keeps people in cars. Good intentions to walk contrast the reality of driving to the station as people rush to catch a train.

Stories of walking 50 years ago when the train stopped on the original right-of-way hardly compare to moving the tracks 100 feet into the residential neighborhood. The monstrous 800-foot concrete and steel platform required for a station will be an eyesore.

Don't forget the blasting of ledge to create a 450-car parking lot the MBTA requires. Picture a traffic nightmare as the lot fills with cars rushing to the station, the same time children are going to school. The increased exhaust fumes from all those cars cutting through the hillside adds to the pollution of the diesel trains.

The major reason for no village station is the flooding of James Brook. If the village is filled with concrete and asphalt and water seeks its own level, the village and surrounding residential neighborhoods will be under water. Keep the station on Route 3A and preserve our village.

Cindy MacCleave

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to last week's question of the week:

For selectmen candidates:

Do you agree with the current board of selectmen that the train station should be on Route 3A? Do you think the decision process was handled fairly?

SELECTMAN/Wigmore Pierson

This highly emotional issue begs for equivocation. However, because I believe in a government which listens to its citizens and then acts decisively, I feel compelled to state my view as clearly as I can.

Accordingly, I believe this issue should be revisited by the board of selectmen. I hold this view for several reasons.

First, the vote by the board of selectmen Nov. 12, 1996 was taken too hastily under the pressure of an overheated packed house, and the board may have been "railroaded" into a premature vote under the pressure of what in retrospect was a false deadline imposed by the MBTA.

Second, the MBTA recently announced for a variety of reasons, unrelated to the location of the Cohasset station, there will be a two-year delay in the re-establishment of rail service to Greenbush. Therefore, we have time to make as informed and dispassionate a judgment as possible on this issue which has huge implications for the future of Cohasset.

Third, the straw vote taken at the Oct. 28, 1996 town meeting was in fact "non-binding."

Fourth, nearly 600 citizens and merchants have signed petitions asking for an in-depth independent evaluation of a village station. Under the circumstances, how can this request be dismissed out of hand? I believe it neither can nor should.

In sum, a final decision on "village or 3A" should be rendered only after more facts are known. A decision of this magnitude demands no less.

SELECTMAN/Diane C. Sullivan

I don't feel the selectmen made the decision to site the train station on Route 3A; I believe the people did. Selectmen can't and should not bring their own personal preferences on issues to the board when the people have spoken.

While many have complained about the "straw vote" that was taken to determine how residents felt about the station site, it is a fact that both sides could have voted that day and affected the outcome. I feel it would have been improper to go against the residents' vote.

It is absolutely true that we elect our selectmen and expect they will use wise judgment in governing our town. However, the first rule to my mind is that they first follow the mandate of the people.

We all want our downtown businesses to succeed and to that end the business tax rates and rubbish rates, I believe, are the same as residential rates.

Would business hours of operation coincide with train departure and arrival times? When people rush to jump on a train they might grab coffee and a newspaper, but I can't imagine having time for much else.

The most important part of this issue is restoration of train service and it seems to me a Route 3A station site is the fairest location for the majority of Cohasset residents. After all, everyone is concerned with our quality of life and we must not fail to protect as many as we can so that they may enjoy as much peaceful enjoyment of their homes as possible.

SELECTMAN/Alex Koines

A village station has the most immediate appeal but after examining the facts, I believe that Route 3A would be the most practical and workable of the two. The selectmen made a fair decision by weighing all factors, as is their job. However, I would have preferred a non-binding referendum question at the polls to the straw poll at the summer town meeting, well attended as it was.

I have spoken with village merchants who feel that sufficient parking is currently a problem at the town lot. If many of the commuters' cars were to park at a 3A station, the result would be more parking downtown for shoppers and those seeking services there. This, I feel, would do more to boost the appeal of the village than vast, expanded parking fields filled with empty cars all day. We must also consider the extra traffic and congestion that cars flowing into the village on both ends of the commute will add to streets that were never designed to handle that type of volume. Another important point to consider is where we will be in 10 years. If ridership increases, and I feel it will, traffic would increase and the village lots could become too small and outdated in the years to come.

There is one other option that should be examined: the soon to be retired Osgood School. Parking possibilities there are excellent, congestion in the village would be eliminated and access would be a workable compromise.

SELECTMAN/Tom Callahan

Each station site has innumerable problems and no single overriding good point. On balance, my lesser of two evils view is that a 3A station is probably the better site. The lot should be made smaller, however, to avoid Cohasset becoming a hub should the North Scituate station disappear (as some would have it do).

I have no problem with the way the decision was made by the selectmen. Each side had an opportunity to be heard and get out its vote. The process was fair.

The problem with the process is not with our boards, but with the T itself. I do not perceive a sincere effort to address local concerns, but only a desire to impose a project having no clear mandate for it in any town in any vote, including Cohasset. While we expend our energy in debating mitigation and stations, we are diverted by a co-opting strategy from the real questions of cost, sound transportation policy, and the substantial environmental issues. The cost alone begs the question of the project's justification. Federal money is being foregone (begging still more questions), and the T thus far does not want to assist us in retaining expert assistance with this project or paying for the project's major impacts, such as on the James Brook flooding problem. Where the selectmen need to be in this "process" is to be more assertive in advancing the town's interests. Our agenda, not the T's, should be the framework of discussion.

For school committee candidates:

There's a perception out there held by some that the schools aren't doing enough to combat drug and alcohol abuse among students. What do you think?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Susan Turgiss

Alcohol and drug abuse is a serious, complex problem that touches all ages and sections of society. The Cohasset schools acknowledge that academic achievement must be promoted alongside emotional maturity and responsible citizenship within its 1995 mission statement. Accordingly, the school has a role in addressing drug/alcohol abuse as part of a student's educational development.

Currently, the schools have a comprehensive K-12 health curriculum which teaches drug/alcohol abuse awareness and appropriate decision making. As a parent, I have received information from the schools telling me when this issue is being addressed in class. I believe communication is important as it facilitate home discussion. I support the efforts presently afoot by schools to increase the extra curricular activities to meet the diverse interests of students. These activities are one of the key elements to healthy involvement.

The police department is assisting the schools through the "PALS" program which brings police officers to the schools to talk about issues and improve police-youth relationships. The Drug and Alcohol Committee is working to develop community awareness through forums and activities. Parents must continue their important role by discussing drug/alcohol issues at home, keeping current with information, and serving as role models. Churches and youth organizations such as the Teen Center and sport groups also have important roles.

Cohasset must continue to address drug/alcohol abuse through a partnership and open network of home, school and community. I support the approach of education, communication and community partnership in resolving this issue.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Kathy Ofsthun

The increase of drug and alcohol use among teens nationwide is well documented, and Cohasset, too, is at risk. Although the responsibility for teens' drug/alcohol usage lies first with them and their parents, we all expect that while our children are at school they are safe and that illegal substances are not tolerated.

Our schools are confronting drug and alcohol use through a comprehensive health curriculum that begins with the P.A.L.S. program at the elementary level and continues through high school. The high school handbook details policies for disciplinary actions to be taken. I have been told that appropriate discipline is being taken.

Nevertheless, it is possible more could be done: increased monitoring of students, expanded communication, and parental involvement in policy setting would contribute to improving the situation at our schools.

- The Cohasset student population is small enough to be manageable. Reputed occurrences on school grounds could be reduced through increased adult supervision of trouble spots, e.g. bathrooms, parking lots.
- While respecting the rights of privacy, I believe that information could be regularly disseminated that would 1) assure the community that the schools are abiding by their discipline policies and 2) let parents and students know the level of the problem.
- My experience with the P.S.O. has demonstrated the opportunity and value in using parents for problem solving. A survey measuring their satisfaction with the handling of drug and alcohol cases and providing a channel for expressing their ideas for change would help in re-examining the adequacy of current policies.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Joe McElroy

There is a serious problem of student drug and alcohol abuse that has to be addressed by a more unified effort of parents, the schools, and law enforcement. I have attended recent meetings of the town's drug and alcohol committee, heard verbal testimonials and reviewed a 1996 survey of the Cohasset School District that documents the drug and alcohol problem threatening Cohasset youth.

Cohasset schools face the same issues that District Attorney Michael Sullivan described in a media interview: "...schools are sometimes put in the awkward position of trying to safeguard all the children involved, placate parents, and preserve the school's reputation." Additionally, staff and faculty are confronted with delicate legal issues when they suspect students of misconduct on school property.

Regardless of the difficulty, our staff and faculty must vigorously comply with existing law and school policy that requires reporting all drug crimes to local police. Secondly, the community should embrace Principal Curt Collins' skillful initiative to create a long-overdue middle school for grades seven and eight. I believe the middle school will offer a crucial "firebreak" in fighting peer pressure from older students to "test the waters" of alcohol and drugs.

During January, I initiated a meeting between the chief of police, Police Alliance with Local Schools (PALS) Officer Lisa Matos, the PSO president, and myself to promote town-wide efforts to confront parental denial and unify the efforts of about six local organizations that are fighting substance abuse. I then coordinated an added PSO mission statement which has them assuming a more pro-active role. At its March meeting, the PSO approved dedicating a person to work with the entire town to combat this serious problem. I am grateful for the positive response of the PSO.

Substance abuse is a community problem and the schools must do more, but they cannot do it alone. We must work together. I will act, rather than react.

Next Week's Question:

For Selectman Candidates:

Do you think establishing a municipal land bank would be a good way for the town to accumulate money to buy open space? Why or why not?

For School Committee Candidates:

In two years, Cohasset tenth-graders will take the "high-stakes" statewide testing implemented under the Education Reform Act and must pass in order to graduate. Is it the state's or town's responsibility to deal with the ramifications of the new tests?

For Water Commission Candidates:

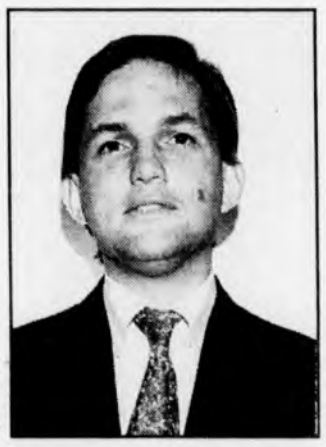
Is taking the north Cohasset water district by eminent domain the best way for the town to deal with water quality problems and high water rates in that part of town?

Question of the Week

Sullivan Announces Candidacy for Selectman

Diane C. Sullivan

Ms. Diane C. Sullivan announced her candidacy for the open seat on the board of selectmen created by Selectman Peter Pratt's decision not to seek re-election due to professional considerations.



"I decided to run for the now available seat on the board of selectmen to bring my experience as a former selectman back to the board as it works toward resolution of the many issues facing Cohasset. I believe my prior service as a member and chairman of the board demonstrated to town residents and to fellow board members my commitment to the type of hard work, fairness for all, and detailed grasp of the issues that the town absolutely requires today," said Sullivan.

Sullivan served as a selectman following the period that the board of selectmen expanded from three to five members after changes to the town bylaws. In 1987, when a possible move out-of-state necessitated by her husband's business obligations faced her family, she chose not to seek re-election. Prior to serving as a selectman, Sullivan was a member of the fire station renovation committees, drainage advisory committee, sewer advisory committee and Cohasset Community Center directors. While a selectman, she served as Cohasset's representative to the South Shore Coalition and was the board's liaison to several town committees, including committee on elder affairs and the harbor committee.

"As I now look at town government, and as I especially view the hard-working volunteers who fill our appointed and elected town boards, I am convinced the time has come for Cohasset to have a town manager reporting to the selectmen. We must acknowledge and act on the need for a qualified professional manager to support the selectmen as they address the growing complexity of governing Cohasset. I am convinced that we need a town manager to maintain the character of Cohasset, and to improve the efficiency of our fiscal and operational management. If this goal is not achieved by Cohasset at our annual town meeting, efforts must continue until this goal is accomplished," concluded Sullivan.

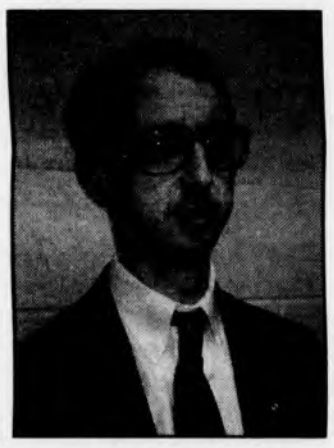
She resides with her husband Jack, an executive in the meat industry, at 708 Jerusalem Rd. Son Michael, a graduate of Assumption College in Worcester, Mass., resides with his family in Amherst, N.Y.; and son Jason is a student at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Sullivan is employed as manager of cost containment and managed care services for Medical Claims Service Inc. of Quincy.

Callahan Announces Candidacy for Selectman

Tom Callahan

Today, I am announcing my candidacy for the vacant seat on the Board of Selectmen.

I decided to run after Mr. Pratt's decision not to run for three reasons. First, I was concerned about the void created by his departure, as I often shared his views on town issues. Those views need to continue to be represented.



Second, as a taxpayer and homeowner, I am alarmed at the flood of major capital projects and attendant tax increases we all face. In my view, the fact that we are having to pay for these major projects all at once points out the need for proactive planning and management, including the creation of a Master Plan. With or without a town manager (and I agree professional management staff is needed in both town hall and on individual capital projects), the Selectmen as the executive authority of the town must take the initiative in bringing about a better coordinated government. I have been working on the Conservation Commission with the Selectmen on one issue, getting legal costs under control, and I think we're moving in the right direction. I believe I can make a valuable contribution in this regard to wider town issues.

Third, I am also alarmed at the level of divisiveness apparent in last year's town meetings and that which may face us in this year's meetings. I am dismayed at the threat to the integrity of our town meeting process evident from last year, and the larger threat to our sense of community. I am not propelled into this election by criticism of our current government, or a single issue, or to represent a particular point of view or segment of town. My goal is to help bring back the consensus that I have seen us achieve on other major issues. During my tenure as a Conservation Commissioner, I have been most proud of the fact of our ability to build consensus. Even with 9+ differing viewpoints represented, often with strongly held positions, most of the time we come to a unanimous vote, as we are able to achieve consensus amongst ourselves and applicants. Differing viewpoints are valuable and should be welcome in helping define an issue, but in the end, we should be able to find common ground. I would like to continue my service to the town as a member of the Board of Selectmen and bring a consensus-building method of government with me.

I have lived in town for more than 11 years and live on Hillside Drive with my wife, Alison, my daughter, Katie, 7, and my son, Peter, 4. I am an attorney with my own practice in Boston and Holbrook. I have been a Conservation Commissioner for eight years, with two terms as chairman. I am a member of the Massachusetts, New York and West Virginia Bars, the New England Association of Environmental Professionals, the Mass. Association of Conservation Commissions and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. I look forward to meeting with the citizens of the town and discussing our many pressing issues with you.

McNabb Announces Candidacy For Water Commissioner

John McNabb

John K. McNabb Jr., 53 Pond St., Cohasset, today announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the Board of Water Commissioners.

"I am running for Water Commissioner to continue the work of Fred Koed and the other Commissioners in the last three years to rebuild our water system. While the Water Commissioners have made significant improvements in the distribution system to eliminate the water shortages experienced from Beechwood to Jerusalem Road in the summers of 1994 and 1995, there is still much work to be done. We must ensure that managerial and engineering improvements continue at the Water Department so that clean drinking water and fire protection can always be guaranteed for all areas of Cohasset," said McNabb.

"A second water storage tank is essential to provide the required system fire fighting capacity as required by fire safety and insurance rating organizations. There are still many miles of old water pipes in Cohasset which have not been adequately maintained, and which must be relined or replaced to enable the system to produce the minimally required 20 pounds per square inch (psi) of pressure everywhere in town.

"The Water Commission must continue the use of professional contract services for the management of operations at the Water Department," said McNabb. "These contractual services provide the town with important cost controls which have allowed the Commissioners to pay back all but about $100,000 of the about $450,000 the Water Department has owed to the town for decades, and are one reason why the town was able to avoid having a general override vote this year."

McNabb is Chairman of the town Water Resource Protection Committee, which recently was successful in acquiring a $10,000 grant from the US Army Corps of Engineers to conduct water quality sampling in the watershed for Lily Pond, the primary source of public drinking water supply for Cohasset. He is one of Cohasset's representatives on the South Shore Water Supply Advisory Committee.

McNabb additionally serves as a member of the town Recycling Committee, and is the Cohasset representative on the South Shore Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Board. He served as Chairman of the town Groundwater Protection Committee in 1991, as member and chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee from 1983 to 1987, and as an elected member of the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library from 1984 to 1987.

He is Vice-President and a co-founder of SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion) which has been successfully fighting the proposed 27.5 acre "Area V" expansion of the private Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill. He also served as a Representative of the 15 ten-citizen group intervenors in the Site Assignment Hearings on the proposed CHL expansion before the Board of Health last year.

McNabb is an environmental government relations consultant, where he has represented various local and state environmental groups at the State House. From 1983 to 1989 he was a Legislative Liaison for the Mass. DEP, where he dealt with many water supply regulatory issues and helped pass many significant environmental laws, including the Water Management Act in 1985.

Question of the Week

For water commission candidates:

Underground sprinklers have put a drain on the system. Has anything been done about this? What do you suggest?

WATER COMMISSION/John McNabb

Underground sprinklers, which can draw down a large portion of the standpipe overnight, were a major contributing factor to the water crises of 1994-1995 that left many homes without any running water. To deal with the incredible drain on the system caused by sprinklers and to resolve other deficiencies in the water distribution system, the water department installed a water line down Forest Ave. to "complete the loop" in that area, replaced water pipes in Beechwood, and made other essential improvements in the water distribution system.

The water commissioners have also proposed a two-tiered new rate structure, known as an increasing block rate. This structure more fairly assesses the true costs of operations by charging a second higher rate similar to a surcharge for larger volume users, who would then pay a higher share of the increased costs of the system, which is enlarged to supply the increased demand. This new rate structure will make the rates more equitable by charging the heaviest users, including homes with sprinklers, a greater share of the costs of the system than those charged to the average homeowner.

All sprinkler users should be required to install backflow preventers to prevent flushing of contaminants into the system. Coordination is needed between the plumbing inspector and the water department to ensure that all sprinklers are properly connected to the system and are properly metered. Sprinklers, and their timing schedule, should be registered with the water department so their demands on the system could be better managed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Arts Celebration Poorly Organized

To the Editor:

The "Celebration of the Arts in the Cohasset Public Schools" evening held at the Jr./Sr. high school March 19 was an absolute travesty. The celebration was intended to display visual arts, and to allow students throughout the grades to perform musically, but it was so badly organized that many families never saw or heard their children perform or saw the art on display.

The performances could not be held in the high school auditorium because of renovations. Therefore, permission was given to use the "upper gym". At the last minute, the day before, the gym was rescheduled for something else, reportedly softball practice. Evidently, the only option was to use the junior high wing with the band room and chorus rooms being the only performance spaces available. These are classrooms with space for students only. Parents, grandparents, and friends milled around in the corridor while waiting to squeeze in to hear students sing or play instruments. Unable to hear anything while out there, they demonstrated the usual loud crowd noise which drifted in through the open doors and overpowered the musicians.

The art, which had been arduously and carefully put on display near the "upper gym" in anticipation of the evening's events was not viewed by most people since it was on the other side of the school.

Whoever was in charge of rearranging the schedules for using possible performance space at the last minute is clearly not interested in the arts. This disrespect for the value of the arts in education demonstrates an unhealthy philosophy: that the arts are worthless pastimes, mere hobbies, easily superseded by sports events.

Those of us in the community who have any intelligence know this is not true. The arts teach self-confidence, critical thinking, creativity, cognitive development in the way of problem-solving and personal discipline. The study of music encompasses reading, writing, and arithmetic. The College Entrance Examination Board announced that in 1993 students who studied the arts and music scored significantly higher than the national average on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Participation in music performance and other artistic pursuits elicited scores of 31 to 50 points higher for the math and verbal scores.

The administrators owe an apology to the faculty members who spent so many hours preparing the students, the students who spent so many hours rehearsing and creating, and the families and friends who were disappointed. The students performed well. The arts are important. Let us give them the same respect we give other elements of education.

Advisory Committee Approves Greenbush Species Study

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The advisory committee has approved a $2,000 transfer to the town's Greenbush mitigation committee to identify and document the existence of vernal pools on the MBTA's right of way. Advisory committee members approved the study by a 4-3 vote.

Mitigation committee member Michael Dick said the funds would also be used to train high school students to identify vernal pools and endangered species near the tracks. Dick said the high school students would receive hands-on training as amateur biologists, while contributing information to the town's open space plan.

"We discovered in the course of the open space study that there may be vernal pools along the T's right of way," Dick said. "Vernal pools are esoteric things which are wet in the spring and dry up in the summer. Certain amphibious species survive in vernal pools."

Dick said the study would identify and study rare, endangered and threatened species along the Greenbush Line.

> 'Vernal pools are esoteric things which are wet in the spring and dry up in the summer. Certain amphibious species survive in vernal pools.'
> — Michael Dick, Greenbush Mitigation Committee.

Dick said the existence of any vernal pools would not stop the Greenbush project, but it would force the T to give special consideration to those areas.

Andrew Brennan, the MBTA's manager of environmental affairs, told town officials he doesn't believe there are any endangered or threatened species along the right of way. Brennan said the town would have to provide proof that these species existed for the MBTA to provide special consideration.

Advisory committee member Ken Ingbert wanted to know if the MBTA, the Department of Environmental Protection or some other government agency would pay for the study.

Dick said the MBTA was not required to pay for the study, and would not even adhere to town bylaws.

"From the beginning the conservation commission has been concerned that the T will fill more wetlands than is necessary," Dick said. "The T is not required to follow our bylaws either. The T does not have a good record of finding things that will slow it down."

Laxmen Look to Playoff Season

Lacrosse Team is as Strong as it Has Been in Years

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

The devastating spring blizzard may have done the job in delaying the start of the high school's spring sports season, but it did nothing in dampening the optimism of a solid Cohasset High lacrosse team.

The Skippers are as sound a squad as they've been in a long time. The offense should provide plenty of punch throughout the spring, while the speed it possesses could make transitions nearly unstoppable.

Cohasset, the smallest team in the state to qualify for the tourney last season, has what head coach Ken Ekberg feels is its best team in several years. And you can't lessen the importance of Cohasset's overall experience, both in regular-season play and playoffs.

The Skippers have no real weak spots in any particular area and have a seasoned goaltender with Ely Kahn between the posts. Add 40-goal scorer Jamie Buick and Jon Lacks to the mix and Cohasset could advance further than the opening round, where it has lost two tight games to Weymouth in consecutive years.

Ekberg was impressed with what looks to be a particularly tough defensive squad. The defense stood out in the Skippers' final exhibition game against Boston College High. And while no scores are kept during the scrimmages, it was Cohasset who netted the most goals and contained B.C. High's offense. The Skippers also scrimmaged Waltham and Sandwich.

"Defensively, we're heading in the right direction," Ekberg said.

Kahn, one of the team's tri captains, is the backbone of the defense and is one of the top goaltenders in the state. The Harvard-bound senior has put

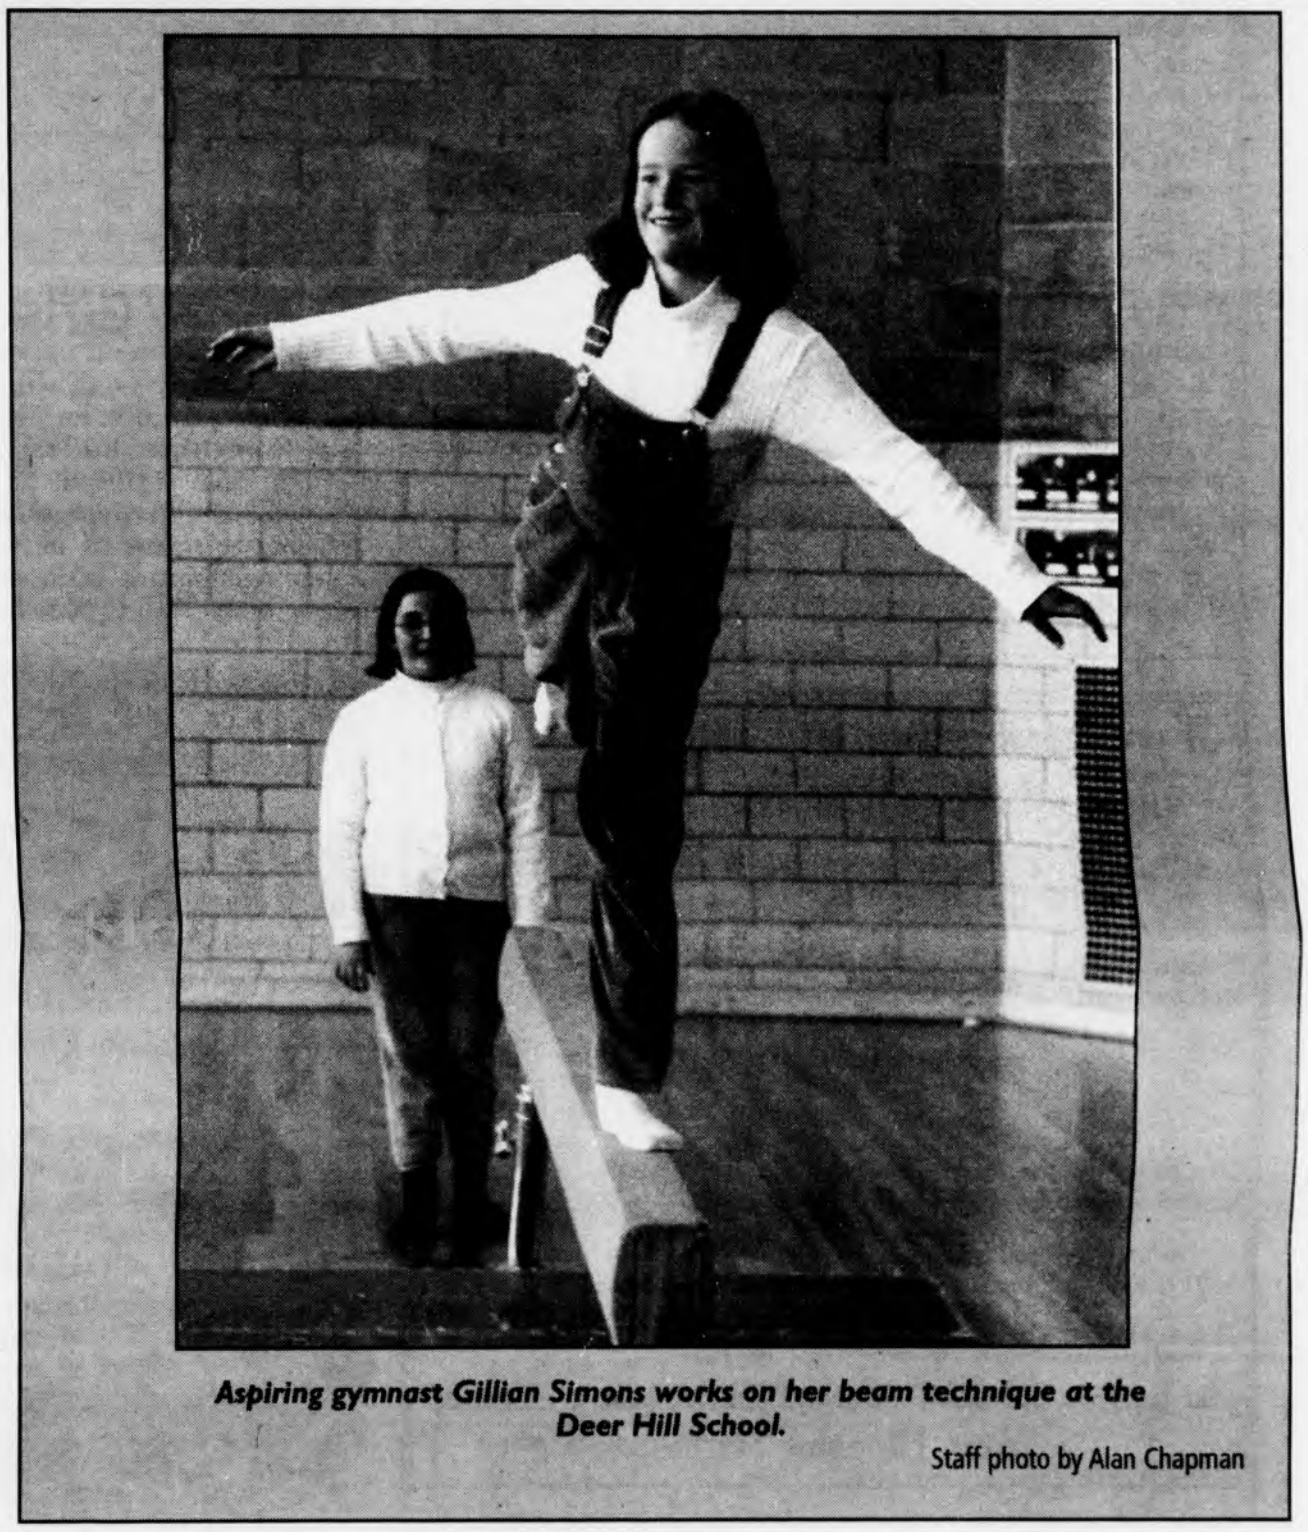
21st Road Race By-the-Sea and Road



The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to announce that the 21st Annual 10K Road Race By-the-Sea and Walk will be held Sunday, April 6.

This year's race is under the direction of Tom Gruber and Roy Fitzsimmons. The proceeds go to the many intown projects that Rotary supports. More than 800 runners are expected from all over New England. The start of the road race will be at 1 p.m. from the Cohasset Common. There will be free T-shirts and refreshments for all registered runners.

The road walk starts at 10 a.m. from Sandy Beach. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Applications are available at Curtis Liquors, Good Sport, Noble's Camera Shops or from the Cohasset Rotary, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

The deadline for pre-registration is April 1. Pre-registration fee is $12. Post-registration fee is $15. For race questions, call Austin Lyne at (617) 383-6550. Residents are urged to restrain dogs and to discourage children from skateboarding or riding bikes along the route since they present hazards to the runners.

If you would like to join or address the membership of Rotary, please send a note to President, Cohasset Rotary Club, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

EXTRA POINTS/Joe Reardon

Blizzard Leaves Teams in The Lurch

They were supposed to be on the tracks and baseball fields, kicking off the spring sports season.

So what do we get instead? Only the third biggest blizzard on record. Instead of planting flowers people are shoveling out mountains of snow in their driveways.

South Shore high school athletes had the day off from classes but it was hardly fun in the sun. They weren't taking trips to Aruba, Jamaica or Florida. They were clearing walkways and stairs.

What Mother Nature spared us from in the winter she more than made up with on Monday night and Tuesday.

And it's put quite a fly in the sports season ointment. Baseball and softball coaches not only have to wait for the white stuff to disappear, but then must twiddle their thumbs while the infield changes from a pudding consistency to dirt. There's really no other choice for them. Can you picture how embarrassing it'd be for the home team if its starting lineup sank into the mud in the opening game of the season with only its caps sitting lightly on the quagmire? Talk about a sports program having to start from scratch, not to mention having to forfeit the game entirely. There's nothing quite as disheartening as losing on opening day. Having your whole team disappear in thick mud only adds insult to injury.

Coaches, though, refuse to let the weather conditions outside affect their team's workouts for any lengthy amount of time.

Take it from someone who played for East Junior High School in Braintree in seventh and eighth grade: It's not always fun.

Practices moved in the gymnasium back then. Coaches still utilize the gym as well as they can when the weather forces them inside.

I learned very quickly a gymnasium floor was meant for bouncing a basketball, not fielding groundballs. A routine play on a diamond becomes an entirely new experience inside. Balls travel at speeds of up to MACH 3 when they ricochet off a gymnasium floor. Alex Rodriguez would be fending for his life, forget a high school shortstop.

Instead of live pitching, batters have no choice but to swing at wiffle balls popping out of a machine.

By the end of the week, temperatures are expected to creep into the 60s. The meltdown will be well under way. Spring will battle the remnants of winter with the sports season lying in wait.

Hopefully, the baseball fields will be in good enough shape for teams to jump right into their games. Them more games that are canceled, the more of strain put on the pitching staffs.

Last spring several games were postponed because of driving rains. As a result, teams were forced to play four and five games per week, in order to get enough in before the tourney deadline. Thin pitching staffs were used to excess because games piled up. Sore and tired arms inevitably developed. The MIAA will have to be more reasonable in scheduling games if injuries are to be avoided.

But that's the worst scenario. Chances are, the fields will be in good enough playing condition where the games can be strung out at more forgiving intervals.

Good luck to all the spring-sports athletes. This snowstorm will be a distant memory in late May. For now, we just have to grin and dealt the hand we were dealt. Only in New England.

Playoff Season

in a solid year's worth of lacrosse and Ekberg said the results aren't hard to see.

"It's obvious all the work he put into the game has move it to a higher level," Ekberg said.

Fellow tri-captain Matt Belson will spend much of the season taking faceoffs and covering the opponent's top offensive player. Belson plays the entire game and is strong and versatile. After a year of prep school, Doug Cameron is back on the squad. Like Belson, Cameron also is very quick and is fully capable of covering proven goal scorers.

As for Lacks, Ekberg has seen enough of his play over the past few years to put him into a category of his own.

"He's the best all-around lacrosse player we've ever had," he said.

Lacks should play every minute of every game for the Skippers and has the responsibility of running Cohasset's offense. He's ambidextrous when it comes to getting off shots and is extremely tough to cover as a result. Lacks' quickness is a major strength and he can take hits as well as he gives them out.

Ekberg said he's just as vital in his captain role.

"The other kids look to him because of the type of player he is and the type of kid he is," he said.

Bob Stansell, who moves strong and hard to the left, complements Lacks nicely, giving Cohasset an obvious strength moving the ball upfield.

Matt O'Connor's strength lies in his defense, but is a good playmaker as well, bringing good balance to the midfield section. Dave Noble brings size, speed and a good deal of athleticism to the lineup and Burke Davis has the "savvy" and an "innate understanding of athletics and positional play," to help further strengthen the Skippers.

As good as the team looks on paper, Ekberg said it still has to play hard against a tough schedule. Cohasset plays Hingham, Falmouth and Duxbury twice each, and meets Barnstable, Sandwich, Marshfield and Norwell.

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

1997 Summer Sports Camps and Programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports camps during the summer of 1997 for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18.

Baseball Camp

Monday, June 23 to Friday, June 27, ages 7 to 12, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., price $140. Ages 5 to 7, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., price $75. Price includes a camp shirt. Directed by South Shore Baseball Club.

Basketball Camp

Tuesday, July 8 to Friday, July 11, grades four to six, price $120. Monday, July 14 to Friday, July 18, grades six to nine, price $150. Price includes a camp shirt. Cohasset High School. Directed by CHS Coach Ron Ford and staff.

V.I.P. Soccer Camps

Monday, July 21 to Friday, July 25, front field, CHS. Soccer ABC's, ages 4 and 5, 8:00 to 9:30 a.m., price $50. Half day program, ages 6 and 7, 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., price $80. Price includes a camp shirt. Directed by V.I.P. soccer—Dave Pike and Ross Irwin.

South Shore Soccer Camps

Both weeks are optional for boys and girls. Monday, Aug. 4 to Friday, Aug. 8, ages 8 to 18. Monday, Aug. 11 to Friday, Aug. 15, ages 8 to 18, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., price $175, Cohasset High School. Price includes camp shirt and ball. Directed by SSSC—Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz.

Lacrosse—Full Contact Clinic

Monday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., grades five and six (entering fall '97), Deer Hill School, June 30 to Aug. 18, price $35. Full equipment necessary, gloves, helmet, pads and stick.

All camps have individual application forms. Call the recreation office at 383-6791, or stop by the town hall for more information.

Little League Parade, May 3

The Cohasset Little League will hold its annual opening day parade Saturday, May 3. The parade starts at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., Cohasset, at 8:15 a.m. and progresses up Main Street to Barnes Field.

The Deer Hill School Band will lead the parade, followed by an excess of 300 players, a fire truck with last year's champions and our special guest, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. We expect more than 1,000 town residents to participate in the parade and ceremony.

CYBA Announces Scholarship

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Association is pleased to announce its first $500 scholarship award. Candidates will be former Little League members. One scholarship will be awarded to the recipient at the start of his/her second semester of freshman year. Applications will be available at the high school guidance office. Deadline for the applications must be returned by April 30. Call Bob Moody at 383-0385 for more information.

Summer Hockey Registration

Cohasset Summer Hockey registration is scheduled for April 12 at Deerhill School from 9-11a.m. This is the only opportunity to sign-up for the try-out team. The leagues run from the end of June to the middle of August. The try-out cost of $10 is non-refundable. For more information, call Bob Moody at 383-0385.

Summer Playground Camp

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is pleased to announce that Ms. Kristin Wrye will again serve as director for the Summer Playground Program for children ages 3-1/2 to 12.

The recreation commission has also established fees for the 1997 playground program which will remain the same as the 1996 program and are as follows:

5- to 12-year-olds: $150 for first child ($275 for non-residents).

3- to 5-year-olds: $125 for first child.

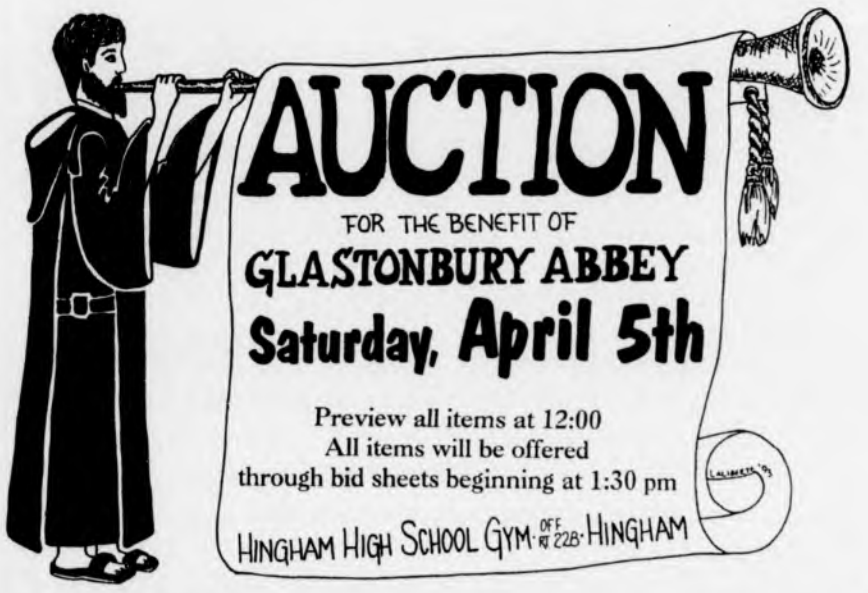
ACTIVITY FEE

A $35 mandatory, non-refundable activity fee, separate from program fee, to be paid at registration, will cover most special events and a T-shirt. A separate check will be necessary.

– Limited enrollment has been set for each program.

– Non-residents are taken on a space-available basis, and there are no discounts available for multiple children.

– All children must be toilet trained.



PROGRAMS

5- to 12-year-olds, full day program, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Children must have been born between Aug. 31, 1984 and Dec. 31, 1991 to qualify. The 5- to 7-year-old program will be held at the Joseph Osgood School; the 8- to 12-year-old program, at the Deer Hill School.

Pre-school 3- to 5-year-old, half day program, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Children must have been born between Jan. 1, 1992 and March 1, 1994 to qualify. This program will take place at the Deer Hill School.

REGISTRATION

Registration will be held Monday, June 16 through Thursday, June 19, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m.; and Thursday evening, June 19, 5 to 7 p.m.

Benefit for Hull Lifesaving Museum

As America's oldest commissioned Naval ship prepares to sail for the first time in 100 years, her captain, Commander Michael Beck, will be speaking about the ship's illustrious past and her even greater future, Friday, April 18, 7 to 9 p.m., at the Lighthouse Keeper's Residence, Government Island, Cohasset, Speaking to benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum Inc., which has worked with Constitution crew members for two years teaching them open-water rowing and sailing skills, Commander Beck will address the audience in full 1812 dress uniform. A gracious and exciting speaker, he also will welcome and answer all questions regarding the ship and her upcoming historic sail in July, 1997.

Museum members are requested to make a minimum donation of $30 per person, non-members $35. Delicious hors d'oeuvres, wine, and soft drinks will be served. A final pleasure will be the view of the sun setting over Cohasset Harbor at 7:30 p.m. For information call Barbie Guild, (617) 925-5433.

Raffle to Benefit Community Center

It's a win/win situation. Some lucky person could win as much as $25,000 and the South Shore Community Center will raise an equal amount of money in a 50/50 raffle to kick off during the Cohasset Road Race by-the-sea Sunday, April 6.

Tickets are $100 each with a goal of 500 tickets to be sold. Ticket donations are tax-deductible. The winner will be selected at Cohasset's Harborfest Sunday, June 15. The winner need not be present to win.

The South Shore Community Center is a non-profit organization offering a wide range of educational and entertaining programs for infants to seniors.

Tickets can be purchased at the center, located at 3 Main St. in the center of Cohasset. Cash, check or credit cards are accepted. Tickets can also be obtained by calling the center at (617) 383-0088.

Hingham Civic to Produce 'South Pacific'

Hingham Civic Music Theatre will present "South Pacific" May 2 and 10 at 8 p.m., May 4 at 2 p.m., and May 11 at 3 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium.

"South Pacific" is set in an island paradise during World War II, where two parallel love stories are threatened by the dangers of prejudice and war. Adapted from the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by James A. Michener, "Tales Of The South Pacific," this musical is famous for such songs as "Some Enchanted Evening," "There is Nothin' Like a Dame," "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Out-a My Hair," and everyone's favorite, "Honey Bun."

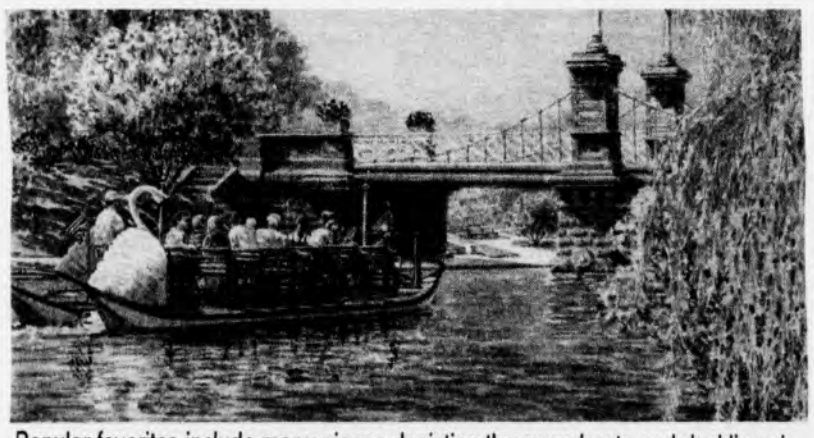
"South Pacific's" cast members come from numerous South Shore towns including Braintree, Bridgewater, Cohasset, Hanover, Harwich, Hingham, Hull, Plymouth, Quincy, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Get your tickets early. It is expected that "South Pacific" will sell out quickly. Presale ticket prices are $10. They may be purchased at Hingham Public Library, Nobles Camera Shop in Hingham Square, Olden's Pharmacy in So. Weymouth's Columbian Square, or from any cast member. Group sale tickets are available by calling (617) 749-4540. All tickets sold at the door will be $12.

Cruising Lecture to Benefit CHS ExCeL Program

Saturday, April 5, at 8 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, Walton Hall, the Cohasset Yacht Club will present an illustrated slide and chart lecture by Bim Holt who cruised for four weeks on the Hudson River, Erie Canal, Lake Ontario, St. Lawrence Seaway, Richelieu River and Lake Champlain.

All proceeeds will benefit the ExCeL alternate school program at Cohasset High School. The ExCel (Experimental Center for Learning) program is an interdisciplinary accredited program for students in grades 10 to 12 offering unique marine experimental activities and traditional coursework in science, social studies and English. Students may enroll in the program for one, two or three years. Course work includes field studies and lab work in fundamental principles of oceanography, physical science, navigation, aquatic environmantal science and nautical science. Outdoor activities include learning to crew and care for a traditional pulling boat. Students also learn the fundamentals of boat building by working on current wooden boat projects.



This is the second year that the Cohasset Yacht Club has presented an illustrated slide cruising lecture open to the public to benefit the ExCeL program. Advance reservations may be made by telephone before April 1 by calling Meg Bertolami at 383-2968, $8 for adults and $4 for students under 18. Unreserved tickets at the door will cost $10 for adults and $5 for students under 18.

Eight Weeks to Optimum Health

"A proven program for taking full advantage of your body's natural healing power." Following the guidelines set forth in Dr. Andrew Weil's book "Spontaneous Healing," a support group will be forming to pursue OPTIMUM HEALTH! Each week of Dr. Weil's approach includes five basic areas of focus. There will be an assigned "Project" which includes such things as studying the local water quality and taking a steam bath. The second area concerns "Diet" where we will explore cutting back on meat and oil, and increasing fruits and vegetables. The "Exercise" component will focus on a gradually increasing amount of time for walking each day. We'll also be attending to our "Mental/Spiritual" health through such things as deep breathing, "news fasts" and bringing flowers into our day. And finally, there will be an "Optional" challenge including such things as vitamin and plant supplements, tonics for specific minor health problems and forms of fasting.

Rev. Gary Ritts will be facilitating the support group to begin its nine weekly sessions Wednesday, April 16, 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. It is recommended that each participant have their own copy of Dr. Weil's book, "Spontaneous Healing" (which contains the eight-week regimen and is available in paperback). His latest book, "Eight Weeks to Optimum Health," (hardback only) will be used as a supporting text. The program is free of charge and is open to the public. If you have any questions, would like a brochure or would like to register for the course, please stop by the church or call Rev. Ritts at 383-0345.

Pianist Goodman Presents Spring Concert

South Shore Conservatory presents pianist Mark Goodman in concert Sunday, April 13, at 4 p.m. in Cox Hall at the Hingham campus.

With this recital, Goodman, a faculty member at South Shore Conservatory since 1981, completes his cycle of the "Catalogue d'Oiseaux," a work by Olivier Messian describing the birdlife throughout France.

Other selections include music by Bach, Mozart and Ravel. "Miroirs" by Ravel includes the popular "Alborada del gracioso."

Admission to the Goodman concert is free and open to the general public. South Shore Conservatory, located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham, is handicapped-accessible.

For more information, call (617) 749-7565, Ext. 16.

Annual Great Chefs Event April 9

Tickets are now on sale for the 10th annual Great Chefs of the South Shore fund-raiser to benefit the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association. The event will be held Wednesday, April 9, beginning at 6 p.m., at the South Shore Country Club, Hingham.

Chefs from some of the South Shore's finest restaurants and caterers will donate food for the evening. This year will also feature a very special wine tasting hosted by Bare Cove Wine Annex. Proceeds will help provide home health care to people in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Weymouth and other South Shore towns who cannot otherwise afford to pay for it.

Guests will enjoy chefs' specialties from Abbadessa's, Fireking, The Cookery, Jake's Seafood, Special Events Catering, Nino's Steak and Chops, Star's on Hingham Harbor, Joe's American Bar & Grill, Papa Razzi, P.J.'s Country House, Tosca, The Whiton House, Z Chefs Caterers, and others.

Tickets for the event are $60 per person, which includes all the gourmet delicacies offered and the wine tasting. Tickets are limited and are available by calling 749-8755.

The Hingham Visiting Nurse Association is a Medicare-certified, non-profit, community-based agency providing home health care services to people in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Weymouth and surrounding South Shore towns.

WALKers Join the Fight Against MS

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society will kick off its biggest fund-raising event of the year — the MS WALKS — April 12 and 13, with people from all parts of the state joining in the fight against multiple sclerosis. Channel 5 meteorologist Dick Albert, the 1997 WALK Chair in the Commonwealth, expressed his appreciation to the people of Massachusetts walking to help those with MS.

MS, a chronic disease of the nervous system, wears away the control you have over your body. Symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. MS is most common in young adults, usually diagnosed between the ages of 20-40. More than a third of a million Americans are affected by this disease.

The 1997 WALKS, sponsored by WCVB Channel 5, the Tab Newspapers, Mix 98.5 radio, Couples and Sunburst Holidays, will take place in 15 communities throughout the state April 12 and 13, including Cohasset.

This year, more than 6,000 individuals and 450 teams are expected to join the WALKS, helping to raise more than $600,000 to support the mission of the society: ending the devastating effects of multiple sclerosis. Teams come from corporations, small businesses, churches and civic groups, giving co-workers and friends a chance to have fun while helping those affected by multiple sclerosis.

For information on joining the fight against multiple sclerosis by walking, forming a team or volunteering at a WALK site, call the Massachusetts Chapter at (800) 493-WALK.

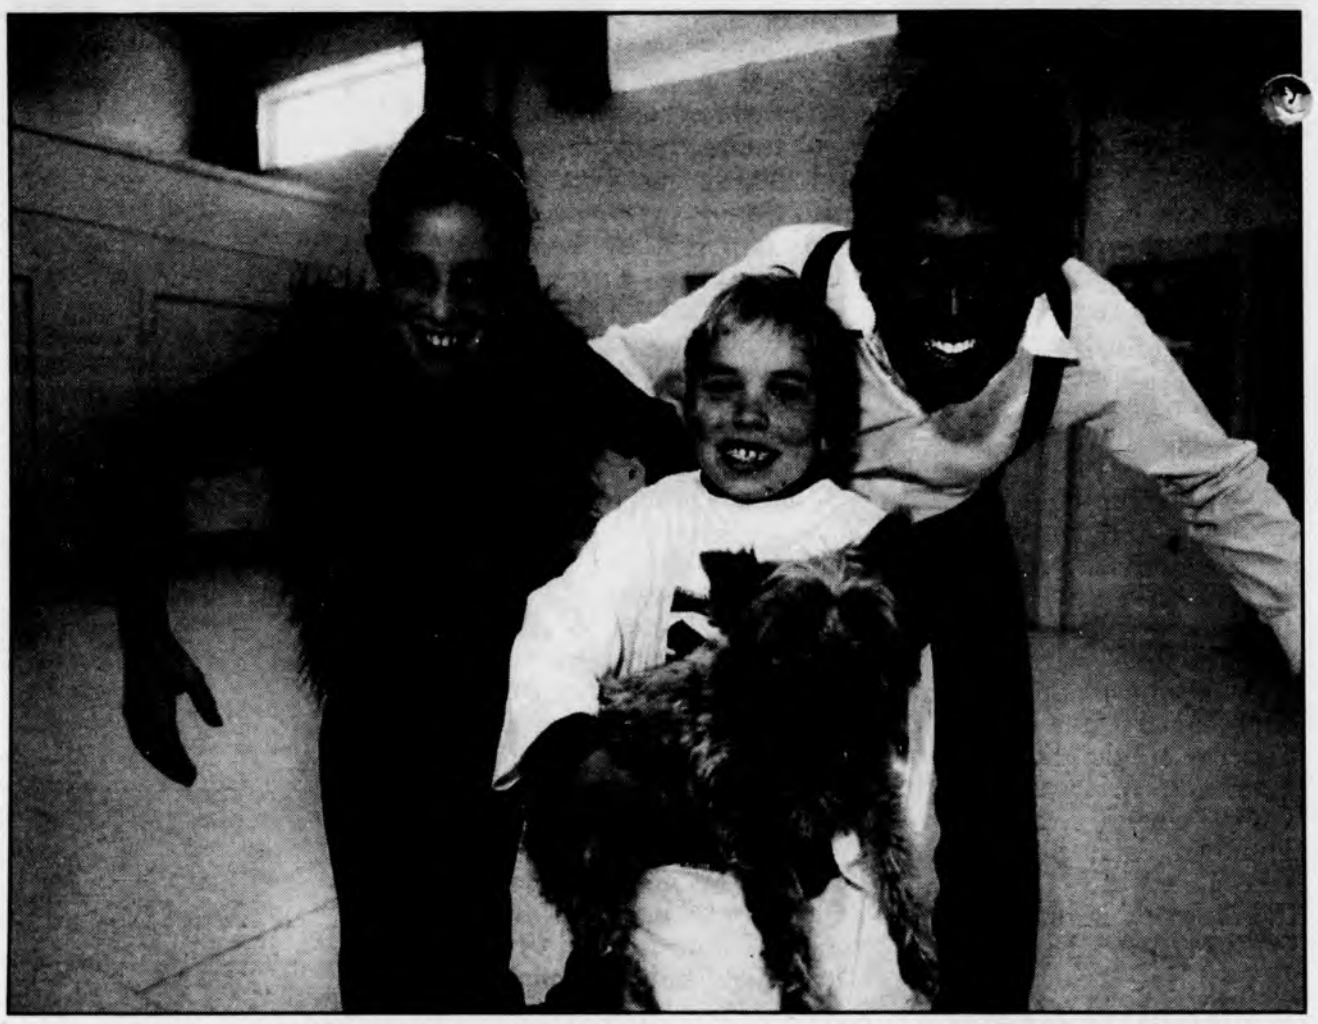
By Melissa Boynton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Entering town hall for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's rehearsal of the Wizard of Oz, I expected a crowd of unruly and bored munchkins, a stuffed Toto, and amateurish sets.

Instead I was treated to a group of children immersed in their roles, and a bonafide terrier named Toto enviably trained to calmly reside in Dorothy's basket.

The sets were also impressive. Nancy Wheeler, the Scenic Designer, has managed to capture the transition from the pre-Oz black & white setting to the Technicolor Emerald City in a way you'll have to see to appreciate.

To boot, not to alarm the local fire department, the Wicked Witch of the West played by Letitial Riel of Norwell even hurls what appear to be real fire balls at the Scarecrow!



Obviously this was my first brush with the Cohasset Drama Club whose roots reach back into the early 1920's. The troop is both serious and playful in its approach to this production. Members spend scene breaks in the bowels of Town Hall encouraging and tormenting one another with thespian humor. They seem like one big happy family and with surprising frequency I find that they really are. Glenda , Auntie Em and the Wizard have all parented munchkins and believe it or not, Uncle Henry is father to a flying monkey! Should the genetic history of this Oz be traced, I am quite sure that more tangled roots would emerge.

While attempting an interview with Glenda the Good Witch, played by Holly Harris of Cohasset, her husband Charlie Dattola scenery assistant, kept popping by with comments like "Now you're not telling her about my stint on Broadway are you?" or "Forget about those Brannaugh years, they're really not worth mentioning!" They bantered back and forth so quickly that my pen couldn't keep up.

Their son, Kyle Dattola Harris, 8, is the serious stage player in the family complete with immodesty. When asked what his favorite scene is in the play he responds, "Mine. The munchkin scene is definitely the best!" Trying to get to the little boy that resides inside the munchkin I ask, "Why is it that your mom makes a good Glenda?" Expecting to hear because she is nice, sweet and kind, he surprises me with, "Because she is a fine actor." The munchkin shell finally cracks when I ask him why the munchkin scene is the best, Kyle responds with a smile, " Because I get to be on stage with my Mom!" The family has been involved in one way or another in the past three spring productions.

Uncle Henry, played by Ed Lappen of Cohasset, is pleased to be back on stage. He describes his 17-year history with the drama club by saying, "I really didn't expect to get back on stage before my girls hit college. I took a break from performing due to the time constraint. In addition to running a business, I also chose to spend time with by family. The practice schedule is tough."

It was his daughter's idea to audition. Mia Lieb-Lappen has worked bigger stages, namely the Boston Ballet's production of 'The Nutcracker' at the Wang Center. This past year was Mia's last with Nutcracker. Mia explains, "I had to decide between gymnastics and ballet, and I chose gymnastics." You will see her talent as a Flying Monkey in this production where she does round-offs, cartwheels and other dance moves. Ed was pleased by her decision to audition for the play. "It's great because it's something we can do together," he says, adding deadpanly, "I'm not much of a gymnast or a ballet dancer."

The wizard, played by Roland St. Claire-Barrie, has a British accent to further exaggerate the formality of the great Oz' speech pattern. The British-born actor sat in the hallway away from the hustle and bustle of Munchkinland as he studied his lines. He was happy to talk about both his past theatrical pursuits as well as those of his two daughters, Darby, 9, and Devon, 10. Darby plays a munchkin in this production. Both girls have a passion for the theater and have been interested in acting for quite a while.

Devon starred in the Wang Center's production of 'Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dream Coat' this past year. St. Clair jokes, "the little brat made it to Broadway before me."

They seem like one big happy family and with surprising frequency I find that they really are. Glenda , Auntie Em and the Wizard have all parented munchkins and believe it or not, Uncle Henry is father to a flying monkey!

Jessica McDonald of Hull, cast as the cowardly lion, demonstrates that April truly roars in like a lion. She uses physical comedy and a booming voice to demonstrate the lion's less than noble character flaw. McDonald, who received a theatre degree in '91 from the Catholic University of America in Washington D.C., has worn many hats with the club. She has directed Noel Coward's, 'Blithe Spirit' and starred in Dracula.

In this production she has a dual role, though officially the lion, she serves as a mentor to the junior members of the cast. You can see definite elements of her style in the Mayor of Munchkinland played by Lila McCormack. "It is amazing how strongly Jessica has influenced these kids." says Holly Harris, "Every time I look at Lyla McCormack, I see a young Jessica."

This production of the Wizard of Oz opens on Saturday April 5 and runs through April 13 at Scituate High School Auditorium. Tickets are $10 and are available at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset and Wilbur's in North Scituate.

Cohasset Food Pantry Serves Increasing Numbers

Approaching its fourth anniversary, the Cohasset Food Pantry finds the need still strong for food assistance to town residents, with an increase of 7 percent in families and individuals served during 1996.

Marjorie Steele, chairman of the Pantry's Steering Committee since its founding in 1993, reported that the Pantry made 467 distributions of food to family units averaging more than three individuals, during 1996, as compared with 438 in the previous year.

"There is clearly a continuing need for food assistance to some local families, and we are happy to be able to provide it through the generosity of individuals, institutions and businesses in town," Steele said.

The Pantry operates out of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue next to the town hall, and is open Tuesdays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m. Any Cohasset resident who meets limited income guidelines or who has special need is eligible to receive food at two-week intervals.

"The town has really opened its heart to those in need", Mrs. Steele said. "This service would not be possible without the generous contribution of food and funds by many individuals, groups and businesses, as well as the work of volunteers to stock and staff the pantry."

She singled out for special thanks the town's churches and schools which organize food collections; Stop & Shop, which supported the Pantry through a "Food For Friends" program; Jack Conway Co., Realtors; and Cohasset Imports Auto Dealers. A major contribution has come through the food collection by employees of the Cohasset Post Office which brought in hundreds of pounds of food picked up by route mail deliverers. This year's Post Office collection is scheduled for May 10 .

In addition to the donations through food drives, the Pantry uses contributed funds to purchase food at the Boston Food Bank at minimal cost and at local and area supermarkets.

Checking fine print on car deal is the lease you can do

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

If you could lease a Jaguar XJ6L and a Lexus LS400 for $699 a month each, which would you choose? Personal taste may dictate your decision; driving a Jaguar might connote a night at the opera; the Lexus, a family drive to the country. But which car is the best deal? And how do you find out?

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

For one thing, you shouldn't necessarily be seduced by the monthly rate. It alone will not help you determine if you are gettinga good deal; car leases are not simple. The fine print on the advertisements may hold notification of extra costs or payments that accompany the monthly fee.

Leases for those Jaguar and Lexus models mentioned above require you to pay a chunk of money up front. But some leasing companies allow you to pay the lump sum at the end of your lease; perhaps to lessen the initial blow. After all, one of the appealing features of leasing, versus taking out a loan to buy the car, is that you don't have to come up with the initial down payment.

Another common cost people tend to overlook is the acquisition fee — the amount the leasing company charges you for doing the processing and paperwork on your lease. For instance, a three-year lease for the Lexus LS400 includes an acquisition fee of $450, while the Jaguar XJ6L has none.

The most important features of a lease, however, are the purchase price, the interest rate, and the estimated depreciation of the car.

When the leasing company or manufacturer offers you a lease, they will quote you the retail price of the car.

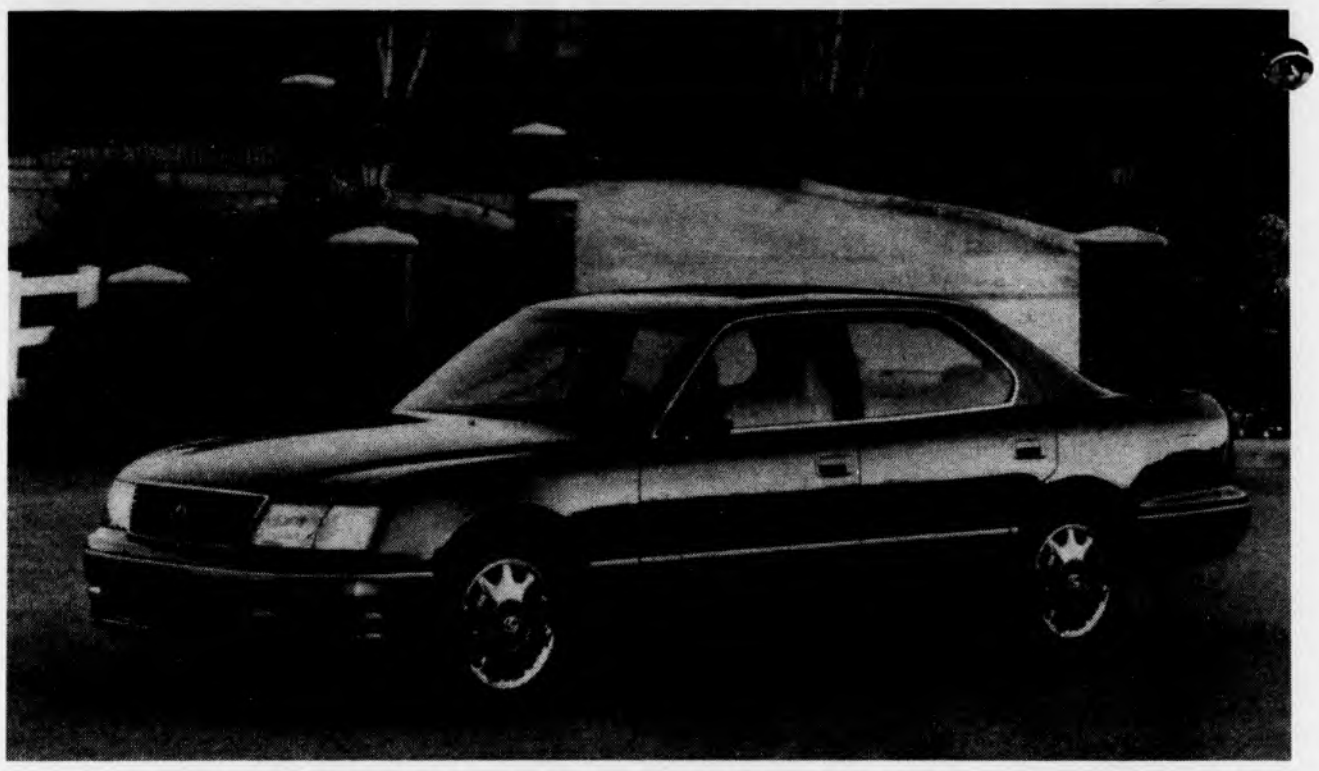
But, "make sure that vehicle purchase price is the same as what you would pay if you financed the car," says Steve Landau, a product manager at IntelliChoice, a California-based company that evaluates lease deals. "It shouldn't be more just because you are leasing."

The lessor derives your lease agreement from that purchase price. Basically the lessor charges you for the amount that the car should depreciate over the term of the lease (the standard length of an agreement is 36 months), the interest it will pay the manufacturer (it buys the car from the manufacturer and then leases it to you), plus other expenses. If the quoted purchase price is more than the manufacturer's suggested retail price, you will probably pay a higher rate to cover the depreciation of the extra value of the car.

"The primary thing that you pay for in the lease is depreciation," says Landau. "Everything else you pay goes into someone's pocket." So, the key to finding out whether you are getting a good deal is to determine how much of your money is going toward your car and how much is going into the pocket of the lessor.

Let's go back to the Jaguar XJ6L and the Lexus LS400. When you take into account the total-out-of-pocket costs over a three-year lease for both, the Lexus beats the Jaguar at first glance. Over the term of the lease, you would pay $27,863 for the Lexus and $29,480.56 for the Jaguar, according to IntelliChoice.

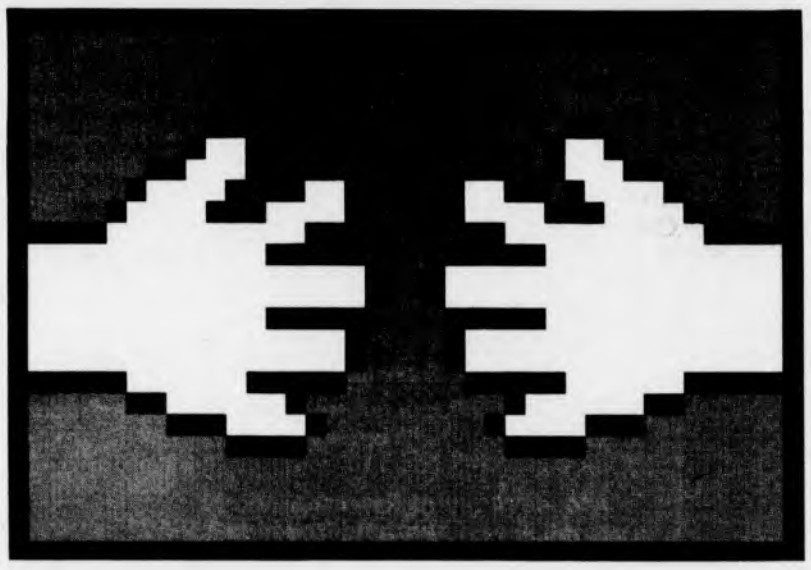
Since the manufacturer's suggested retail price of the Lexus is $57,537, while the Jaguar's is $60,010, it would make sense that the lease for the Lexus should be cheaper, right? And Jaguar has a back-end charge for mileage over 10,000 miles per year. According to IntelliChoice, if the consumer drives the car 12,000 miles per year, the Lexus would save the consumer $1,618 over the leasing period.



But wait a second. If you are searching for a bargain, look more closely. Look at the net interest rates on the leases as calculated by IntelliChoice: 3.576 percent for the Jaguar, and 7.732 percent for the Lexus.

If you lease the Jaguar, more of your money will go toward paying for the car itself rather than into the lessor's pockets to cover expenses (interest fees plus other extra costs). This kind of bargain lease is often a product of manufacturer incentives; for example, the manufacturer may offer low-interest loans to dealers because they want to get the cars off their lots and make way for a new model.

Another way to get a good deal is to look for leasing companies that write-off less of the car's value during the three years of the lease than is the industry standard. They are taking the risk that the resale market for the car will be strong, and that they can recoup the lost depreciation costs.



Let's suppose that the conventional wisdom in the car industry - whether right or wrong - maintains that the Lexus LS400 will be worth $30,000 after three years. A leasing company may decide that, with the used car market on the rise, this model Lexus will be easy to sell for more than $30,000, perhaps $33,000, at the end of the lease. The lessor might pass on that $3,000 savings to you by reducing the depreciation costs it charges.

True it's a gamble, but it's on their part. You don't take on the risk, just the benefits. The source of an even better bargain may be the residual value, or what the lessor has forecast the car will be worth after the three years have passed.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that RICHARD L. BRICKLEY, Jr., of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 a.m. in the forenoon on May 7, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this twenty-sixth day of March, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

Considering a Medicare HMO?

If you're a Medicare beneficiary, you've probably thought about joining a Medicare HMO.
Medicare HMOs offer many benefits, but they may limit your choices.
Before you join a Medicare HMO, you'll want to ask the health plan questions like, "Will I still be able to see my regular doctor?," or "Where will I be hospitalized?"
Give us a call if you'd like more information on how to select an HMO. We'd be happy to talk with you about your Medicare options and to send you free information.

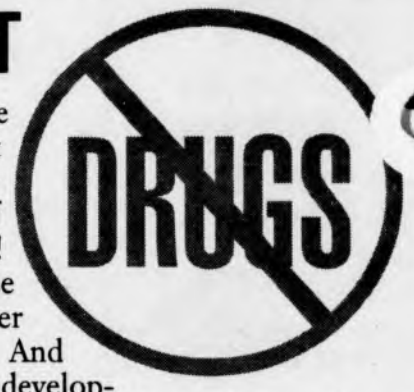
STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Melissa Bates

It is with great pleasure that I nominate Melissa Bates as "Student of the Month.'



In the short time that I have come to know "Batesy" I have realized she is a truly unique person. While her academic record is unblemished, as evidenced by her perennial position on the high honor roll and straight "A" average, there is another exemplary side to this notable young person.

Recently, Melissa took it upon herself to make a difference beyond the walls of CHS by raising awareness and funds in an effort to find a cure for AIDS. Through her own initiative she made flyers, solicited the help of friends and classmates and sacrificed a good deal of her own time to this worthy cause. History has shown it is the small steps that individual leaders take, such as Melissa, that result in meaningful change in society.

For her courage and commitment to issues and tasks inside and outside the classroom, I proudly nominate Melissa Bates as "Student of the Month."

— Mr. Newkirk.

DRUG FACT

Kids who abuse drugs are losers every way you look at it. They're wasting themselves. Kids under 12 years of age are getting into drugs! Their grades suffer because they can't study or pay proper attention in the classroom. And their emotional and physical development can be damaged at a critical period in their lives. Drugs like marijuana, alcohol and cocaine are often "GATEWAY" or "STEPPING STONE" drugs. Which means their abuse can lead users into other drugs like Angel Dust, LSD, amyl nitrate, tranquilizers, sleeping pills, amphetamines, hashish, heroin and other narcotics. If we can stop drug abuse at the experimental stages, we'll be getting at the problem before it gets a grip on our kids.

Mark Chapman Tops Math Group

On March 11, 63 sixth graders took the New England Math League test at the Deer Hill School. Mark Chapman had the highest score, and the other four high scores were held by Betsy Reynolds, David Curry, Ian Kidder, and Anne Barber. These five scores are added together and sent to the New England Math League for their regional competition.

The New England Math League provides an open opportunity to compete in math. The test is a challenging one involving both mathematics and critical thinking. Math contests for the fourth and fifth grade students will be held in early spring. Cohasset's participation in the New England Math League was made possible with funds contributed by the PSO.

Teen Center 'Wizard' Benefit

Wednesday, April 9 at 7 p.m. the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present the musical "The Wizard of Oz" in the auditorium of the Scituate High School to benefit the Cohasset Teen Center. The tickets are $10, and are available from Betsy Connolly, 383-1248, the recreation department or at the door.

Attend this fabulous show and support the many talented young actors and actresses from Cohasset. The Cohasset Teen Center appreciates community support.

PSO Authorizes Funds for Schools

The Cohasset PSO recently voted the expenditure of $8,300 towards projects in the Cohasset Schools. Five projects will receive these funds. Authorized were the following expenditures: $4,400 towards new stage curtains for both the high school and Deer Hill School auditoriums, $1,500 to the Cohasset Education Foundation for a Language Lab carrel, $1,000 for the Fitness Center at the high school, $800 for high school band uniforms and $600 for interior security gates at the Deer Hill School.

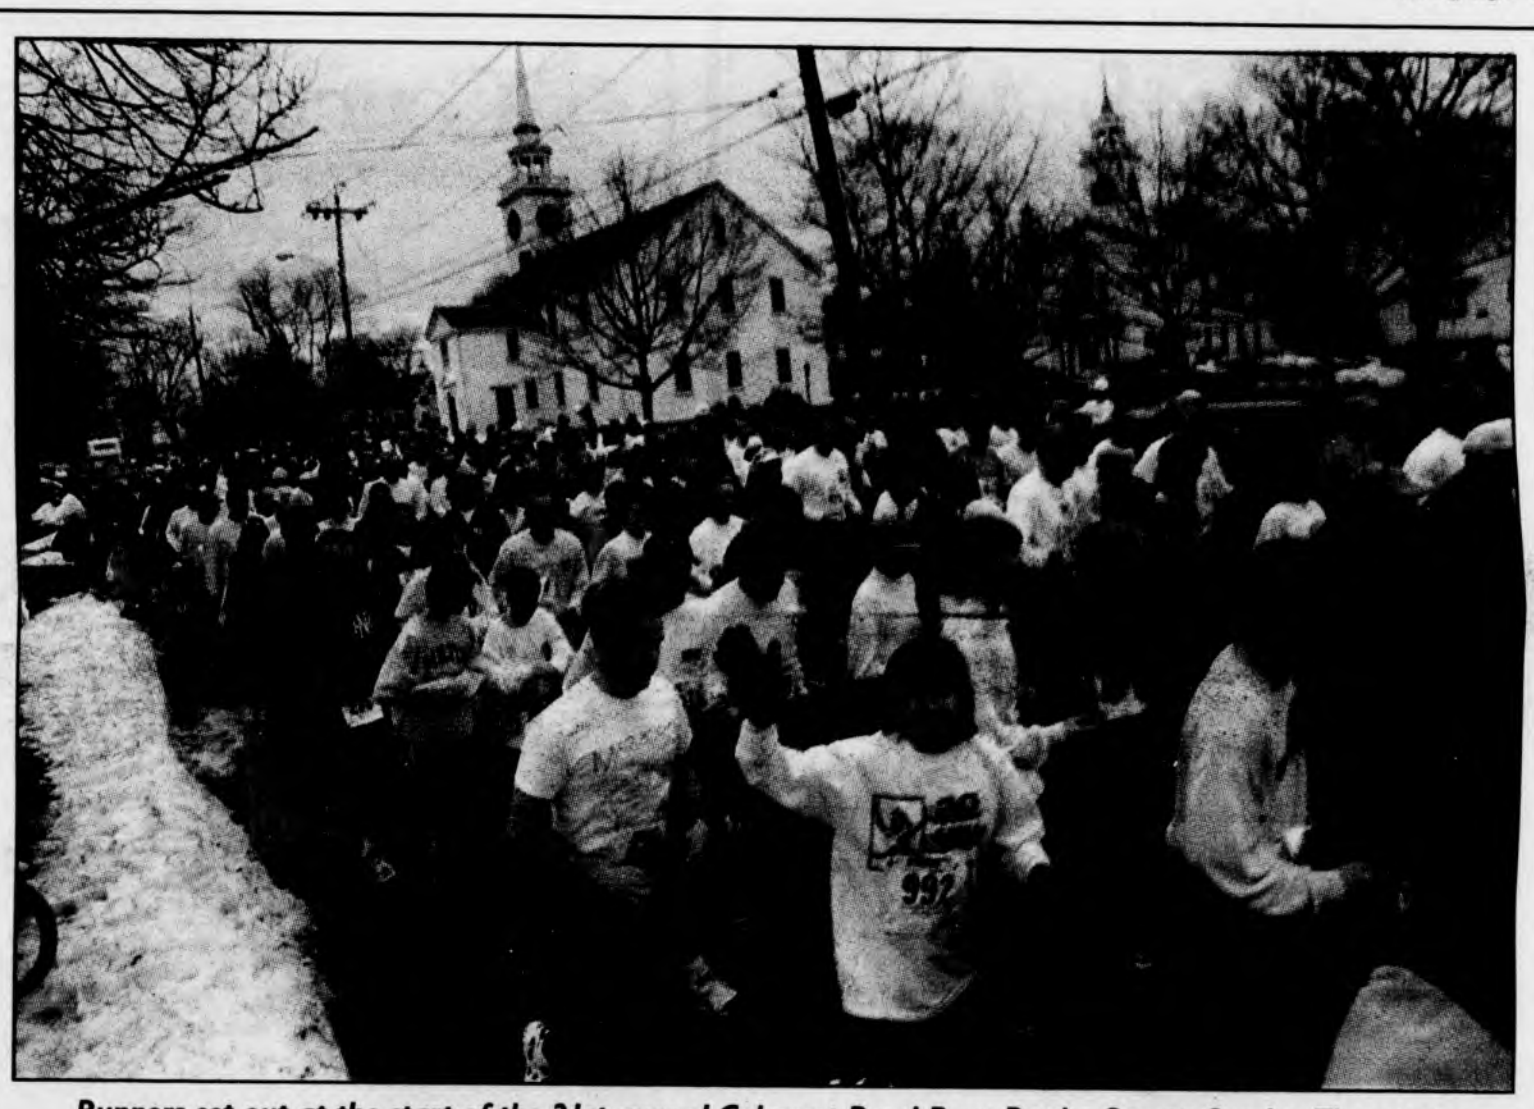
Majority Opts for Town Manager

Voters Decide Against More Study

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset should have a town manager by July 1.



That's what a majority of town meeting voters decided Saturday. The 75-61 vote decision, however, wasn't reached without impassioned debate.

Proponents, including the Government Structure Committee charged with examining the town manager form of government for Cohasset, said the time is right for the town to have a chief administrative/financial officer to oversee the day-to-day operations of the town.

They cited 40 percent cost overruns at the DPW garage, recreational park promises for the Hagerty Property which have not come to fruition after four years, and soaring legal bills to fight the expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, as examples of poor management at town hall.

While agreeing in concept, opponents including a

Village Station Site Rejected

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Town meeting dealt a serious blow to proponents of a commuter rail station in Cohasset Village when voters rejected 78-57 a study and a non-binding vote on the May 3 ballot to reconsider the downtown site.

The board of selectmen voted in February to support a station on Route 3A only. But village business owners and some residents continued to support the village station as a way to revitalize the downtown area.

Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for the MBTA, has stated previously the T is looking only at the site on Route 3A.

Dean Rizzo, chairman of the mitigation committee which supported the Route 3A location, personally favored a train station in the village.

"I believe location is very important and it should be based on all the information and not fears and opinions," Rizzo said. "I believe the Route 3A decision was premature."

Rizzo said he shared the concerns of village residents

Downed Tree Cleanup Continues

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

After clearing Cohasset's streets of more than 20 inches of snow during last week's blizzard, public works crews have been out straight trying to clean up dozens of downed tree limbs blocking motorists' way.

A time-consuming venture, tree cleanup will not be complete until well into next week, said Public Works Director Harold Litchfield.

Though uncertain of the total damage to trees in town, Litchfield said, "We have plenty of it."

The blizzard of 1997's high winds and heavy, wet snow caused extensive breakage to all kinds of trees, from Maples to Evergreens, he said. The areas hardest hit by the storm include Beach and Nickols roads, Atlantic Avenue and South and North Main streets, he said.

Five crew members, equipped with tree cutters and chippers, started work on the town's roads Saturday.

"They have been working steady on limbs," Litchfield said. "They're going to start working a few hours at night

Resignation is on Hold

Selectmen tabled action on a letter of resignation from the drug & alcohol committee this week. In a long letter, chairman Craig Muir said he will step down out of frustration that the committee does not get enough community support (see letter page 10).

Selectman Nan Roth, who is liaison to the committee, said the group was "set at sea" and needed a focus.

And Selectman Michael Sullivan asked how they could help.

"We need to take a role to bring people together and put some plan together," he said.

The D&A committee met last night after the Mariner went to press.

Brush Brought to Landfill

Residents may take only brush that is four feet or less in length to the Recycling Transfer Facility for burning during regular business hours from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Wednesday through Sunday.

This does not include contractors, who should dispose of brush in their usual manner. Any town trees or branches will be removed by DPW employees.

Festival on Common Set

Rhonda Myers, coordinator of the Festival on the Common, told selectmen Monday that the festival will be June 20-22. She obtained permission, contingent on approval by the Peter Laugelle of the park department, to install another tent on the far side of the common by the flag pole where children's art will be exhibited.

Selectmen will also allow organizers to investigate installing an electrical box on that side of the common so vendors can be hooked in there rather than running power from First Parish Church.

Myers said, with the new arrangement, wires could be placed away from the walking areas.

Common Softball Game on Hold

Selectmen may ask Linda Simms of the First Parish Church to come before the board to discuss plans for a church picnic, softball game and races on the common.

Selectmen said usually organized games are not allowed on the common and they are worried about setting a precedent. But they acknowledged that First Parish has helped with community events and therefore they are considering the request.

But Selectman Michael Sullivan pointed out, they might have to open the common up to all churches for their activities.

They decided to ask that other locations be explored and if that's not feasible, to ask Simms to come in and discuss the proposal.

Transient Vendor Gets License

Selectmen authorized issuance of a transient vendor's license for Brad and Pam's Ice Cream this week.

Brad Martinson asked that both his trucks be licensed. Selectmen agreed to issue one license and would figure out some kind of sticker arrangement so both trucks could be interchangeable.

"Good luck and have a good season," Selectman Michael Sullivan told Martinson.

Roth's Comments Criticized

Ed Brennock, a veteran, sharply criticized Selectman Nan Roth this week for comments she made about there being enough war memorials in town. She made the remarks last month during discussion about a warrant article for town meeting asking to paint a mural honoring veterans in the lobby of the town hall auditorium.

Brennock said it was those who died for the country that allowed Roth to "sit here."

"As a citizen and veteran, I think your comments were out of line," he said.

He said war memorials don't glorify war but are a memorial to people who died for their country.

Roth said those behind the mural should come before the board to explain in detail what they propose.

Override to be on May 3 Ballot

Selectmen voted to place a Proposition 2-1/2 debt exclusion override on the May 3 ballot this week. If the override passes, the north and central Cohasset sewer projects will receive 50 percent subsidy through the tax base. If it fails, sewer users will pay for the entire cost of the projects through betterments over 20 years. The projects were approved by town meeting.

DPW is Praised

Selectmen praised the town's Department of Public Works for the excellent job they did during last week's storm.

"It was a tough 24-hour period and Harold (Litchfield) and crew worked their butts off," Selectman Michael Sullivan said.

Cohasset's Week

Upset about Electrical Service

Selectmen will ask officials from Eastern Edison to appear before the board to explain why communications broke down during last week's nor'easter.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said while he understood the severity of the storm necessitated Edison abandoning some of the emergency procedures set up with the town — communication should not have been one of them.

"The person set up as a liaison had no information," Sullivan said.

Sullivan suggested communicating the board's concerns with a letter but Selectman Nan Roth said that isn't enough.

"I'd like to see her (Edison's Barbara Hassan) come here to answer questions in full view of the public," she said.

In the meantime, individual selectmen will meet with the fire and police chiefs to get their input and will also talk with Continental Cablevision.

The town and Edison put in an emergency plan following the Christmas Eve storm two years ago which apparently broke down during last week's blizzard.

Selectman Peter Pratt said Edison is a regulated public utility which has continuing problems and suggested selectmen go to state regulators.

Sullivan said while Edison has made attempts to improve: "clearly, where we are is not where we need to be."

Remove Flowers, Wreaths

All artificial flowers, wreaths, ornaments, etc. must be removed from gravesites at Woodside, Beechwood and Greengate Cemeteries before April 15.

Anything left after this date will be disposed of by the cemetery workers, DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield said.

Sidewalk Resurfacing Slated

Beginning on or around May 1, the following sidewalks are scheduled to be resurfaced. Any privately-owned hedges that are currently hanging over these sidewalks must be cut back so work can be done safely and efficiently. Any hedges not trimmed back by that time will be brought to the attention of the safety officer as a safety hazard for people using these sidewalks.

1. Ripley Road, 2. Sohier Street, 3. North Main Street from #3 North Main Street to Forest Avenue. and 4. South Main Street from Summer Street to Beechwood Street.

Planning Board 'Cleanup' Proposal Rejected

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Town meeting rejected a change in zoning bylaws that would have allowed the planning board to rezone non-conforming properties in residential zones from commercial to limited residential use.

The planning board proposed the article to clean up several non-conforming properties, especially the old J.J.. Henry property on South Main Street. Several old , abandoned Quonset huts and a factory building sit on the property which is in the middle of a residential zone.

No one from the planning board was present at town meeting to speak in favor of the article.

Advisory committee member Dan Evans spoke in favor of the article.

"The advisory committee favors this because would authorize a new residential use that is more harmonious with the area," Evans said. "

Selectman Peter Pratt said the board of selectmen also favored the article.

"This would affect four to six properties in town including the Osgood School on North Main Street and Robbins' Garage on Ripley Road," Pratt said. "Many of us were gun-shy about the issuance of a special permit by the planning board until we heard the neighbor's concerns."

Corinne Cahill, 412 South Main St., said the article would finally remove the "ugliest building" in Cohasset from the neighborhood.

"This is a dilapidated, falling down factory with Quonset huts, and we have been forced to live with every violation imaginable," Cahill said. "This bylaw would help eliminate a problem that simply will not go away."

The owner of the property wants to construct 10-15 town houses on the site.

Health board member Alix White opposed the project because she said it would encourage lot-line to lot-line development.

Evans said the planning board had taken over-development into consideration and included a provision in the bylaw mandating 10 percent more open space on any rezoned site.

Noel Collins said the bylaw would never allow more than 10 units on a rezoned site, so over-development would not be a problem. Collins added that the J.J. Henry site was currently developed lot-line to lot-line, and the bylaw would reduce that development.

John Brian, 251 Parks Ave., said the bylaw amounted to "senseless spot zoning."

The conservation commission opposed the bylaw 5-0. Conservation commission member Tom Callahan said the bylaw gave too much power to the planning board.

"This removes the permitting authority of the ZBA, the conservation commission and the board of health in favor of one permit," Callahan said. "It is illegal to remove our authority and unwise."

fearful that a commuter rail station would create traffic problems, pollution problems and an unsightly train stop.

"Previously we were proposing a cookie-cutter station in the village that didn't work," Rizzo said. "All we're saying is with the proper studies all our concerns can be addressed."

Rizzo said that village merchants supported the idea of a study and a non-binding vote. He added that it was only fair to put the question to a referendum because many village business owners live out of town and don't have any input into the location of the train station.

Rizzo said the planning board and the design review board supported the study.

Advisory committee Chairman Roger Whitley said his committee supported the idea of an independent study.

But selectman Nancy Roth spoke against the study.

"This article asks us to make a decision based on a study that is not even authorized or completed," Roth said. "The board of selectmen made a decision with the MBTA about where to locate the station. We feel opening this concern diverts us from other important decisions."

Several residents expressed strong opposition to the article.

"We are not against business people," said Gail Whitehouse. 17 Ash St. "All this mitigation won't change a federally mandated 800-foot long handicap ramp, or a 100-foot track realignment or a huge parking lot.

"We fear for our children. We are lucky because we have the option of a station on 3A which will not negatively affect our children," she added.

Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said reviving the argument over a station location would distract the town from other considerations.

"We're wasting time debating sites and fighting amongst ourselves," Callahan said.

Sue Cunningham, 47 Norfolk St., said she polled several business owners in Manchester, asking whether their downtown station helped businesses. Cunningham said every business owner said the train station did not benefit them at all.

Rizzo countered that he also talked to Manchester business owners and they told him the station benefited their establishments.

Rizzo did not have a funding source for the study, although he suggested the town could split the costs with the MBTA and some other independent source.

Eminent Domain Study for North Cohasset

Town meeting approved a $2,500 appropriation for the town to study the feasibility of taking by eminent domain part or all of the Massachusetts American Water Company. North Cohasset residents are serviced by the private water company which is in Hingham. The plant services customer in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. The Department of Public Utilities permitted Mass. American to increase customers rates 153 percent last year to pay for a $42 million water treatment plant. Hingham and Hull are exploring other options to Mass. American including taking by eminent domain the $42 million plant. Selectmen Peter Pratt said the study would allow Cohasset to join forces with Hingham and Hull in any legal action against Mass. American.

majority of the board of selectmen, said the town manager proposal needs more study and is too radical a departure from what Cohasset currently has.

Those opposed said a town manager would not provide the checks and balances the town needs and worried that too much power would be vested in one person.

"Is it Robert McNamara or Gen. Schwarzkopf? And can we find such a person for $60,000 a year?" asked Richard Avery, speaking for the majority of advisory board which was split 5-3 against the town manager article.

Avery said while all agree Cohasset is a cumbersome town to manage, it is not clear what kind of individual can be found who would be able to handle the myriad of duties detailed in the proposal. He said the advisory board would like to revisit the matter in the fall town meeting after more study.

Cohasset currently has a town administrator position which is described as "weak" meaning the position has little authority or accountability. The current town administrator post does not have the authority to hire and fire, for example, as a town manager would.

The creation of a town manager form of government requires the town to change its charter. The state legislature must pass the charter change, something which state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset pointed out happens all the time. Murray, who sits on the House local affairs committee, said the committee has handled about ten requests for town manager from municipalities in the past year.

Thomas S. Gruber, 8 Pratt Court, lead signer on the citizens petition that brought the matter before town meeting, said the town manager will free selectmen up to spend their time on policy making and goal setting.

Gruber explained that the town manager, who would serve at the selectmen's pleasure, would have accountability, be able to handle public works projects and the hands-on management of the day-to-day affairs of the town.

He said while the size of the town is growing slowly, with nearly $45 million in planned capital projects, its "complexity is growing greatly."

Louis Simeone, chairman of the Government Structure Committee which has studied the concept since last September and endorses the proposal, said it was time for the board of selectmen to pursue new directions in public policy and leave the operations of town affairs to a town manager.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said the majority of selectman believe the proposal goes too far, too fast. She stressed that a town administrator can be a strong, effective manager.

"We agree there's a lack of 'the buck stops here' individual held accountable for the day-to-day operations of the town," McMorris said.

She said a strong town administrator would be a 'Chief Administrative Officer' handling the maintenance of town buildings, employees, and supervising department heads and working with them on their budgets, and more.

McMorris said while the town may have not been that well managed on the administrative side, it is well managed financially. She said the town has a high bond rating.

"Is this what Cohasset needs and wants at this time? One person who would have a tremendous amount of operational control of this town?" she asked.

McMorris asked for a no vote on the article and said selectmen planned to work with town counsel in delegating authority to accomplish creating a "strong" town administrator position and would advertise the job by June or July this year.

She said the individual hired would have an interest in moving onto a town manager job and said the majority of the board favored creating a charter commission which would be elected to examine the proposal.

But Selectman Peter Pratt the sole selectman to endorse the move to town manager now, said a strong town administrator is not the answer.

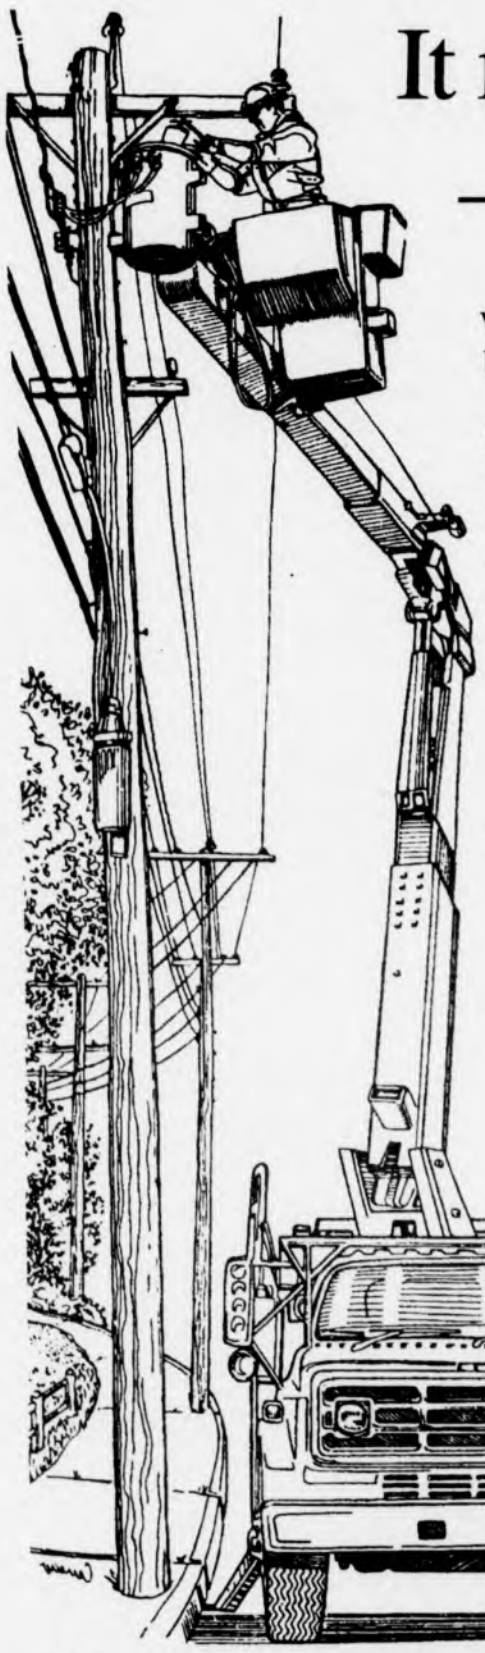
"Even a strong town administrator would not have the authority and accountability frustrating this body (town meeting)," he said.

Pratt pointed to the Hagerty Property and DPW garage as examples of the will of town meeting not being carried out because one project has stalled and the other had significant cost overruns.

He explained that a inaugurating a charter commission is a cumbersome, lengthy process and is "relatively rare today." Pratt said approving a charter change at the annual town meeting is the other entirely legal way of accomplishing the same thing. He pointed out that the state legislature would correct any minor errors and procedural conflicts in the town manager article.

Pat Walsh, 270 N. Main St., implored officials to move toward more honesty in government "whatever you decide today."

A former town hall employee who retired last year, Walsh, alluding to personnel problems at town hall, said employees need to be treated fairly and if they are "they might not form unions, they might not need state help in mediation, and might not put in for unfair labor practices."



Jane Goedecke, 100 Nichols Rd., a former selectman, said the matter needed more time and the public needed to be educated on the proposal before it went forward.

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder said the school committee unanimously opposed the article but unanimously supported the concept. He said the article, although it may not have intended to do so, "the way it is written" changes the relationship between the school department and the rest of town. He said the matter should come back before town meeting "with the bugs worked out."

Lillian Curley, 28 Margin St., of the government structure committee said of the 80 towns that have town managers, 20 had charter commission and 60 were handled at town meeting. She said the GSC was doing in good faith what it was directed to do and had researched the matter fully.

And Treasurer/Collector Joseph Buckley said while there are plenty of things that should be changed the concept would "throw the baby out with the bath water." He said he didn't know of any companies whose chief executive officer is also the chief financial officer.

Former town administrator Gregory Doyon resigned in January to accept a similar position in Abington. The town is currently being served by an interim town administrator, Ed McCann of Scituate.

It may have been April 1st – But it was no joke!

When the worst springtime snowstorm of all time hit our service territory last Monday and Tuesday – we didn't take it jokingly.

Our entire workforce was put on storm alert. Throughout our service territory, 990 employees had a special storm job. For example, an accountant may be sent to help sort and analyze trouble orders. Or a computer programmer might be used as a scout to guide trucks from outside utilities.

Here's what we threw at the April Fool's Snowstorm:

125	Line crews (both our own and those from other utilities)
24	Tree crews
54	Wire-Down crews
990	Employees

Here's what we faced:

89,000	Customers without power
5,000	Downed wires
52	Snapped utility poles
5,000	Damaged trees
67,437	Telephone calls from customers (96% of which were answered within 20 seconds!)
531	Media interviews

Not to mention working against:

Snow and ice.
Snow-covered roads.
Cold weather.
High winds.

We worked 24 hours a day – in shifts lasting from 12 to 18 hours.

We had every single customer of Blackstone Valley Electric back in power by 8:30 a.m. on Thursday.

We had every single customer of Eastern Edison back in power by 11:00 p.m. on Thursday.

We're proud of our effort. We're certainly immensely proud of all our employees – who worked long hours, away from their families – with one single goal: to restore electric power as soon and as safely as possible, to each one of you, our customers.

Town Manager Process Unwelcome to Some Selectmen

On Monday, selectmen began what the majority of the board sees as the unwelcome task of setting the stage for a new town manager who could be on board as soon as July.

Some of the passion of town meeting on the issue still reverberated in town hall this week, as selectmen grappled with the prospect of change in the way town affairs will be handled.

Rumors, which cannot be substantiated, abound that a petition is circulating to call for a special town meeting to quash the move to a town manager form of government.

But both selectmen and the chairman of the advisory board, Roger Whitley and board member Richard Avery, said they have no knowledge of such a petition.

Still reeling from town meeting, Selectman Michael Sullivan placed blame for the passing of the town manager article squarely on the shoulders state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, and the government structure committee, in particular Lillian Curley, a member of the GSC, which recommended passing the article.

The GSC was charged by selectmen last fall with looking at the town manager form of government. The article before town meeting was a citizens petition, which passed by a vote of 75-61. Chief signer Tom Gruber said the citizens petition came about separately from the GSC, although when petitioners realized the GSC was looking at the same thing they began to meet to discuss the issue.

Gruber stressed that due to the resignation of the town administrator in January, the opportunity was there to switch to a town manager.

At Saturday's town meeting Murray, who was asked to explain how the legislative process works, said the town manager system has done wonders for Hull. The legislature must approve the town manager petition.

Sullivan said proponents got competitive and lost sight of the greater good for the town.

"It was like they were in a game and had this need to win," Sullivan said about the GSC at Monday's selectmen's meeting. He explained that members were called during the week to be persuaded to postpone the article so it could be studied further.

"But it was like a game had taken hold," he said. "But this is not a game and our town government should be handled better."

Then he condemned Murray, a long-time state representative and Cohasset resident.

Sullivan said he "very distressed" that Murray, who usually remains neutral on town issues, ignored recommendations of elected boards and chose to speak out in favor of the article. He claimed she only did so because of her daughter.

"It is a sad sate of affairs to abandon precedent because of a need for her daughter to win," Sullivan said.

Selectman Nan Roth tried to move the board along to address the procedural issues that will have to be learned as the town switches to a town manager.

Selectmen said they will call on interim town administrator Ed McCann for guidance. McCann was the first town administrator in Scituate when that town switched in 1972. The town calls the position "town administrator" but it has a town manager charter. McCann, who came on board following the resignation of former town administrator Gregory Doyon in January, also served as town manager in Holden and assistant town manager in Arlington.

Some selectmen seemed confused about their authority to tinker with the article. Selectman Ronnie McMorris said the board could clear up ambiguities. But those who phrased the article said selectmen can "make constructive changes in perfecting the language of this petition in response to a specific request by the General Court (legislature)."

Selectman Peter Pratt, who strongly supports the town manager, reminded his counterparts that they must act as legal agents of town meeting.

"We can facilitate input from other boards and work within the process there," he said.

McCann told selectmen he will work with the various boards and committees and try to allay their concerns.

"The first step is to find out fears and address them," he said. McCann said to get on a positive footing, it is important for town officials to divorce the procedural and operational issues from their political and emotional views on the issue.

Selectmen said the position will be advertised this month so they can start attracting a pool of applicants. It is not clear what the salary range will be. There is $60,000 budgeted for the position and selectmen said they may have to ask the fall town meeting for more if that salary is not high enough.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Cohasset Welcomes Madeleine Anne Tesauro!

Let us begin this week with a big Cohasset HELLO to one of its newest members, Madeleine Anne Tesauro, the brand-new daughter of Catherine and Thomas Tesauro. Madeleine was born March 15, weighing in at 7 lbs., 4 oz., and she was 20 inches long!

We do wonder how Madeleine enjoyed her first snowstorm last week, it sure was a doozy! Keeps the carriage in storage a little while longer!

A standing ovation goes to Ken Leahy this week, he certainly has made a name for himself in Division I Lacrosse this year! Ken plays for Providence College and scored seven goals in three games — hip, hip hooray; we think that is awesome, Ken!

Spoke to Terry James (the town co-ordinator for the Girl Scouts) the other day. She wanted to be sure to thank all the Girl Scouts for doing so well in their annual cookie sale — did you know that the top seller was Amelia Butman, and that she sold 500 boxes?! You can be sure that everyone is proud as punch with her and her efforts! And, the whole town is grateful for Girl Scout cookies, they are yummy!

Attention, all soccer players, grab your pens and your calendars — The South Shore Soccer Camp (that is the one run by Larry Shultz and Jon Anderson) will be held Aug. 4 to 8 and 11 to 15. All players from second grade through high school are invited to sign up, you can be sure you will learn lots from those two knowledgeable gents! They know all the moves! More information will be available at a later date, but mark your dates now!

Heard from Bob Donovan last week, you must remember him — he used to be the publicity man at the South Shore Music Circus. Anyway, he works for Mercer Public Relations now, and thought that we would be interested in a concert that is to be held at the Wang Theatre April 18 — the star is James Brown, but guess who the opening act will be? None other than Bellevue Cadillac, headed by Doug Bell from Cohasset! These are the same guys who turned down JFK Jr.'s wedding due to a previous commitment! They played the Hard Rock Cafe last New Year's Eve and the House of Blues in Cambridge this winter. They play a lot at Carly Simon's "Hot Tin Roof" on Martha's Vineyard. This summer they have lots of dates lined up, including benefits and concerts on the Vineyard with Percy Sledge and Ray Charles. The concert at the Wang sounds really "hot;" you all know how good James Brown is (remember the Super Bowl?)! And, to know that there is a "Cohassetite" who will be appearing, that's really a double-header! Call the Wang Center for more details.

Norman Wright, president of Mahoney and Wright, Allied American in Boston, was appointed to Tufts University Board of Overseers for Athletics recently, and we applaud him!

Annie Abbruzzese looks for familiar faces as runners go by on Atlantic Avenue. For more news about Cohasset's annual road race see sports, pages 19-21.

Two Cohasset girls have been very busy with the Boston Ballet lately, they are garden girls in the Russian classic ballet "The Pirate," ("Le Corsaire"). It is running at the Wang Theatre. Performing in a full-length ballet exposes students to aspects of ballet life not experienced in their regular ballet class. They learn about the hard work, rigors and enjoyment that goes into every facet of a live ballet performance. Megan is a sixth-grade student at Deer Hill Elementary School, and Adrinna is an eighth-grade student at Milton. Both students have also just finished performing in Boston Ballet's production of "Paquita." Congratulations to these talented young dancers! I think we can be certain that we will see their names often in the future!

The following Cohasset residents have been named by Headmaster Jay Stroud to the honors list at Tabor Academy, Marion, or the first semester of 1996-'97. Honors is earned by attaining an overall average of 80 or above, with no grade below 75 and no more than one grade between 75 and 79. They are: Junior — Ryan L. Staszko, son of Donald Staszko and Dr. Barbara O'Pray; and Freshman — Erica S. Dean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Dean.

Congrats go to Hope E. Gaston who was named to the Bates College dean's list for the first semester. Hope is the daughter of John and Linda Gaston and is a 1995 graduate of Holderness School.

That's the news from here for the week, what's new with you? Give me a call!

Mammography Screening is May 1

If you are a woman, you are at risk for breast cancer. Although many of the recent reports on mammography have been confusing, the fact is that one women in eight is at risk of breast cancer in her lifetime! The two major risk factors for breast cancer are being female and getting older. Although there is not much you can do to change either risk factor, there is good news!

Mammography screening: Thursday, May 1, the Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring the Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc. (MDSI) mobile mammography service. Appointments are necessary and can be scheduled by calling the Cohasset Social Service League ate (617) 383-0771. The mammograms are performed by fully licensed female mammography technologists in a comfortable, private mobile coach. The films are read by board certified radiologists and results are provided to each woman as well as the physician of her choice.

When used in conjunction with the following total breast health plan, mammography is the most reliable method we have now for early detection of breast cancer. There are proven ,methods for detecting breast cancer early, before it has spread, while it is still treatable. Here is vital information you should know to save a life — your own or a loved one's. The three-step program to breast health is simple:

- Do monthly breast self-examination;
- Have a clinical breast exam by your health care professional annually;
- Have a mammogram every year over the age of 40.

Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc., ACR Accredited, FDA Certified and Massachusetts Licensed mobile mammography service, is a not-for-profit corporation with a history of serving women in Massachusetts for more then nine years. Mammography is their only business. Because cost and accessibility are cited as major factors discouraging women from having mammography, MDSI provides low-cost mammography on a mobile unit, bringing this life-saving 30-minute examination to women at worksites, health centers and community locations.

Insurance can often cover the cost of a mammogram, and MDSI can bill your insurance company directly, or you may pay on the day of the exam and obtain a receipt for insurance reimbursement. Medicare covers their portion of a mammogram examination every two years. Deductible and co-pay may apply, so you should call Medicare at (800) 882-1228 to check your individual status.

Hire a Student

The Social Service League of Cohasset has compiled a list of Cohasset High School students who are ready, willing and able to do odd or not so odd jobs around your home; yard clean up, pet sitting, plant watering, weeding, baby-sitting, car care, window washing, etc. Many of the students can drive. The rates are reasonable. For names and phone numbers of students, call The Job Bank at 383-0771.

Time to Move Forward

There's no question in our mind that those on both sides of the Town Manager issue love this town and sincerely want the best for Cohasset.

So let's hope that some of the animosity and personal attacks evidenced over the past week can be put aside to enable everyone to work together through the transition process.

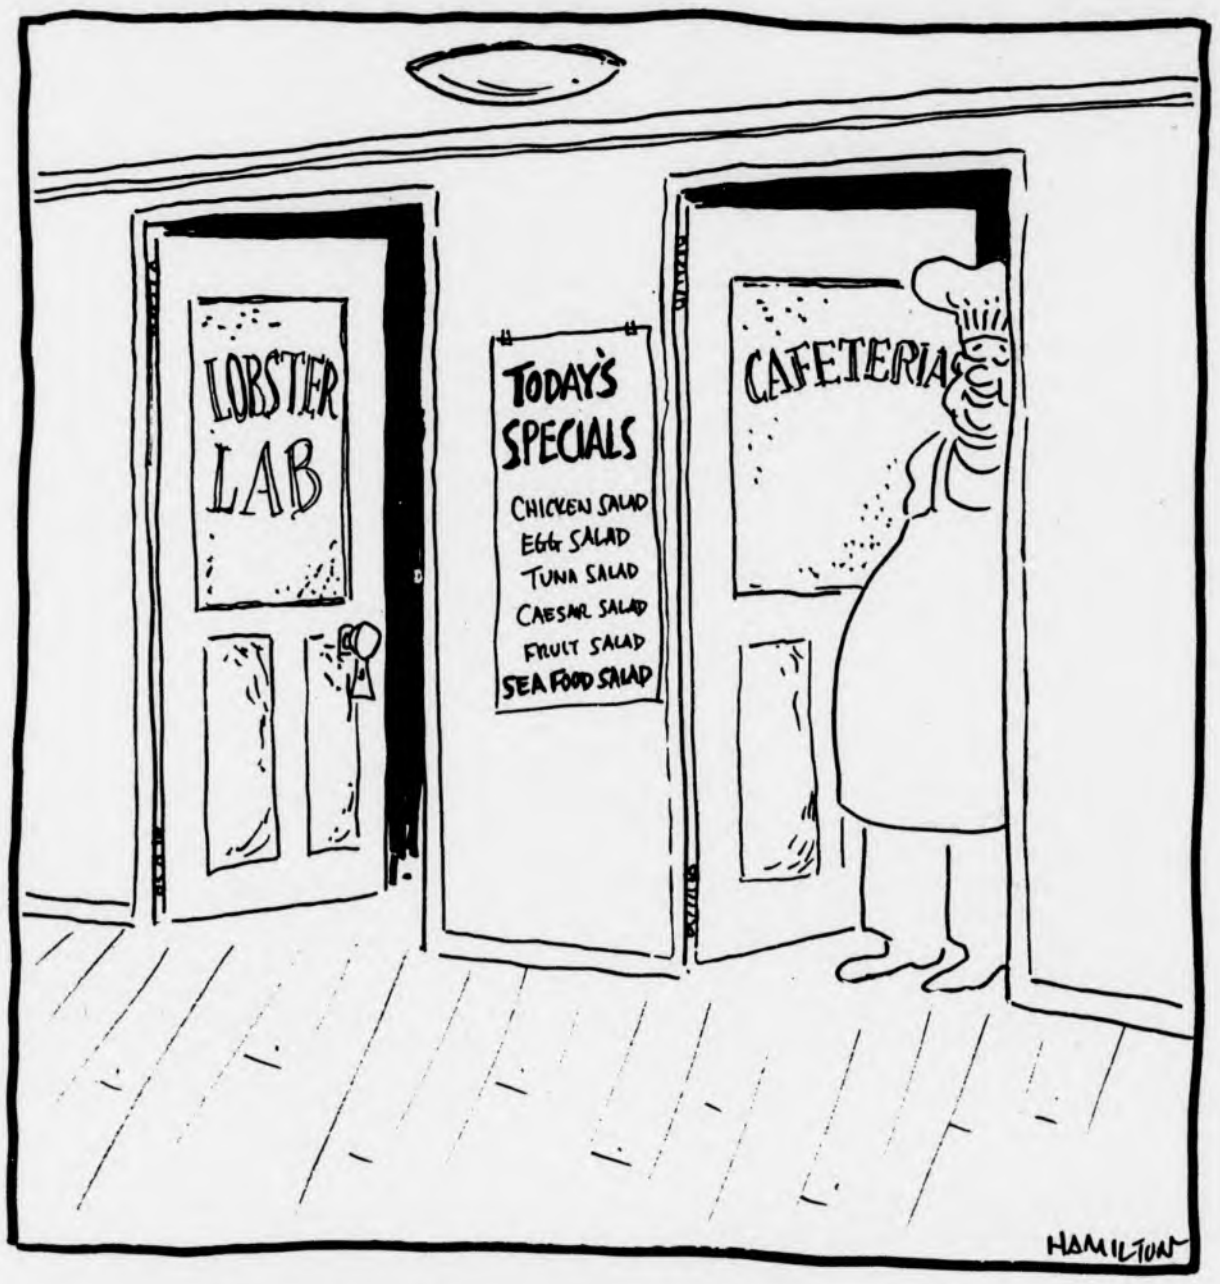
As interim town administrator Ed McCann said Monday night, it's time to allay fears and get down to business. He said the process can be a smooth one if people leave politics and emotion at the door.

We sensed this week that Selectman Nan Roth sincerely feels it's time to get the procedural issues worked out. She was against the switch to town manager but wants to move forward.

It's more important than ever now for selectmen to show leadership.

They made a good choice in hiring Mr. McCann as the interim town administrator. He comes with a wealth of experience including having been the first "town manager" in Scituate when that town switched to that form of government way back in 1972.

We think it's an exciting time for Cohasset and sincerely believe that once the change is made and everyone adjusts — we'll all wonder how we ever got along without a town manager.



And frankly, the town — while we agree is well managed financially — is becoming a more and more complex business to run. Things have slipped through the cracks, which shouldn't have. We won't outline them all here, but will point to a big example that no one mentioned at town meeting. Last year, the town missed the deadline to file with the DPU so it could be a full player in the legal challenge that both Hingham and Hull have launched to protest the huge Mass. American water rate hike that affects Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset. At the time, we were told it was an oversight because selectmen had too many other things on their plate.

We don't think for a minute that a town manager will be a Robert McNamara, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf or Superman for that matter. But a system can be put in place to manage the town professionally on a day-to-day basis. Managers will surely come and go over the years but the authority and accountability will stay with the position.

We're not talking about re-inventing the wheel here. Eighty other towns in the state have opted for town managers, including two of our neighbors, Scituate and Hull.

On a related matter, we think it's outrageous to question the motives behind Mary Jeanette Murray's remarks at town meeting. Mary Jeanette is Cohasset. We are sure whatever she feels about issues affecting this town comes from directly from the heart. She's a public person and can take the heat. But we think she and members of the Government Structure Committee deserve an apology for being berated for taking a stand.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Muir Decides to Step Down

Dear Mr. Chairman,

I wish to inform this board, which was responsible for my appointment, that effective this morning, March 31, I am resigning from the Drug and Alcohol Committee. The reasons for this decision are numerous. I will, however, highlight a few. They are, in no particular order, as follows:

1. Our committee, after reaching out for support from the community over the last few years, has, in fact, received little-to-none. The support we needed, unlike most of the support requested of our community, was not financial. We simply asked for concerned citizens to attend our meetings in order to learn about the severity of drug and alcohol abuse (especially amongst an ever-growing, much younger population) within our community. After we were able to gather a critical mass of concerned citizens, we believed we would have the backing, and therefore, the power to implement much-needed programs and activities which would inform and educate our entire community. We never came close to reaching this critical mass.

2. We requested more enforcement of the written law (i.e., If one is involved in an illegal act with the use of alcohol and/or a controlled substance, be prepared to be appropriately punished, as dictated by the letter of the law). These laws are not only those that our police enforce, but also those that our school system is mandated to enforce. I've seen the proper enforcement of these laws overlooked time and time again. I also believe that we should all review the values we have established for our family unit. What do we do if a family member has taken a wrong step regarding a drug or alcohol? Denial of the problem has seemed to be the best remedy for many families.

3. We seem to have a number of "finger pointing" committees, elected officials, programs and citizens in Cohasset. They stand behind the boundaries of their particular "turf" and/or behind, most recently, the Mariner, to criticize all aspects of our committee. I wish to go on record that each and every one of the above-mentioned has been personally invited to at least one of our meetings, as well as having full knowledge of all our meeting dates — through mandatory posting. Of the dozens of invitees, at best, five or six attended no more than one of our meetings. Yet, they continue to criticize.

I see hundreds of concerned citizens attend sewer, school and other "meetings of significance." I ask, without being the least bit dramatic, the following: Would a drug and alcohol meeting suddenly be "significant" if the community knew that 13- to 15-year-old children were smoking marijuana at the high school? Would people show if two of our citizens and friends were killed in an alcohol-related tragedy, as occurred one mile into a neighboring town? I assure you that there are many poignant questions I could ask, but not in this notice, as I have ruffled enough feathers in town over the last several months. I will in the future, however, as a citizen of this community (and not the Chair of a Committee) be more vocal than ever before.

It is these frustrations, and my inability to do anything about them, that, after much internal debate, have convinced me to make my decision to resign. I am confident that the Drug and Alcohol Committee will eventually receive the respect and the following it deserves.

Finally, we have been years too late in coming to grips with some of the most basic needs within our community. And, now, we are paying dearly for these oversights. What a tragedy it will be if we continue to overlook the most basic need and most basic responsibility in our town — keeping our children safe and healthy.

Craig D. Muir
42 Old Pasture Rd.

Ed's note: Mr. Muir provided the Mariner with a copy of this letter.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

(Editor's note: The Question of the Week is a service provided by the Cohasset Mariner and is offered to candidates in contested races only. Whether or not all those candidates choose to participate is entirely up to them).

• For Selectman Candidates:

Do you think a establishing municipal land bank would be a good way for the town to accumulate money to buy open space? Why or why not?

SELECTMAN/Alex Koines

I do not believe that Cohasset homeowners would benefit from a municipal land bank. This "buyer's fee" that would provide the funding would act as a sales tax making our homes more expensive and less competitive than those in surrounding towns. If could force us to lower the price of our homes, effectively paying the taxes ourselves. Looking at the associated costs for selling a "typical" $350,000 home: six percent brokers fee, $21,000, septic inspection $1,000+, probable Title V septic replacement $16,000 to $50,000, or more, land bank, $2,000 to $3,000, and possible capital gains liabilities, you might well have to ask yourself, "Is it really worth selling my home?"

Taxes are known to stifle business and trade and this tax would be no exception. Consider how much more appealing that large screen television purchase is at the New Hampshire Lechmere than at the Weymouth store.

Cohasset has been able to acquire open space in the past and we must continue to do so in the future. Turkey Hill is a recent example and a good study of our ability to bring together two towns, Cohasset and Hingham, the Trustees of the Reservation, and state grants to complete the purchase. By accumulating a land bank, we could discourage donations of land and money and may exclude ourselves from other options. I believe that the decision to purchase land and the responsibility of paying for it belongs to all the voters and should be decided at town meeting.

SELECTMAN/Tom Callahan

I would like to see us first establish a permanent open space account in the budget for implementing our Open Space Plan and acquiring land if we so choose. These are worthwhile goals for the town with benefits to our quality of life and property values. Even when state grant money is available for an expenditure, town money is needed. It would be advantageous to have that at hand from a standing fund rather than make a large appropriation from taxes all at once.

I favor a "land bank" as one means of funding this account, supplementing a small but regular budget contribution to the account from free cash (when available). Land banks allow accumulation of funds without resort to taxation or borrowing. Land banks are funds received at the time of property transfers representing a small percentage of the sale price. With our property values, a 1-2 percent fee would be appropriate. This payment is no different conceptually, and no more objectionable, than the property seller already pays in state transfer taxes at closing. At least land bank payments are allocated to a specific and worthwhile use, in contrast to transfer taxes ending up in the "black hole" of the state general fund. (However, in lieu of a land bank, I would favor state legislation to instead allocate some of this transfer tax money to municipal land accounts). With our property prices and the types of buyers who can pay them, the impact on property sales would be non-existent.

SELECTMAN/Diane C. Sullivan

The issue of the establishment of a land bank is not before the town at this time, but will probably be introduced in the near future to establish. I have stated previously and will continue to tell our townspeople that the selectmen are obliged to follow the mandate of the town if the concept of a land bank is adopted, or any other town meeting articles voted for passage.

With that said, Cohasset is most fortunate to have among its residents truly dedicated environmentalists and conservationists who strive every day to protect our water supply, the air we breathe and the environment in which we live.

We have gifts of land from private sources, we have the Conservation Trust, Trustees of Reservations and the town itself, joined by the State as evidenced by the recently voted acquisition of Turkey Hill. We have the devotion of our town boards who work diligently to protect our environment in a multitude of ways.

Due to the high price of land values in Cohasset, it would, of course, be very advantageous for the town to be able to have a fund to be used to acquire key parcels as they become available to conserve our land, create open space, and have for the enjoyment of all residents.

A land bank fund, however, should not increase the general tax rate. As I understand it, most land banks are crated by the imposition of a modest tax assessed on real estate transfers. Additional taxes for any of us is not a popular concept, but if the concept of a land bank is adopted by the town, I believe it would be done so carefully and conservatively and not increase our general tax rate.

SELECTMAN/Wigmore Pierson

The concept of acquiring open space within the town boundaries is admirable. However, several reasons militate against the land bank approach at this time.

First, fully 30 percent of the town land is open space now and must remain forever open space under present laws.

Second, a one-percent or a two-percent tax on the sales price of a home is unfair and discriminatory because it hits only those who are engaged in the already expensive process of buying or selling a home.

Third, tax increases already in the pipeline plus sewer and water rate increases to pay for new construction will increase the average homeowner cost by $1,100 (not including water, sewer and betterments) by the year 2002. And this does not include likely operating budget increase requests during the next five years.

Fourth, there appears to be an endless stream of new and creative proposals, many of which take money from our fellow townsmen and will ultimately force the young, the elderly and those with modest or fixed incomes to either move out of town or accept a lien on their homes. I say, "Enough!" Let's make sure we have the best schools and the best police and fire protection possible before taking yet more money from our citizens for new initiatives, however meritorious or admirable they may be.

• For School Committee Candidates:

In two years, Cohasset tenth-graders will take the "high-stakes" statewide testing implemented under the Education Reform Act and must pass in order to graduate. Is it the state's or town's responsibility to deal with the ramifications of the new tests?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Joe McElroy

Parents, with the support of Cohasset Schools and state legislators, have to take the lead in dealing with ramifications of the new tests. They must be aware of evolving standards, closely track student progress, and work with guidance counselors/teachers. If elected, I would place great emphasis on keeping parents informed of changing requirements. The concept of testing is good, but must be very carefully implemented. If properly done, it will prompt higher levels of student performance and give colleges more credible data to consider.

The Massachusetts Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) 1996 results indicated that 25 percent of Cohasset students show weak communications skills and poor or beginning command of facts (a small portion of that figure includes special needs students). Youngsters in the lower quadrant are vulnerable when they take the "high stakes" tests.

The state is advising that 70 to 80 percent of a high school curriculum should be devoted to studying "core subjects." It can be surmised that English, mathematics, science, social studies and world languages are central to that definition. Currently, Cohasset High School requires a minimum of 59 percent of a student's credit hours be devoted to these subjects. In compliance with the Education Reform Act, teacher/student contact hours are being significantly increased. The Cohasset Class of 2001 will need 175 credit hours to graduate versus 115 hours for the Class of 1998. However, there are no provisions for an increase in the "core subjects." A student in the Class of 2001 could graduate with only 39 percent of his/her credit hours in "core subjects."

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Kathy Ofsthun

The curriculum throughout Cohasset's schools is challenging and provides a strong background in all core subject areas. Proudly, we can point to the achievement of Cohasset's students who consistently score well above state averages on the Education Review Boards, the MEAP tests and the SATs. Most recently, Cohasset's 10th-graders scored first and second on the South Shore on standardized tests in science, reading and mathematics. Any new test, such as the "high stakes" tenth-grade test, will not likely find Cohasset's curriculum deficient. Therefore, I would not advocate teaching to the test, for that could reduce the high quality of our current curriculum.

If the test produces widespread under-performance, Cohasset would not be alone in its dilemma. Such is the case in Michigan where "A" students with near perfect SAT scores and acceptances to prestigious colleges performed at "novice" levels on a state test. Results were duly noted on their transcripts and now Michigan has the problem of the brightest students refusing to take the test. This would clearly be a matter for the state to deal with, pay for, etc.

While most students should pass the exam, some may not. I believe it will then be our responsibility to work with these students to prepare them for a second chance at taking the test. Perhaps parents could assist teachers in a short review and preparation course, thereby reducing the cost.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Susan Turgiss

As an educator, I have been actively involved in implementing the mandated curriculum frameworks and the initial phase of state assessment. This 10th grade competency test will hold each student accountable for their performance. At the same time, the Cohasset Schools aggregate performance will be reviewed and compared to other school systems. At both levels, individual and systemwide, the town is responsible for making sure success is achieved. The consequences of not passing would be academic failure to the student and loss of state funding. As the administrator and designer of the test, the state should closely review test results to determine if the new test accurately measures the mandated standards and curriculum.

Cohasset does not have to wait until a student reaches 10th grade to understand performance at the individual and system level. Currently, there is important incremental testing occurring before 10th grade that lets the schools know how students are performing. The state MEAP tests have been administered and reported in grades 4, 8 and 10. This spring grades 3, 4, 8 and 10 will pilot the next critical phase of state assessment — the MCAS (state devised) and the nationally normed Iowa Test.

All of this testing must be examined to 1) understand our strength and weaknesses 2) establish a baseline for improvement 3) understand where we place comparatively with similar towns. If elected to the school committee, I will strive to insure that Cohasset schools well exceed state minimum requirements.

Next Week's Question:

• For all candidates:

Some of our public officials are guilty of arrogance in their dealings with citizens. Fact or fiction? If it's a myth, what would you do to dispel it? If it's true, what would you do to change it?

Responses must be no more than 250 words and be submitted by noon Monday. Responses my be FAXed to 617-741-2931.

Meet School Committee Candidates

Candidates for the Cohasset School Committee (Joe McElroy, Hugh Morgan, Kathy Ofsthun, and Sue Turgiss) will jointly make themselves available for questions and suggestions at a "Candidates Night" to be held in the Cohasset Junior/Senior High School audio-video room, Thursday, April 10, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The informal question and answer format will be moderated by Molly Hochkeppel of the Patriot Ledger and Mary Ford of the Cohasset Mariner. If attendance exceeds room capacity, the discussion will relocate to the school cafeteria.

If you would like to come and meet Sue, call Betsy at 383-1248.

SAFE Candidates Forum

Thursday, April 17, SAFE will host a candidates forum to discuss environmental issues facing Cohasset. SAFE invites all interested citizens to meet candidates for the offices of selectmen, board of health, planning board and water commission, and listen to their views on these important issues. The forum, which will be held in Trueblood Hall at the Unitarian Parish House, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Deadline for Community Copy

The deadline for submitting community copy is 8 a.m., Friday for the following week's issue. Items may be dropped off at Cohasset News, 3 Brook St.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

• For Water Commission Candidates:

Is taking the north Cohasset water district by eminent domain the best way for the town to deal with water quality problems and high water rates in that part of town?

WATER COMMISSION/John McNabb

I helped draft, and strongly supported, the successful town meeting article which authorizes the selectmen to study taking the North Cohasset water service area by eminent domain. This study will hopefully tell us about the engineering, financial and legal issues involved, and what the potential pitfalls and benefits would be.

Taking the North Cohasset water service area by eminent domain is probably the only way for that area to ever again get good quality drinking water at reasonable rates. We can handle it; the Tutela Report concludes that we have sufficient water supply and treatment capabilities for the next 20 years even including North Cohasset.

Benefits for the Cohasset Water Department: The 340 new customers from North Cohasset would increase the revenue base of the department by about 10 percent. The hydrant rental fee that Cohasset now pays to Mass-American Water would provide additional revenue.

We must make sure that the cost of the taking does not adversely impact existing customers of the water department and does not interfere with the significant amount of work which still needs to be done, and which must continue, to reline and replace water pipes throughout the rest of Cohasset.

Since the water commissioners are elected by all residents of Cohasset, they must work for what is in the best interests of the entire town. If it can be shown that the taking is feasible and provides a net benefit to North Cohasset and to all residents of Cohasset, we should go ahead with it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Article On Joe St. John Appreciated

To the Editor:

Ms. Earon's article on Joe St. John in the March 13 Mariner was delightful reading and of particular interest to me.

We now live at the corner of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue, not far from where the Roches lived until the Portland Gale. And, as a small boy I learned how much I weighed as I grew by standing on the post office scales of Miss St. John, the postmistress.

In the winter of 1938 we still lived "in town" in the house of Elm Street in the background of the picture in your article. The picture was taken by my father of Mr. St. John who was in fact delivering the Sunday papers with Aileen Hines in the back of the sleigh and myself on the box with Mr. St. John. My mother, who wrote the above on the back of my copy of the picture, can be seen poking her head out of the left dormer window.

Many thanks for your article. It fills in some gaps and reminds me of a fine old gentleman who was very good to me as a little boy.

Station is Quality of Life Issue

To the Editor:

After many well-publicized meetings and newspaper articles, informed Cohasset residents voted 3-1 to put the MBTA train station at the Route 3A location. The Selectmen, subsequently, voted unanimously to let the T know that the Route 3A site would suit Cohasset best, and mitigation has begun for that site.

All Cohasset residents, if they were so inclined, had ample opportunity to educate themselves about the issue and every Cohasset voter was notified in the town warrant of the date of the vote. Therefore, one must conclude that this drive to "re-study" the pros and cons of each site is being fueled by those in the community who did not like the results of the vote.

It has been my observation that some business people, many of whom do not even live in our town, strongly support a village station. While the interests of businesses certainly need to be considered, I would hope that the concerns of residents, whose every day lives will be greatly affected by a train station in their neighborhood, will take precedence.

Recently a letter went out to petition promoters written by five Cohasset people and one Weymouth person, promoting a village station. I found it very interesting that not one of the Cohasset residents is a home owner on the Hillside. The spokesman of this group said at the last Selectmen's meeting that he didn't vote because "I was in Washington," and the Weymouth man owns a building near the tracks and wants the village location so the tracks will be moved 100' away from his building into a residential neighborhood! I find their callous disregard for the Hillside people appalling.

The bottom line, however, is that 100 studies will not change the grave concerns of many Hillside residents, and others who want our village to retain its charm and quaintness. An 800' concrete platform, a pay parking lot for hundreds of commuters, fast-moving cars traveling through our hilly neighborhood, and moving the train tracks 100' closer to homes are all realities. This will NOT be the "whistle-stop" of bygone years.

I truly feel that we can support our local merchants in many ways that are less intrusive to a neighborhood. The 3A site will still give commuters a nearby station with plenty of parking and Cohasset residents will not be robbed of the quality of life that should be the right of every one of us.

Downed Tree Cleanup

to get a quicker handle on it."

While tree cleanup in Scituate has been estimated at $5,000 a day, Litchfield said the cost in Cohasset cannot be determined until after the last branch has been cleared. He said that amount will be lumped with snow removal deficit spending.

Harbour Insurance Agency's claims manager Joanne Papandrea said the agency has received 43 storm-related claims from nearby communities in one week.

"For a small agency like ours, that's quite a bit," she said. "There have been a huge number of losses from heavy tree damage."

A quarter of the claims involve tree damage to automobiles while the remainder reflect damage to homes, she said. Damages have been reported most heavily in Scituate, Marshfield, Hanover, Rockland and Hull, she said.

Papandrea pointed out that, due to policy deductibles, about half of the storm-related claims the agency receives will not qualify for insurance coverage unless tree damage exceeds $500. Trees that fall on homeowners' property but do not mar structures are not covered, she said.

"The heaviest damage from the storm was to Evergreen trees and they only caused minimal property damage," she said. "Homeowners with trees in their yards are left with major cleanup that could be in the thousands for tree removal."

For local landscaper Bob Stearns, who also plows during storms, the Blizzard of '97 posed a lot of problems. April 1, the day the storm occurred, marks the date most landscapers get down to doing serious spring lawn care.

"We were already finished with pruning the trees, which we do during the wintertime, and the storm ruined all the work we had done. We also had to put the plows back on our trucks," he said.

Stearns visited 23 homes to assess damage on Monday and he found they all had tree damage of one kind or another. The cost to take down a tree that cannot be saved ranges from $50 for a small one to $300 for a large tree, according to Stearns.

"This storm put us two weeks behind. Clearing up all the brush is the tough thing," he stated.

"Everything is turning green, and we'll be starting mowing by the end of the month. I'm just looking forward to spring," Stearns said.

Needy Residents Get Tax Relief

Town meeting approved a 50 percent tax abatement for Cohasset's neediest residents. Advisory committee member Carol Martin said the program would cost the town about $14,000 a year from the assessor's overlay account. The program would benefit about 100 residents including 58 disabled veterans, 35 elderly residents, five blind residents and two hardship cases.

More CHL Land Court Trial on Cable Friday

The last two days of the Land Court trial before Chief Justice Peter Kilborn on Cohasset Heights Landfill's (CHL) challenge to Cohasset's Water Resource District will be broadcast on local cable Channel 3 in Cohasset Friday, April 11, starting at 7 p.m. The 6 1/2 hour tape of the March 24 and 25 sessions of the trial will be shown continuously until Monday morning, April 14.

The Land Court trial concluded at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 25, after a total of 3 1/2 days of trial that took place Feb. 13 and 14, and March 24 and 25. The first two days of the trial were previously broadcast on Channel 3 a few weeks ago.

The participants in the tape are Judge Peter Kilborn, Cohasset Special Counsels Janice Rowan and Michael Leon; Cohasset expert witness Bob Weimar from CDM; Cohasset expert witness Jeffrey Dierks. CHL attorneys were Anton Moehrke and John Beling. CHL witnesses were CHL officer Paul Barry, and expert witnesses Steven Giosia, Peter Dillon and A. Raymond Quinn.

The quality of this tape is improved in one respect from the earlier one, by the addition of two additional microphones which enhance the sound reproduction. However, there are two hours of the broadcast where the screen will be darkened because of the opening of a shade directly in front of the camera.

A decision in the case is not expected for several months. About two weeks after the end of the trial, the parties will receive a notice that the trial transcript is complete. Then, the parties will have up to 30 days to complete their post-trial briefs, which will be submitted by Cohasset Heights, the Town of Cohasset and by John McNabb Jr., who was given permission by Judge Kilborn to submit a post-trail brief as an amicus curiae, or friend of the court.

Following the submission of the post trial briefs, Judge Kilborn will take a "view" of the disputed area, which is the area of Scituate Hill on Cohasset starting at the proposed "Area V" expansion and down Crocker Lane to Route 3A. After he views the site, Judge Kilborn will then have as long as he wishes to consider the evidence and the briefs and then issue his decision.

In this case, CHL has alleged at about 1/3 of their proposed 27.5 acre "Area V" landfill expansion was improperly placed in Cohasset's Water Resource District, where landfilling is prohibited. CHL contends that Area V is not in the watershed for the Sohier Street Wellfields, that the wellfields are not a lawful water supply, and that the landfill expansion was improperly placed in the Water Resource District merely because the Town wanted to block the expansion.

The Town of Cohasset contended that since there are conditions where surface water from Area V will flow toward the Sohier Street Wellfield, that it is properly located in the Water Resource District. The town also presented evidence that the Sohier Street Wells are officially listed by the state as emergency water supplies. Finally, the town presented testimony, that the line of the District which included Area V was drawn by Camp Dresser McKee for the town before CDM had any discussions with any town officials.

NEWS BRIEFS

Recycling Rates Plan Turned Down

Town meeting voters rejected a plan that would have allowed future town meetings to set rates at the recycling-transfer facility. Supporters said selectmen were not doing a good job regulating rates at the facility.

Town meeting also postponed an article that would have frozen rates at the transfer facility. The article was proposed to counter a selectmen's plan to charge users by the bag for disposal at the facility. Selectmen have delayed the pay-by-the-bag scheme for one year.

Inclusion in Landfill Closure

Town meeting approved a citizens article that requires the Department of Environmental Protection to hold public hearings prior to approving closure and post-closure plans for any private landfill in town.

Voters also supported a related article that requires owners of private landfills to set aside money for closure and post-closure clean up costs.

Town Meeting Rejects Recall Petition

A citizens petition to establish a recall provision for town officials was rejected by town meeting. Supporters said the recall provision would have made town officials accountable for their actions. Opponents said the provision would allow a determined minority of voters to hold the town hostage and force recalls if town officials supported an unpopular decision.

Holiday Lights on Common

Town officials now have the discretion to permit holiday lights on more than one tree in the town common thanks to town meeting. Voters supported the article despite objections by town common abutters that the lights would shine into their homes and detract from the historic nature of the common.

Moderator Now Has the Power

The town moderator received approval from town meeting to use his own discretion to decide voice-votes requiring a two-thirds majority for approval rather than going to a hand-vote if just one voter objects. The new system requires seven voters to force a hand-count.

Wire Position Will Be Eliminated

Wire superintendent Steve Wigmore will retire next year and with his departure the town will also retire the wire superintendent's position. Town meeting authorized selectmen to petition the legislature to reverse previous legislation that created the position. Many of the wire inspectors duties will be transferred to other municipal departments when Wigmore retires.

New Water Storage Tank Approved

Bear Hill Site is First Choice

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The water department's $1.4 million standpipe will be constructed next to the existing storage tank on Bear Hill behind the high school only if that site proves to be more feasible, water commissioners said Saturday.

The new tank is needed to increase the level of fire protection and to allow the town to perform required tank maintenance.

The money, which will come from water rates and not taxation, will be used for designing, engineering, installing and construction a two-million gallon water storage tank; and performing the related site work including access road improvements.

The standpipe is part of Phase III of an on-going, step-by-step $7 million plan to improve and upgrade the town's water distribution system.

Water commissioners were able to defeat an effort at town meeting to move the standpipe to Scituate Hill off Route 3A near Cohasset Heights Landfill. However, they did not rule out using that site if Bear Hill does not work out.

"The bottom line is we will try to site it at Bear Hill and then move to Scituate Hill (if necessary). The discretion needs to be given to the water commissioners...

"Don't tie our hands," said Fred Koed, water commission chairman.

Glenn Pratt, 482 King St., led the charge to move the proposed water tank to Scituate Hill. He said the tank would not have to be as high on Scituate Hill because of the higher elevation there and said the projected additional cost of using the Scituate Hill site is not a lot when compared with the overall cost of the project.

Water Commissioner Robert Kasameyer said there was no inherent reason not to use Scituate Hill except for time and money. The property at Scituate Hill would have to be acquired from the state and would require 1,500 feet of new pipe as opposed to the 200 feet needed at the Bear Hill site.

Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., argued that there would be more fire reserve with a tank on Scituate Hill because the tank would be wider. He also said any additional costs could be recovered if a steel tank was used rather than a concrete one, as planned.

But water commissioners argued that a concrete tank was cheaper in the long run because it did not require periodic painting and the level of maintenance that a steel tank does.

Paula Knowles, 15 Border St., urged voters to support the water commissioners. She said cost to her as a taxpayer is an "extremely important consideration."

"If it's cost or aesthetics, I'll go with cost," she said.

But Louise Flint, 21 Clay Spring Rd., disagreed.

She called the existing standpipe "an ugly green tank."

"Now you want to put another in, even larger. Enough is enough," she said, supporting the Scituate Hill site.

Selectmen Ronnie McMorris, Nan Roth, Merle Brown, Peter Pratt and town accountant Michael Buckley listen carefully to town meeting debate.

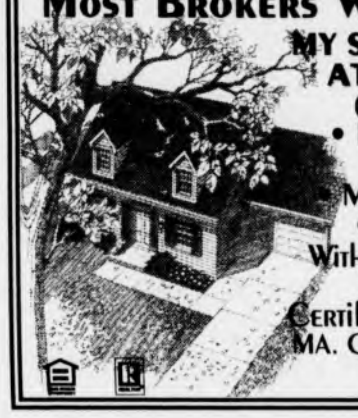
New Water Rates Enacted

Town meeting approved a new multiple water rate structure on Saturday through which heavier water users pay more.

Water Commission Chairman Fred Koed said the rate increases were needed to make the planned improvements to the town's distribution system and explained that a flat-rate structure penalizes the smaller user.



With the new rates, users pay $4.07 per 100 cubic feet for the first 2,000 cubic feet used per quarter and $5.52 per 100 cubic feet used per quarter thereafter.

Fees for the size of meter also vary from $29 for a 5/8 in. or $68 for a 1 in. meter to $418 per quarter for a 3 in. water meter, which is the largest in town.

Under the old structure, users paid the same rate no matter what their meter size and some were charged a multiplier which was rescinded. With the multiplier, the owner of a four-unit apartment complex was charged four "minimums" of $25.74 per quarter plus usage. Now all users are charged by the size of their water meter plus usage.

With a bigger line, the bigger the meter size and greater the water flow, commissioners explained.

Celebrating the Year of the Ox

By Stephanie Fewsmith and Gretchen Hyslip
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Stephanie's dad, Mr. Fewsmith, came and told Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Barberi's class all about China and the Chinese New Year. Stephanie's dad is a professor at Boston University. He knows Chinese. He had nametags for us in Chinese. Chinese do not have an alphabet. They have more than 4,000 characters they have to learn. "Nehow" means "Hello," "Zigen" means "Goodbye," and "Woolne" means "I love you." He told us all about China and its people. We learned that China has 1.2 billion people. One out of every five people in the world is Chinese.

The Chinese women used to have their feet bound so they wouldn't grow. He showed us teeny, tiny slippers that women wore. They were very pointy. The Chinese also have a kitchen god that keeps an eye out for who is being good or bad. He's like our Santa Claus. The Chinese have tiny cages that they keep crickets in. They like ht e sound that the crickets make.

Mr. and Mrs. Fewsmith also gave us red envelopes that had gold wrapped chocolate and gummy fish in it. It was for good luck. Everybody also got their own chopsticks.

Mrs. Collins made rice for us in the afternoon. We practiced eating with our chopsticks.

The next day Mrs. Tehranian and Roxanne brought in a rice cooker, and the class made rice and vegetables. Once again we used our chopsticks.

Our class hopes that Mr. Fewsmith will have time to come in again and tell us more.

In the front row are Tessa Leahy, Roxanne Tehranian and Kara Wilcox. In the back row are Casey Cavanaro, Stefanie Fewsmith and her dad, and Gretchen Hyslip.

Soccer Club Scholarships

The Cohasset Soccer Club announces its scholarship awards to graduating Cohasset High School seniors. Three $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to selected students active in voluntary community service. Applications are available at the high school guidance office. Deadline for the applications must be returned by April 16.

Art Scholarships Available

The South Shore Art Center is offering three scholarships for high school graduates who will be continuing their studies as an art major. The scholarships are the Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship for $1,000; South Shore Art Center Scholarship for $500; and a Macivor Reddie Award for $200. The Margaret Marshall Dillon Memorial Fund is available for adults who wish to return to the field of visual art after a period of extended interruption.

Applications may be submitted Tuesday to Thursday, April 15 to 17, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the center, located on 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. Portfolios may be picked up April 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All applicants will be informed by mail of the decision of the jury. Winners of the scholarships will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Nights, and at the South Shore Art Center Festival on the Common, June 20, 6:30 p.m. Scholarships are paid directly to the winners' schools toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

PSO Does A Lot Behind the Scenes

The PSO has had a successful school year thus far, due to the people involved in the schools and those contributing to our fundraising events.

The PSO functions as a major provider of programs and materials to enrich our children's education. Some of the contributions made by the PSO are as follows: 1) awarding teacher grants for projects of special interest, for example, grade three teachers requested funds for an Audubon specialist for the nature trail (Teacher Grants across all grades totaled $8,000); 2) providing a variety of curriculum enrichment programs including field trips, speakers and shows, for example, the seventh grade project Safeguard, a portrayal of Susan B. Anthony for fifth and sixth graders during Women in History Week; "Everybody Wins," a speaker for second and third graders on conflict resolution, and a New England Aquarium program for kindergartners (curriculum enrichment totaled $8,000); 3) the purchasing of six tether ball sets for the Deer Hill playground, $1,200; 4) establishing a METCO scholarship, $1,500; and 6) donating to the Alumnae Field and the CEF Language Lab.

As a communication link between parents, the schools and the community, the PSO this year has, among other things: 1) sponsored several speakers, including professionals on the transition to a middle school and an expert on children in sports; 2) met with the Police Chief and others to discuss teen relations; and 3) requested improvements to the Sohier Street sidewalk for the safety of walkers to Deer Hill and the new school.

DRUG FACT
WHAT CAN A PARENT DO?

The first thing a parent can do in the fight to have a drug-free child, is to learn about the kind of drugs kids abuse. Then you're in a good position to have frank, open discussions with your children — the kind of dialogue you both need. You can impress upon your son or daughter that they are being sold a bill of goods by the drug culture. They are being led to believe that drugs are "cool" when in fact they represent a tremendous health hazard. Armed with the proper information, you can give your kids the help they need to say "NO" to drugs.

Business Notes

Rattenbury Named Department Manager

John M. Rattenbury, P.E., C.I.P.E., of Cohasset has been named manager of the Plumbing and Fire Protection Department at Erdman Anthony Consulting Engineers' Boston office.

Previously, he was a mechanical engineer in the Plumbing and Fire Protection Department at R.G. Vanderweil Engineers Inc. of Boston.

"I am pleased to welcome such an experienced professional to our staff," said Albert P. Prior, P.E., senior vice president of Erdman Anthony Consulting Engineers. "John's leadership skills will be a key factor in our continued success."

John M. Rattenbury

Rattenbury earned a B.S. in aeronautical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N.Y. in 1989. He is a registered professional mechanical engineer in Massachusetts and is certified in plumbing engineering by the American Society of Plumbing Engineers.

Hewitts Cove Marina Announces Service Department

Hewitts Cove Marina announces the opening of its 26,000 sq. ft., full service marine service center, including 11,700 sq. ft. staffed by its own certified mechanics. John Baylis and his service team are specialists in OMC Outboards, Mercruiser Inboards and Stem Drives, Volvo Penta, Crusader and many others. They are available to service all boaters' needs, whether repairs, rebuilds or repowers.

"With the addition of John and his staff, we believe we have the best mechanics in the Boston and South Shore area. John and the crew are factory certified by a wide range of manufacturers. We have a complete service team for all boating needs. We also guarantee their work 100 percent," says Paul Trendowicz, president of Hewitts Cove Marina.

Hewitts Cove Marina is in the Hingham Shipyard. It is one of the largest marinas in New England and offers more than 350 slips and 120 moorings. Hewitts Cove Marina is a member of the Sea Chain family of marinas.

Network to Create More Business

"Leading Questions — How to Network" is a free seminar which outlines how to work with current and future business contacts to identify new clients. The seminar is part of an ongoing series presented by The Leads Network, a business-to-business networking organization.

The free seminar details how to include networking as a cost-effective tool to expanding sales leads. Business executives can choose either of two dates for this seminar: Friday, April 11, 8 to 9 a.m. or Friday, April 25, 8 to 9 a.m.

Both seminars will be held at the Days Inn, Route 228, 850 Hingham St., Rockland. A complimentary Continental breakfast will be served.

Seating is limited. To reserve seating or for more information, call Judith Peacock at (617) 749-2606.

Runners Gather For Spring Ritual

Gonsalves leads 955 in Cohasset Race

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset's rite of spring was another success as the 21st annual Road Race By-the-Sea drew a field of 955 runners under wet, chilly conditions.

Marked by a strong showing from the hometown contingent, the 6.2-mile course had runners of all ages tackling its challenging hills and taking in the gorgeous scenery of Jerusalem Road at the same time.

Randolph's Mel Gonsalves sacrificed sightseeing for pounding the pavement to the tune of first place in 32 minutes, 19 seconds. Bob Hodge, the third-place finisher in the 1979 Boston Marathon, holds the Cohasset record at 30:31.

Gonsalves, who starred in cross country and track at Bridgewater State College, didn't challenge Hodge's course record, but his 5:13 pace per mile was good enough to give him a commanding lead before reaching the halfway mark.

Master winner and former race champion Bob Chasen of Weymouth finished a distant second to Gonsalves (33:46) and Whitman's Bob Ruel took third with a time of 34:02. Needham's Don Salamone was clocked at 34:23 and Chuck Martin of Pembroke crossed the line in 34:29 to finish fourth and fifth, respectively. The top-31 runners all averaged 6-minute pace or better per mile.

Race director Roy Fitzsimmons said post entries swelled to 325 on race day to go go along with the 630 runners who registered in advance. Fitzsimmons was especially thankful for the volunteers, including the Cohasset High National Honor Society, who passed out water and helped with various organizational duties.

"I can't say enough for the people who come out and help us out," Fitzsimmons said.

He also commended the work of Public Works director Harold Litchfield whose highway department crew filled in potholes on Atlantic and Forest Aves.

"For 21 years they've always gone that extra mile for us," Fitzsimmons said.

For the second year in a row, former mile world-record holder Herb Elliot of Australia served as the race's grand marshall. Elliot, who has lived in Cohasset the past two years while working in Brockton as president of Puma, won the gold medal in the 1,500 meters in the 1960 Summer Olympics in Rome.

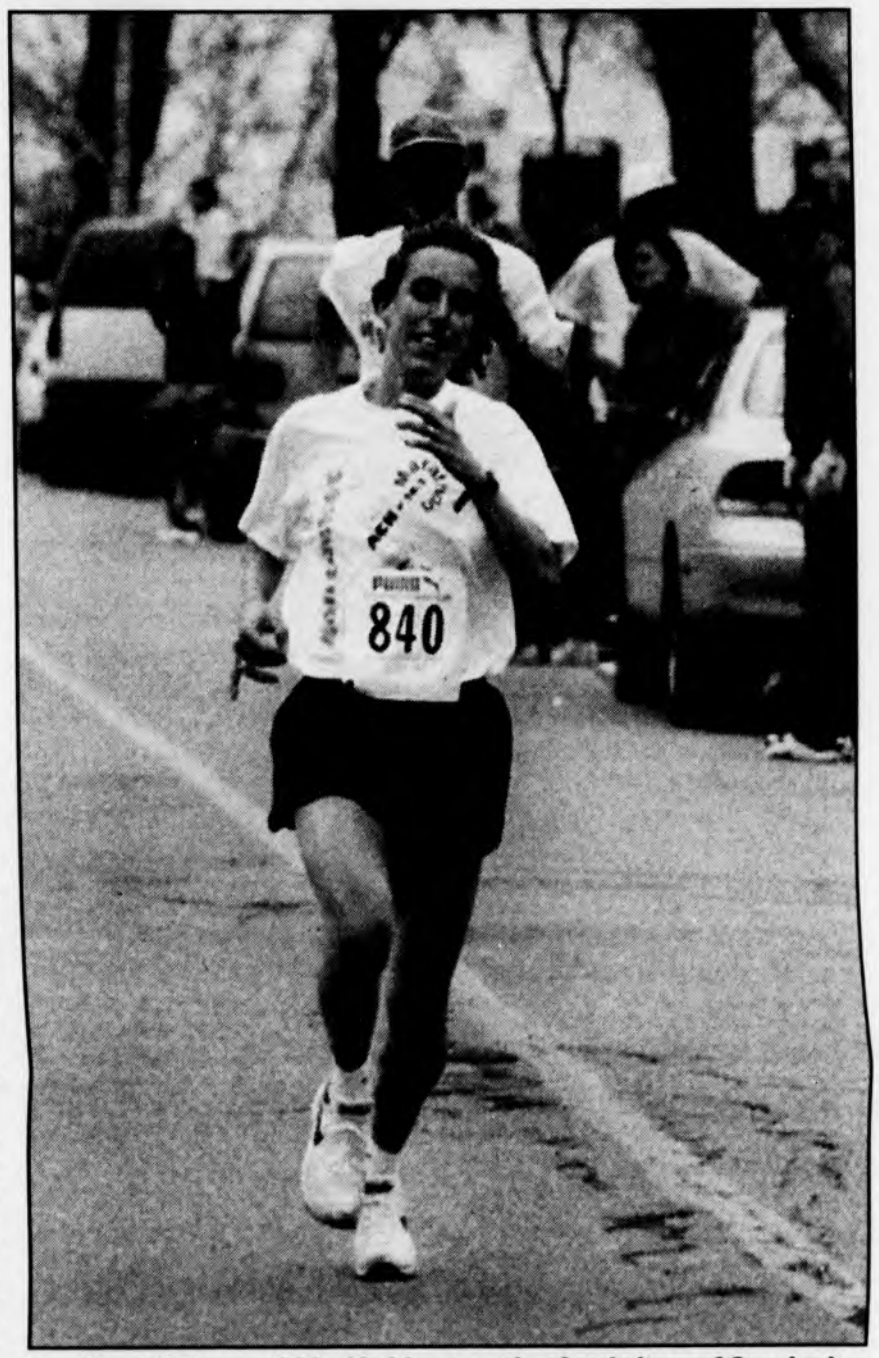
Cohasset dominated the younger age groups in both the men's and women's divisions. Tim Baird led a sweep of the top-four places in the 13-and-under group with his first-place finish. Ross Lieblappen and Daniel Littauer took second and third. Scituate's Jack Cotter was fourth and Cohasset's Paul Cotter clinched fifth.

Jamie Gallagher of Hull won the 14-17 division, but Cohasset runners swept second thru fifth with Robert Morgan, Michael Baird, John Flanagan and Justin Golden all finishing in the money.

Thomas Elliot of Ridgefield, Connecticut won the 50-59 division and Marshfield's Tom Wright outlasted the 60-and-over competition.

On the women's side Melissa Mendel finished second overall, with Jane Salvucci of Plymouth in third. Brockton's Michelle Fobert of Brockton was fourth, in front of Susan Baker of Ridgefield Connecticut.

Cohasset women took three of the top four in the 14-17 category and four of the top five at 13 and under. Jennifer Walter of Duxbury turned aside the competition to win the 13 and under division, but Cohasset runners dominated from there on in with Lindsay Grossman, Jenn Buckley, Lindsay Feig and Miranda Lanzillotti rounding out the top five.



A fourth-place finish in the 14-17 category by Norwell's Emily Eckner was the only thing between Cohasset runners filling all four positions. Katie Buckley was first with Elisabeth Kiddeer in second. Megan Leahy was fourth in the division.

Mary Scherr too the 50-59 division and Scituate's Carol Renaud won the 60-and-over title.

The local businesses, once again, were the major supporters of the race, which is put on by the Cohasset Rotary Club. Fitzsimmons believes it is important to keep the event a community-oriented affair with the goal of improving the race every year.

"I've always been of the opinion that you have to tret the runners right," Fitzsimmons said. "They won't come back if you don't.

"People come out and they just love the race. It's like a rite of spring."

Sarah Nixon of Medfield nears the finish line of Sunday's race. Nixon averaged 5:55 miles to easily win the women's division by more than two minutes in 36:39.

EXTRA POINTS/Joe Reardon

It's Time to Make Little Leaguers Local Heroes

Batters of all ages, boys and girls, will be stepping to the plate, digging in and eyeing the pitcher 45 feet away. With a determined look on his face, the pitcher will go into a full windup after getting his signal from the catcher and fire the ball to the plate. On this occasion it is the batter who wins the battle. He does what is believed to be the toughest thing to do in sports, hitting a baseball. And this particular pitch is clobbered.

The ball is hit deep to left-center field as the metallic clang of the aluminum bat still echoes around the ballpark. The batter takes a quick look at the ball heading skyward and begins to sprint towards first base. As the first-base coach gives him the "green light" rounding the bag, the batter now has a clear view as to just how far he sent the pitch. He notices the left fielder is walking back to his position and several younger kids are scrambling beyond the fence to retrieve the ball. The batter, still running hard, realizes he can now slow down and trot around the basepaths unmolested. As he crosses home plate, the rest of his teammates are there banging on his shoulders and helmet with congratulations.

It's his first home run of the season. If there is a better feeling in youth sports than getting every bit of a pitch and hitting a "dinger" I have yet to hear one.

If you don't think think hitting a home run, making a good fielding play in front of a bleacher full of spectators, or slamming a couple of hits is a big deal for a Little League or softball player, guess again.

I hit my first home run as a 12 year old back in 1977 on an inside fastball Freddy Connolly made the mistake of throwing during a North Braintree Little League game. Low and inside was my "power zone." Not that you have a lot of power when you're 12, but that was the closest thing to it.

I still have the clip of that game, tattered and yellowed, which I cut out of the Braintree Forum. I wasn't a sports reporter back then and I know the Forum didn't have any sports writers assigned to the NBLL beat.

But there was someone at that game with pen and paper. A parent of one of the players, a coach or a fan — I'm not really sure. What I do know was that I scoured the sports pages every week that spring and summer. I hit one more home run that season and the game results when I got a hold of another low, inside fastball for dinger No. 2 ended up in the Forum as well.

I was never a great baseball player, but every dog has his day in the sun. This mutt's came on a warm, spring evening 20 years ago. There are plenty of kids in town who hit home runs on a regular basis, making people forget about Alex Rodriguez with their fielding, and others who play hard game after game, punching out the hits when they can.

Somewhere out there, a parent or coach must step up and record the heroics of the town's young boys and girls of summer. Be as creative as you want. Get in as many names of the kids as possible. They're all winners. Why not send us the team schedules so we can get a photographer to some games.

The fact is, we rely on the community to send or fax us the results. We don't have a big staff or the luxury of being able to cover the games live. We need the community as much as it needs us. Our fax number is (617) 837-4540. Let's give the high school, college, and maybe the pro players of tomorrow the chance to read today their accomplishments on the baseball and softball diamonds.

Take it from someone who had a very short, inauspicious Little League career — they'll save the articles forever.

955 Runners Turn Out For 21st Annual 10K

Randolph's Mel Gonsalves breaks the finish line in front of town hall with a winning time of 32:19 for the 10K course.

Marcia Pourier hands out water to runners at the 2-mile mark of the Road Race By-the-Sea.

1960 Olympic gold medalist in the 1,500 meters, Herb Elliot, cheers runners on at the finish line. Elliot, who hails from Australia, has been living in Cohasset for two years and was the race's grand marshall. He remains the only world-class miler in history to retire from sport undefeated in both the 1,500 and mile.

CYBA Announces Scholarship

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Association is pleased to announce its first $500 scholarship award. Candidates will be former Little League members. One scholarship will be awarded to the recipient at the start of his/her second semester of freshman year. Applications will be available at the high school guidance office. Deadline for the applications must be returned by April 18 Call Bob Moody at 383-0385 for more information.

Cohasset Sailing Club News

Recently the Cohasset Sailing Club held its annual board meeting at the Lightkeepers Cottage. Officers were elected as follows: Chuck Peterson, commodore; Kevin O'Connor, vice commodore; Anne Musto, secretary; and Peter Pescatore, treasurer.

Items on the agenda for discussion and action were a new sign for the club; a possible rescheduling of the "Stanton Series," and the annual lobsterfest (Aug. 9) with an addition of a club regatta that same day. Also on the agenda was a look at the need for an increase in membership fees due to an increase in costs of operation expenses. A small increase was voted on.

Last week volunteers met to prepare the 1997 flyer to be mailed to the community shortly. Look for this to arrive soon in your mail.

The sailing club will open the season with the second annual "Kick-off of the Season Social" June 28. Watch for details to follow.

Little League Dance

The annual Little League dance and fund raiser will be held on May 17 at Kimball's by the Sea from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. There will be hor d'oeuvres and a silent auction. Music will be provided by "The Greatful Dads." Tickets are $25. For tickets or donations to the auction, contact Kevin Lewis at 383-2076.

Little League Parade, May 3

The Cohasset Little League will hold its annual opening day parade Saturday, May 3. The parade starts at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., Cohasset, at 8:15 a.m. and progresses up Main Street to Barnes Field.

The Deer Hill School Band will lead the parade, followed by an excess of 300 players, a fire truck with last year's champions and our special guest, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. We expect more than 1,000 town residents to participate in the parade and ceremony.

Youth Lacrosse Players Needed

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse begins its second season this spring, and has just a few roster spots open for fifth- and sixth-graders. Registration for the program is limited to 30 participants, and 25 youngsters signed up during an enrollment period in the fall.

The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program plays in the Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse League, playing against other youth programs from around the area. In general, the team has a practice or a game twice each week, beginning in late March and running through Father's Day.

To be eligible to participate, a child must be in the fifth- or sixth-grade and must be able to supply their own equipment. The remaining spots on the team will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. To sign up, call Coach Chuck Jaffe at 383-9858.

Little League Umps Needed

Umpires are needed for the upcoming Cohasset Little League season scheduled to start April 13. Senior citizens, adults, college students and high school students are encouraged to participate.

For more information, call Dennis at 383-6448.

Benefit for Hull Lifesaving Museum

As America's oldest commissioned Naval ship prepares to sail for the first time in 100 years, her captain, Commander Michael Beck, will be speaking about the ship's illustrious past and her even greater future, Friday, April 18, 7 to 9 p.m., at the Lighthouse Keeper's Residence, Government Island, Cohasset, Speaking to benefit the Hull Lifesaving Museum Inc., which has worked with Constitution crew members for two years teaching them open-water rowing and sailing skills, Commander Beck will address the audience in full 1812 dress uniform. A gracious and exciting speaker, he also will welcome and answer all questions regarding the ship and her upcoming historic sail in July, 1997.

Museum members are requested to make a minimum donation of $30 per person, non-members $35. Delicious hors d'oeuvres, wine, and soft drinks will be served. A final pleasure will be the view of the sun setting over Cohasset Harbor at 7:30 p.m. For information call Barbie Guild, (617) 925-5433.

Annual Earth Day March for Parks

An Earth Day "March for Parks," a walk and boat ride event to raise money for special programs and support the Volunteer Corps for the Boston Harbor Islands State Park will be held Saturday, April 19. The march will include a harbor tour and walk around Gallops and George's islands. This event is to raise awareness of and appreciation for this unique island park and support for special projects. It will begin at Boston Harbor Cruises on Long Wharf next to the New England Aquarium. Registration will be between 9 and 10 a.m.; a brief kick-off will follow, with the boat departing at 10:30 a.m. (Boat ride charge without pledges is $15.) After walking and touring on the islands, the boat will return to Long Wharf at 3:30 p.m. Bring a picnic lunch and dress comfortably. The march is sponsored nationally by the National Parks and Conservation Association (NPCA), and organized locally by the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands.

"March for Parks" is America's only national walk event for parks and open spaces. The National Parks and Conservation Association sponsors the event to raise awareness and funds for America's national, state, regional, and local parks. This is one of hundreds of marches in all 50 states that will take place in conjunction with Earth Day. All money raised stays at the local level for park projects identified by each organizing group. Locally, the event is co-sponsored by the state park managing agencies: the Department of Environmental Management and the Metropolitan District Commission. Other sponsors are: the National Park Service, Boston Harbor Cruises, M&M Marine Services, Romanow Container, and the Urban Harbors Institute at UMass/Boston.

The first annual Boston Harbor Islands Walk is organized by the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands — providing stewardship to the park through citizen volunteers, educational programs, and advocacy efforts since 1979. The Friends encourage everyone to come explore the harbor islands and celebrate their park on Earth Day. To show your support, and for more information, call the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands at (617) 740-4290.

Dylan, a Cohasset canine, will model his own coat at 'Putting on the Dog,' a fashion show to benefit the Scituate animal shelter.

Putting on the Dog

Twelve stylish canines will model their own fur coats at "Putting on the Dog," a benefit fashion show for the Haughey Animal Shelter, Saturday, April 12, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church. The shelter serves the towns of Cohasset, Hull and Scituate. The event is presented by the Friends of the Scituate Shelter and will raise funds for routine and preventive veterinary care for animals waiting for adoption.

Eleven of the 12 models have been adopted from animal shelters, most of them from the Haughey Shelter. The 12th model is waiting patiently in Scituate for a home of his own. There are both purebreds and mixed breeds in the show from a diminutive Yorkshire Terrier to a statuesque border collie/husky mix. The coats they'll model include an amazing variety of styles and colors.

Tickets are on sale now at the Haughey Shelter on the Driftway in Scituate, at Fitts Mill in the Greenbush section of Scituate, at McSweeney and Ricci in North Scituate Village and at Heads-N-Tails in Cohasset Village. Tickets for adults are $10 and $5 for children. Tickets will also be available at the door.

Refreshments will be served during intermission, and door prizes will be awarded during the evening. St. Luke's is located at the corner of First Parish Road and 3A in Scituate, opposite the town hall.

"A Cruise Down Broadway," an evening of Broadway musical entertainment set to a vacation/cruise theme will be held at Resurrection Church's Read Hall, Main Street, Hingham. The evening will begin with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres at 7 p.m. The show begins at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $25 per person. Reservations are due by April 17. Please make checks payable to Notre Dame Academy, 1073 Main Street, Hingham 02043. Please call Nancy Zaverucha at (617) 740-2136 with any questions.

Eight Weeks to Optimum Health

"A proven program for taking full advantage of your body's natural healing power." Following the guidelines set forth in Dr. Andrew Weil's book "Spontaneous Healing," a support group will be forming to pursue OPTIMUM HEALTH! Each week of Dr. Weil's approach includes five basic areas of focus. There will be an assigned "Project" which includes such things as studying the local water quality and taking a steam bath. The second area concerns "Diet" where we will explore cutting back on meat and oil, and increasing fruits and vegetables. The "Exercise" component will focus on a gradually increasing amount of time for walking each day. We'll also be attending to our "Mental/Spiritual" health through such things as deep breathing, "news fasts" and bringing flowers into our day. And finally, there will be an "Optional" challenge including such things as vitamin and plant supplements, tonics for specific minor health problems and forms of fasting.

Rev. Gary Ritts will be facilitating the support group to begin its nine weekly sessions Wednesday, April 16, 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. It is recommended that each participant have their own copy of Dr. Weil's book, "Spontaneous Healing" (which contains the eight-week regimen and is available in paperback). His latest book, "Eight Weeks to Optimum Health," (hardback only) will be used as a supporting text. The program is free of charge and is open to the public. If you have any questions, would like a brochure or would like to register for the course, please stop by the church or call Rev. Ritts at 383-0345.

Be an Island Volunteer

The Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands are sponsoring three open houses to recruit volunteers for the 1997 season on the islands. If you enjoy the outdoors and are concerned for the environment come and find out more about these unique volunteer opportunities. There will be a special slide show (half hour after start time), refreshments, and experienced volunteers to answer all your questions.

Dates, times, and places are as follows:

Sunday, April 20, Friends office, 349 Lincoln St., Bldg. 45, Hingham Ship Yard, 2 to 4 p.m.;

Sunday, April 27, cruise around Boston Harbor, Boston Harbor Cruises, Long Wharf. Boat leaves at 2 p.m. and returns at 4 p.m. Handicap accessible;

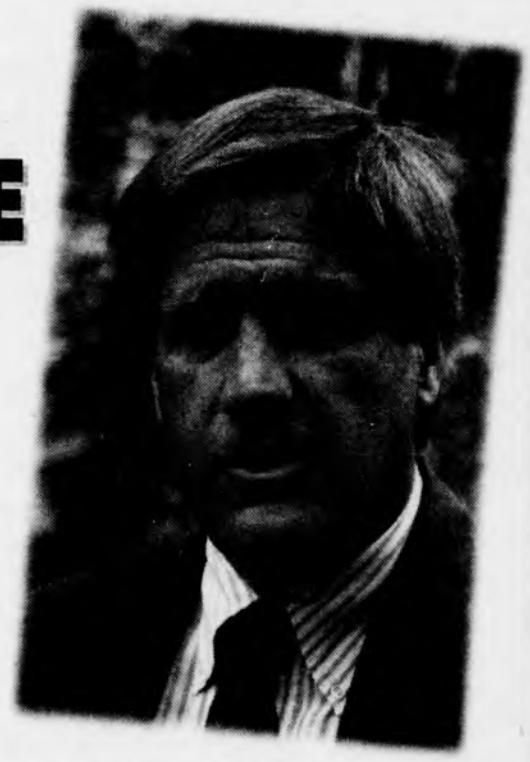
Tuesday, May 6, Beacon House, 19 Myrtle at Joy Street, Beacon Hill, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Handicap accessible.

For more information, call (617) 740-4290.

LIBRARY CORNER

Cohasset Artist to be Honored at Reception

Award-winning artist Kimberlee Alemian of Beach Street, Cohasset, will be honored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library at a reception Sunday, April 13, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the library, 106 South Main Street.



Alemian currently has on exhibit at the library a group of 25 of her recent oil paintings. The show, entitled "Passages" is sponsored by the South Shore Art Center and the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Web sites on the Internet provide crucial financial information

By Amy K. Barrett
WORTH MAGAZINE

Are most of your individual investing efforts spent hassling your broker to send you earnings estimates and annual reports for the stocks you own? Then discover the Internet--it is becoming the place for one-stop shopping for investment research.

Many financial sites offer news, stock quotes, mutual fund prospectuses, companies' annual reports, Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) filings, etc.; much of the information you need to make smart investment decisions. These sites allow you to centralize investment guides and portfolios and to eliminate most of the paperwork. What's more, many offer their services for free or for no more than $20 a month.

Quote.com may be the best known provider of financial services for individuals. The company provides stock quotes to other Web pages, such as that of the SEC. On it's own page, Quote.com also supplies graphs of historical prices for stocks and a personalized ten-stock portfolio with updated prices and calculations of your gains and losses. These services are offered free of charge. "There is a lot of information contained in there -- it's good for research. And I like the format of the site," says Glen Turner, managing director of May Turner Asset Management, a company that advises individuals on their investments.

If you want to get more sophisticated, Quote.com has other services. For $9.95 a month you can set up 2 portfolios, each tracking up to 100 securities, and have them delivered with updated prices and volumes to your e-mail address every day. And the format of the portfolio is yours to customize so that those interested in earnings per share values can get them at a glance along with price-to-earnings ratios, 52-week price ranges and other fundamental data. Along with that basic subscription, you also get news from such sources as Reuters, MarketScope, Business Wire, PR Newswire, S&P News and Newsbytes. And you can add on from there. For $25 a month you can have more portfolios, as well as Vickers Insider Trading Reports to tip you off to whether company officials are buying or selling their own stock and Zacks Investment Research to alert you of earnings estimate changes.

If earnings are your primary concern and you want to monitor changes in analysts' profit predictions and companies' revised earnings estimates, you should check out Zacks Analyst Watch (www.zacks.com), says Jim Jubak, the senior financial editor at Worth Magazine. As with Quote.com, you choose the stocks you want to track in the portfolio format and then Zacks does the rest. Analyst Watch delivers an end-of-the-day report to your e-mail address with the stocks' prices and volumes. It also includes revisions in earnings estimates, changes in brokerage house recommendations, earnings surprises and dates of upcoming earnings reports, says Jubak. Zacks provides more in-depth information related to earnings than most other sites -- and Zacks asks you to pay for it. The service costs $600 a year (there are less comprehensive and, hence, cheaper package deals out there).

You don't have to pay for all financial data on-line. As I mentioned before, the SEC has a Web page which posts stock quotes, company profiles, business activities and, as you may have guessed, Edgar (Electronic Data Gathering, Analysis, and Retrieval System) filings. Companies are required to file these quarterly and annual financial reports with the SEC, stating their net income, gross profit, and debt acquisitions, among other things. The SEC site also allows you to note the companies you want to know more about; the information is updated daily. One caveat; while all of these services are free you must sign up with a user name and password in order to get information updates on certain companies. The registration often requires address, phone number, employment and other information, making this an inconvenience.

Another financial information freebie is Quicken Financial Network. It allows you to create a portfolio to which you can return daily and find updated 52-week highs and lows, p/e ratios, the latest dividend payment, the amount of the annual dividend and the dividend yield -- a particularly good format for blue chip portfolios which often pay dividends.

Among other sites that Jim Jubak has recommended are MarketEdge from Thompson Financial Services (www.marketedge.com) and Market Guide (marketguide.com); both cost less than $10 a month. All of these sites are just the tip of the iceberg of services on-line. So don't hesitate to do your own search for the best combination of services to meet your particular investing needs.

Landfill Owner Says:

Town Has Double Standard Over Dumps

Sues Conservation Commission Over By-Law Violation

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The ongoing battle between the town and the Cohasset Heights Landfill entered a new phase last week when CHL owner Paul Barry filed a lawsuit against the conservation commission. Barry's lawyer, Anton Moehrke, said he filed a lawsuit against the conservation commission last Friday in Norfolk Superior Court for violating a town bylaw.

Moehrke said Barry filed the suit against the conservation commission for failing to hold a public hearing within 21 days regarding a request for determination about the Cedar Street Landfill. Moehrke requested the RFD Mar. 5.

Town bylaws require the conservation commission to hold hearings on RFDs within 21 days of the initial request.

The conservation commission scheduled a hearing on the RFD for its Apr. 3 meeting, 29 days after the initial request.

Safe Homes is Brought Back to Life

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

With the resignation of Chairman Greg Muir, the drug and alcohol committee met Tuesday, Apr. 15 to search for a vision for the group's future. Bill Adams took over as interim chairman for Thursday's meeting.

Members of the committee met with visiting parents, students and selectmen Nancy Roth to brainstorm ideas for the future. Committee members agreed to revive the Safe Homes program under a different name, although the new name has not yet been chosen.

"The Safe Homes project is back and there are two sides to the issue," Adams said. "There are questions about whether we should focus on Safe Homes, but this is something to let people know we do exist and it gives us a focus."

Safe Homes is a written, non-legal document parents sign pledging two things: to keep their homes free of illegal alcohol and drug use, and to prohibit parties in their homes when an adult is not present.

Members of the committee agreed

Town Manager Has No Say on Schools

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The government structure committee met with school officials Thursday, Apr. 10 to reassure them that the town manager would not have jurisdiction over the schools.

School officials felt the article presented in the town meeting warrant lacked adequate language exempting the schools from the town manager's control.

The Education Reform Act of 1993 places most school policy-making decisions in the hands of the school committee.

Town meeting approved a substitute article that clearly exempted the schools from the town manager's jurisdiction.

"The Education Reform Act clearly supersedes anything we do," said Lillian Curley. "House council has told us that state law supersedes this."

School committee Chairman Ralph

Photos of Beacon Rock Sought

The Cohasset Historic Commission is looking for any photos of Beacon Rock — aka Signal Rock — that will show what was there in the mid/late 1800s. Please call Ham Tewksbury at 383-1074 if you have any information and/or pictures of what existed at that historic installation.

Citizens Needed for Town Boards

There are two vacancies on the Greenbush mitigation committee; two on the mosquito control committee; four on the sidewalk study committee and six on the town history committee which compiling information for the third volume of the town's history. Any citizens interested in serving on these boards should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Hedlund Seeks Applicants for Internship Program

Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announced that applications are still being accepted for the seventh annual Ray Shamie Summer Internship program. The internship is open to all college students entering their sophomore, junior or senior year.

The Shamie Internship Award is an annual paid summer internship at the Republican Party headquarters, established in honor of former Republican Party Chairman Ray Shamie. The 10-week, 40 hours per week internship entails working with each member of the state committee staff on a wide array of projects.

The intern selected would begin working in June and finish in August. There is a $2,500 stipend for the program.

Anyone interested in applying for this program can call Sen. Hedlund at (617) 722-1646 or Gary Coon, executive director of the Republican State Committee at (617) 725-1966. Applications are due by May 9.

Government Structure Board Looks Ahead

Now that town meeting is over, members of the government structure committee are eyeing future projects. The committee is planning to take up two projects that could prove as controversial as the town manager article: revisiting the recall article, and exploring representative town meeting or zero quorum, .

Committee member Diana Kornet said the discussion would at least rattle some cages and possibly get more voters to attend town meeting.

The lead signer for the town manager article, Thomas L. Gruber, said selectmen are ignoring the recall movement with the hope that it will go away. One project that would seem to be out of the committee's jurisdiction is a Title V pamphlet. Kornet said committee members just wanted to do something helpful for the town. The board of health is also working on a Title V informational pamphlet.

Drug & Alcohol Forum Proposed

To try to boost efforts of the town Drug & Alcohol Committee, selectmen propose hosting a forum with various groups in town and committee members. They are concerned that to be effective the committee needs more community support. They recently tabled acceptance of committee co-chairman Craig Muir's resignation hoping that he might reconsider. In a long, detailed letter, Muir explained his frustration in trying to garner community support for the committee's efforts. Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown stressed that for the committee to be successful the schools and committee will have to work together. Selectman Nan Roth pointed out that drug & alcohol abuse is a national problem, "one that no one knows how to solve." She said the goal of the forum should be to set goals for the committee and to decide what its role should be.

Selectmen agreed to schedule the forum sometime next month.

Committee Appointments Made

Selectmen appointed Craig G. Blacken, 351 N. Main St., as an associate member of the Osgood School Reuse Committee this week. They also appointed Clark Chatterton, 9 Red Gate Lane, to the town history committee.

Volunteers are still needed to serve on the Mosquito Control Committee; Sidewalk Study Committee; Greenbush Mitigation Committee and Town History Committee.

Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Harbor Antiques gets License

Selectmen approved issuing a junk dealer's (antiques) license to Linda Saucier and Gail Ostrander of Little Harbor Antiques, 23 S. Main St., in the village.

Money for Electricity Okay'ed

The new DPW garages will get the necessary electricity from May 19, when it is expected to open until the end of the fiscal year, June 30. There was no money for electricity for the new garage appropriated in the fiscal year 1997 budget, so selectmen approved the transfer from the town's reserve fund this week. New funds will be available July 1.

Needy Residents Get Tax Relief

Town meeting approved a 50 percent tax abatement for Cohasset's neediest residents. Advisory committee member Carol Martin said the program would cost the town about $14,000 a year from the assessor's overlay account. The program would benefit about 100 residents including 58 disabled veterans, 35 elderly residents, five blind residents and two hardship cases.

Bucket Truck Gets Repairs

The town will spend $895 to repair the bucket truck used by the wire department.

Selectman Peter Pratt explained that although the wire department is being eliminated in fiscal year 1998, its superintendent Steve Wigmore still needs a safe truck in the interim. The truck will also be used by the tree & park department, he said.

Parking Permission

The Social Service League has obtained permission from selectmen to park a Mammography van in the town hall parking lot and a Guild for the Hard of Hearing van on William B. Long Jr. Road during the health fair on May 1.

Concern Aired Over Wording of Sewer Question

Proponents of the override asking for a 50 percent town subsidy for the sewer projects in north and central Cohasset worry that wording of the May 3 ballot question is confusing.

The question does not mention the 50 percent funding issue but selectmen explained that the ballot completes the action of town meeting and doesn't have to be explicit because the town meeting articles covered the details.

> 'When people get through reading it they won't have the faintest idea what they're voting for.'
> — Russ Lennon, Tad Lane.

"It's (ballot) a funding voted of town meeting and not anything else," Selectman Nan Roth explained. "That's what any override does, it provides for something voted at town meeting."

They suggested that proponents get the word out through informational flyers.

Selectmen will get a ruling from the town clerk if it's possible for the town to put informational matter in the voting booth. For future reference, they will also ask town counsel how explicit the wording of ballot questions can be within the law.

If the May 3 override passes, 50 percent of the cost of the two sewer projects will be shared by all taxpayers. If it fails, the sewer users will pick up 100 percent of the cost of the projects through betterments assessed over 20 years.

Russ Lennon of Tad Lane said he was concerned that the wording was so confusing that "when people get through reading it they won't have the faintest idea what they're voting for."

Roth and Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said voters have to take responsibility to educate themselves about the issue.

Conservation commission Chairman Vee Roebuck said the commission had scheduled CHL for its next available hearing, which was Apr. 3. Roebuck added that the commission had too many other hearings to schedule CHL at an earlier date.

Moehrke has also appealed the matter to the Department of Environmental Protection and requested state action.

Barry currently is awaiting a decision from Land Court asking Chief Justice Peter Kilborn to overturn a decision by the town to place 27.5 acres of CHL's landfill expansion plan in a water protection district. The trial concluded last month.

CHL has alleged that the town arbitrarily placed the landfill plan in the water district to block the proposed expansion. Moehrke said town officials also altered an engineer's plans establishing water district lines to include CHL's expansion area.

Judge Kilborn can take as much time as he wants before rendering his decision.

'Paul Barry has been watching us to see if he's been treated fairly and one issue has been the town landfill.'
— Vee Roebuck, ConCom Chairman.

In a letter to the conservation commission dated Mar. 5, 1997, Moehrke requested an RFD for the Cedar Street Landfill alleging that runoff carried sediment into Breadencheese Swamp and contaminated six acres of wetlands. Moehrke also alleged that the town "deposited solid waste directly into the wetland to the north of the landfill."

Moehrke's went on to say in is letter that the sediment is as much as three feet deep, and the "woody plant community beyond the area of deepest sediment deposition and throughout the wetland has died."

No one from CHL or Moehrke's office attended the Apr. 3 hearing. Conservation commission members were confused about what action to take with the applicant not present.

Conservation commission members opened the hearing and continued it until May 15, when DEP is expected to respond to Moehrke's request for state intervention.

Conservation commission member Susan Cope said CHL did not submit an action plan so the application was incomplete.

Roebuck said she was not surprised by the RFD.

"Paul Barry has been watching us to see if he's been treated fairly and one issue has been the town landfill," Roebuck said. "He's supplied us with pictures of Cedar Street along with the RFD."

Moehrke said the town has two sets of standards regarding landfills: one for private landfills and one for municipal landfills. "Historically the town landfill has had sediment running into adjacent wetlands," Moehrke said. "The town has not dealt with Cedar Street effectively, yet it has taken strong enforcement measures against Paul Barry. The town's policy is to treat Cedar Street with benign neglect, while going after CHL with intense enforcement."

At the Apr. 3 hearing, conservation consultant Paul Shea told commission members that health board member Alix White wanted to be informed if CHL representatives or their attorneys attended the meeting so she could also attend.

Conservation commission member Tom Callahan said the Cedar Street Landfill could be a problem for the town.

"Part of the problem is things at Cedar Street happened 20-30-40 years ago," Callahan said. "The landfill was built in a wetland because we didn't have any laws back then to prevent it from happening."

Moehrke said the suit against the conservation commission was "substantively different" from previous complaints.

"The town has used what it calls environmental laws to wage a campaign against CHL," Moehrke said. "Yet they see no problems with the town landfill."

Kidder pointed out that state law forbids the selectmen or the advisory committee from any final say about the schools except for the bottom-line on the annual budget.

Kidder said some of the language adopted at town meeting was still vague. Kidder said references to the town manager overseeing all grant applications and collective bargaining could not legally be applied to the schools.

"I know it doesn't mean the schools are included, but the language could be interpreted that way," Kidder said.

Curley said the intent of the article was for the schools "not to come under the town manager at all."

Thomas L. Gruber, the lead signer for the town manager citizen's petition article, said the language adopted at town meeting eased the school committee's fears.

"The change in enactment at town meeting relieves a lot of fears between the town side and the school side," Gruber said. "As time goes by I think we'll find amendments to this."

Gruber wanted to know how the committee planned to approach the legislature with any changes, but Kidder said only town meeting had the authority to make changes in the article.

"Any changes have to go back to town meeting and then back to the legislature," Curley said.

Town Administrator Ed McCann has started the process of reviewing the article for submission to the state legislature for approval

Diana Kornet said the town could get a quorum at the town election and act on amendments or changes to the article. Town meeting does not officially conclude until after the May 3 election.

But some members expressed concern that the article could be overturned by a determined group at the town election.

"One thing I don't want to see is everyone to come in say what's wrong with this from A to Z," Gruber said.

Kornet said she was sorry to see the article pass in its current form even though she supported the concept of a town manager.

"I was sorry to see it pass because I wanted it to pass with total support," she said. "I didn't say anything at town meeting because I thought everything was said by both sides."

Curley criticized selectmen for opposing the article without fully understanding all the proposed language. Several committee members called selectmen Michael Sullivan "childish" for an outburst against the town manager article at a selectmen's meeting held the Monday following the conclusion of town meeting.

"I think the timing for a town manager was right and it was right for the people," Curley said. "I don't think 75 people should necessarily decide the fate of a town of 7,000, but everyone had the opportunity to go to town meeting."

Gruber added that it was his hope that the town manager would help prevent "the proliferation of committees for things they're not needed for."

to rename Safe Homes to distance it from past failures, and to create a newsletter listing all the participants in the program. Some members felt young people should also be asked to sign the agreement along with their parents.

Susan Shoemaker, original chairman of Safe Homes from 1991 to 1993, said the program was halted in 1994 because town and school officials did not support it.

"We had only a 36 percent success rate in our first year and I was very disappointed," Shoemaker said. "I just didn't see how anyone could not sign an agreement prohibiting illegal drug use in their homes."

Margo Aikens said many people were defensive about signing a document and misunderstood the intent of the program.

"This is meant to discourage illegal alcohol use in homes, not a glass of wine with dinner," Aikens said.

Anthony Bramblett was critical of the program because it didn't deviate from similar past measures which have failed.

"I've never seen any effects of Safe Homes," Bramblett said. "What are we changing this time to make sure it's a success, unlike last time? I don't see many people sweating over kids using drugs and alcohol."

Adams said there was an opportunity to revive the program because a new generation of potential drug users was coming of age.

"We've got to get the word out and tell people who's involved," Adams said. "This is the best kept secret in town."

Shoemaker said the program would only work with the support of town officials.

"If you have support from town leaders it will hopefully trickle down to the community," Shoemaker said. "The first question to ask is whether Cohasset needs a drug and alcohol committee."

Roth said selectmen were already trying to exert a leadership role in the community against drug and alcohol use by young people.

Roth invited members of the Town to get $340K in Federal Flood Relief

Selectman Peter Pratt announced Monday that the town is slated to receive a $341,000 federal grant for the James Brook flood control program.

The town applied for the money following record rains last October which caused extensive flooding in the James Brook basin which runs through the center of town.

Pratt said the state is getting $5.8 million in federal money for flood relief and there is another $4 million in the pipeline.

"I'm not sure if we can stand in line again," he said.

The money will be used to rebuild the entire cove outfall at the corner of Border and Summer streets near the American Legion hall.

Pratt said by rebuilding the existing tidal gates, adding a third gate, and opening up the channel, the amount of outfall can be increased by 50 to 60 percent at peak times which will help alleviate the problem.

Other preventative measures, including constructing retention basins, are needed upstream to rectify the complete problem.

Estimates are it will cost $1/2 million for the cove portion of the $1.5 million James Brook flood control project. The federal money will be used to pay for 75 percent of that part of the project with the town and probably the state splitting the balance.

The town match could be secured at the October town meeting, Pratt noted.

Pratt said he is optimistic that the MBTA may have to kick in some money for the rest of the project because the rail right-of-way now goes through a "federal flood control district. Now the Army Corps of Engineers comes in and tells the MBTA what to do," Pratt said.

The town declared a state of emergency during the October storm. Gov. William Weld also declared a state of emergency in Norfolk and other counties in the aftermath of the storm.

Village Station Study Nixed

Village station proponents won't get an audience in front of selectmen anytime soon.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said that the group was unable to make its full presentation at a meeting earlier this year and should be able to do so.

She said selectmen took the petitions with the understanding that the petitioners would be given the opportunity to be heard at a later date.

But other selectmen said the visit would serve no purpose because they do not plan to reconsider their decision that the train station should be on Rt. 3A and not in the village.

One of the two petitions presented asked that the pros and cons, relating to traffic and other issues, of both sites be studied.

Selectman Nan Roth said the board "does not want to reopen a closed book at town meeting and it was not useful to bring the issue up again." Town Meeting rejected a study and ballot question on the station sites.

drug and alcohol committee to attend the selectmen's drug and alcohol meeting scheduled for mid-May.

She said selectmen would like representatives from municipal boards, schools, police and fire, and residents to come together at town hall and find solutions to drug and alcohol use by teenagers.

"I think it's a great idea and I hope we will invite members from our business community, especially alcohol retailers," Adams said.

Paul Migliaccio: Sealer of Weights and Measures

By Mary S. Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When Cohasset's Woolworth store recently decided to add penny candy by the pound to their already interesting array of goods, they called Paul Migliaccio, Cohasset's Sealer of Weights and Measures. Paul responded by going to the store to check and adjust the scale for accuracy.

As Sealer of Weights and Measures, Paul's first fact was that 'all scales are different.' His premise for seeking this selectmen-appointed position was because 'everybody should get what they pay for and businesses should not be giving their products away. This is accomplished by checking a scale or measure periodically and making any adjustments. It's what I like to do.'

At the Woolworth store, after checking, adjusting and admiring how the six-pound capacity scale weighs out to four decimals (making it accurate to .2000th of a pound), Paul talked about his job.

Q: How do you check for accuracy?

A: The federal requirements of weights and measures are found in Handbook 4 of the National Book of Weights and Measures. I use that as a guide. I also bring a set of weights with me. They were purchased by the town and they go up to 30 pounds.

When checking for accuracy, it's also important for the scale to be on a level surface. The first time I checked this scale (at Woolworth's), it was not. I adjusted it and it's fine now.

If, by chance, I couldn't adjust the scale, depending on whether the problem is a mechanical one or a software calibration, I would notify the store so they could call in a scale maintenance person. In the meantime, I tag the scale with a lead seal, record the information and wait for them to call me to come back and check it again.

Q: How do you know your weights are a proper measuring tool?

A: The weights that Cohasset purchased are state-certified. That means they agree with the state's weight and measures requirements. I have them checked every two years.

The state scales are measured against national scales. Massachusetts will send their scales to the National Institute of Standards and Technology in either Washington, D.C. or Boulder, Colo.

By using this practice, there is an unbroken chain of traceability, if proof along the line is ever needed. Otherwise, everyone is agreeing on what's correct.

Q: After you check and adjust a scale, what do you do?

A: I record the serial and model number and write that the scale passed. In 12 months from this month, I'll come back and check and adjust again. If there's a problem, I'll be back sooner.

Q: What kind of a problem?

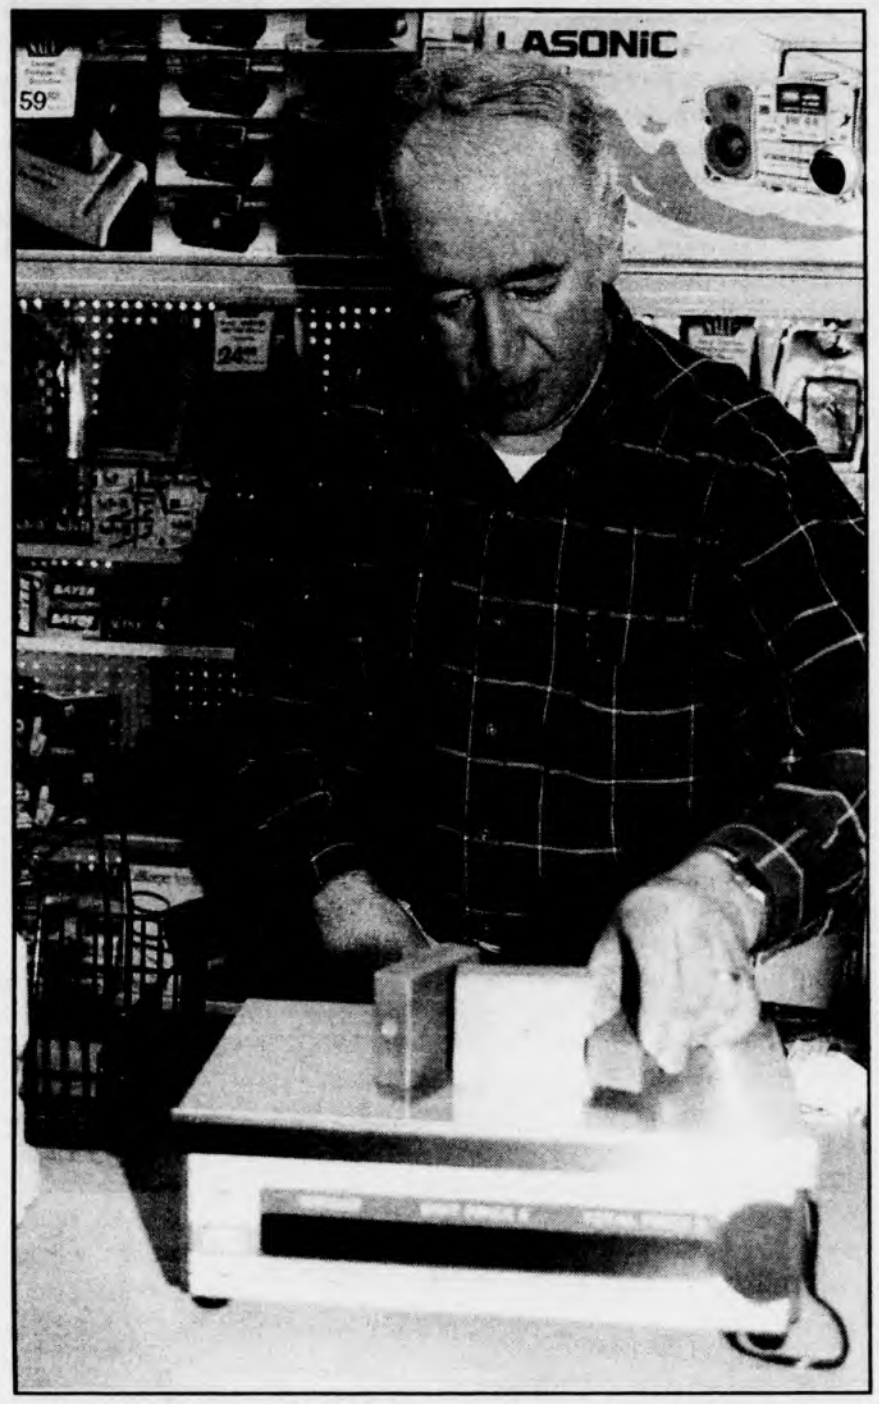
A: Usually a customer complaining that the scale is off.

Q: Do businesses pay for your service calls?

A: Yes, they pay me and I turn the money over to the Town of Cohasset. The payment includes a sealing fee and adjusting fee, if necessary.

I try to be fair to the businesses also. For example, I had just been to Stop and Shop, checking and adjusting their scales, when several months later, they called me to come back because they had gotten new scales. At that time, I only charged them a half fee because I had just been there.

Q: Besides Woolworth's and Stop and Shop, who else do you check?



A: Any business with a scale or other form of measurement.

Drug stores, for instance, have to renew their pharmaceutical license each year. A requirement is to have their scale checked and sealed before they get their license. They call me every year.

Dunkin Donuts use scales because they sell coffee by the pound, as do other shops in Cohasset. I call upon them, as well.

I also go to gas stations and sample their gasoline with a 5-gallon 'prover.' There are usually two or three pumps under an island. Each pump has to be checked because each measures and records. I charge the owner per pump.

The first year I was a sealer, I checked a station that served diesel fuel. After pouring, I saw that he was +25. By law, a measure is allowed to be +6 or -6 beyond preciseness. That he was +25 meant he was four times over. He was giving the fuel away. You can imagine after I told him that and offered to adjust it, how strongly he said, 'Yes, please!'

Paul Migliaccio, who is Cohasset's sealer of weights and measures, tests the scales at Woolworth's.

Q: Is this a full-time position?

A: No, it's part-time. I have my own calibration business. It made sense to me to seek appointment to this job after Mr. Bates retired. It's what I really like to do. It's not just my

ART AND CULTURE OF OAXACA

MEXICO IN AUGUST? YES - if it's a place like Oaxaca (pronounced wa-ha-ka). The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is sponsoring "The Art and Culture of Oaxaca", a fabulous 15 day visit to this beautiful provincial capital in southwestern Mexico. Free from the humidity of tropical Mexico, Oaxaca is nestled deep in a mountain valley, 5000' above sea level, and this picturesque colonial city enjoys a near ideal climate year round. We will take a small group on a specially arranged series of tours through this photogenic city and into the nearby artisan villages as well as to breathtaking archeological sites, such as the pyramids of Monte Alban. Stay at the lovely 4-star Hotel Mision de Los Angeles with its comfortable rooms set amid a botanical garden and featuring a large open pool area and adjacent tennis courts. Wonderful music, regional dance, savory cuisine, color and pageantry let you see why Oaxaca is frequently called Mexico's center of myth and magic. Increasingly popular with art collectors, all that's missing are New York's price tags. We have Nancy Cusack as your knowledgeable guide. A professor at Mass. College of Art and advisor to private and institutional collections, she has been travelling and working in Mexico for 18 years. She will be joined in Oaxaca by local specialists for your customized tours. Your trip includes round trip airfare from Boston; 14 nights double occupancy; full buffet breakfast daily; round trip airport transfers in Mexico and a terrific series of tours to fascinating places in and around Oaxaca with someone who knows and loves this place for a total of $1,895.00 per person.

This will be booked on a "first come, first served" basis so make your arrangements early for this special trip. CONGRATULATIONS TO LINDA & STEVEN TOMASI ON THE BIRTH OF ARIANA & ADAM, APRIL 12TH!!

business, it's my hobby.

When I first became appointed, I went around to all the Cohasset businesses. If they had a scale, I'd introduce myself as the new Sealer of Weights and Measures. I know now that many times, businesses don't call on their own, so I have to keep checking myself. When a new business comes into Cohasset, I have no idea if they have a scale or not, so again I have to check for myself.

Q: What other job-related commitments do you have?

A: I belong to several weights and measures associations — Massachusetts Weights and Measures, Eastern Massachusetts Weights and Measures, the Northeast Weights and Measures, and finally, the National Weights and Measures. All the way up. I go to most meetings to stay on top of what's current.

This past fall I attended a three-day conference in Saugus that was organized by the National Institute of Standards and Technology. It was about price verification and becoming a trainer of it.

Q: What is price verification?

A: Electronic shelf pricing. No individual item on a shelf is price tagged. Pricing is done at the register by scanner. The price of the item is controlled by mainframe computer.

Q: Stop and Shop already does this.

A: Yes, they do. They were also at the conference in Saugus. Stop and Shop is a fair business. If there's a dispute over a scanned item, the store gets on it right away. Ninety-nine percent of the time, it's not the scanner that's incorrect. Scanners don't lie. Usually, it's a human error. Someone will have forgotten to change a price in the mainframe.

Many people think that businesses are out to cheat them. I don't think that's true.

Q: Now that you've been through the course and are a trainer, is this going to be a part of your job as Sealer of Weights and Measures?

A: It's a service I am performing in addition to my regular job description. Unit pricing was always done by the attorney general's office. It's a new situation for weights and measures officials to have the authority to go in and do it. There are currently no fees charged or received. It's something I'm doing because it's interesting and helpful.

Q: So, how do you implement?

A: I've spoken to Stop and Shop already. I'll do the other shops in town.

I basically go in unannounced and pick up 50 to 100 items at random — 100 at Stop and Shop. This gives me a good wide sample. I check out at a register (just like every other consumer, but no sale for me) and I make sure all the items scanned agree with the shelf price.

Stop and Shop will take me a generous two hours to do. Smaller stores, of course, will take less.

Q: It seems that this form of pricing could benefit everyone's time. Any problems that you foresee?

A: The people at the state level and businesses are pushing for price verification. But a problem I can see is that there is no control over taking advantage of people in emergency situations. For instance, the raising of prices of essential items during a blizzard or other type of storm. Until I'm satisfied with a solution, I am not conclusive.

Consignment Shop Volunteers Feted

The Cohasset Consignment Shop's Manager, Andy Merrill of Scituate, will honor 125 volunteers from the South Shore at a brunch at Kimball's By The Sea Monday, April 21, from 11 a.m.. to 1 p.m.

Merrill said the proceeds from the new consignment shop located on Route 3A next to the soon-to-open Shaw's Market, provide the major funding for the social service league's pneumonia shots, counseling and support groups, new friends program, nursing services and "keep well clinics" that include blood pressure screening, weight, blood sugar testing and nutritional education for Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell.

Consignments at the new location will be accepted Monday, April 28, through Friday 10 to 11:30 a.m. The shop will be open daily Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

To volunteer or to seek information call Andy Merrill at 383-0687.

President of the social service league of Cohasset is Jane Russell.

Annual Earth Day March for Parks

An Earth Day "March for Parks," a walk and boat ride event to raise money for special programs and support the Volunteer Corps for the Boston Harbor Islands State Park will be held Saturday, April 19. The march will include a harbor tour and walk around Gallops and George's islands. This event is to raise awareness of and appreciation for this unique island park and support for special projects. It will begin at Boston Harbor Cruises on Long Wharf next to the New England Aquarium. Registration will be between 9 and 10 a.m.; a brief kick-off will follow, with the boat departing at 10:30 a.m. (Boat ride charge without pledges is $15.) After walking and touring on the islands, the boat will return to Long Wharf at 3:30 p.m. Bring a picnic lunch and dress comfortably. The march is sponsored nationally by the National Parks and Conservation Association (NPCA), and organized locally by the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands.

"March for Parks" is America's only national walk event for parks and open spaces. The National Parks and Conservation Association sponsors the event to raise awareness and funds for America's national, state, regional, and local parks. This is one of hundreds of marches in all 50 states that will take place in conjunction with Earth Day. All money raised stays at the local level for park projects identified by each organizing group. Locally, the event is co-sponsored by the state park managing agencies: the Department of Environmental Management and the Metropolitan District Commission. Other sponsors are: the National Park Service, Boston Harbor Cruises, M&M Marine Services, Romanow Container, and the Urban Harbors Institute at UMass/Boston.

The first annual Boston Harbor Islands Walk is organized by the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands — providing stewardship to the park through citizen volunteers, educational programs, and advocacy efforts since 1979. The Friends encourage everyone to come explore the harbor islands and celebrate their park on Earth Day. To show your support, and for more information, call the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands at (617) 740-4290.

Wellspring Walkfest Slated

Tired of the cold? Picture a June day, a long deep, low tide, Nantasket Beach, an invigorating or leisurely walk from the pavilion to "R" Street and back. It's the Wellspring Annual Walkfest scheduled for Saturday, June 14. The only beach walk on the South Shore, maybe even in the state, or universe, and all are invited. Bring your bridge group, or your baseball team; your extended family or your wedding party. Pay a fee to enter or fill a pledge sheet. We just want you, all of you, to come. Celebrate Wellspring and celebrate summer. Think about it, write it on your calendar, and your toes will start to feel warmer already.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Several Cohasset Students Collect Academic Honors

Alexander Gaston, a sophomore at the Holderness School in Plymouth, N.H., has been named to that school's fall semester honor roll. This fall Alexander also took part in Holderness' campus-wide student jobs program, sang in the school chorus, and ran on a boys' cross-country team that claimed its third straight central New England prep school championship.

Alexander is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gaston III of Cohasset.

A round of applause goes to Todd C. Harrington and Matthew K. Lewis; both achieved honor roll status at Xaverian Brothers High School for the second marking period. Todd earned Ryken Honors (completed all courses with grades of 90 or above) and Matthew earned First Honors.

Hope that you have been up to the Alumnae Field recently, and seen the work that has been going on with the new State of the Art Press Box/film stand/announcing stand! Dave Woodworth of Scituate has been spending so much time, lots of it without being paid for it — he is truly doing a spectacular job! The whole thing is great!

Speaking of the field, the brick walk comes to mind. The commemorative bricks are still available, there have been about 100 orders already — they have raised more than $10,000 which is all going to defray costs at the field (such as fencing, press box, etc.). They are hoping to begin work on the walk in early June, so if you would like a brick, now is the time to order it! Two lines on a 4" by 8" brick cost $74, additional lines are $25. They are also selling double size bricks (which hold five lines) for $200. Brick order forms may be obtained at the recreation office in the town hall. Would be nice to see some businesses take a brick or two; great way to advertise don't you think?

Christopher S. Adams, Class of '99 at Connecticut College, has been named to Dean's Honors for the 1996 fall semester. He is the son of Bill and Marilyn Adams, of 178 North Main St. Congratulations!

We have received news from Northfield Mount Hermon School regarding two Cohassetites who are students there. Junior Abigail Kornet, the daughter of Diana D. and John L. Kornet Jr., performed in the 1997 National Festival of the States as a member of the award-winning choral groups at the school. The NMH groups performed in Washington, D.C., from March 15 to 19 in a program titled "Music at Mount Vernon: George Washington at Home." Abigail has participated in the Concert Choir and the Select Women's Ensemble. She was an assistant director in the 1996 Theatre Program One-Act Play Festival, she has performed in the 1996 major production of the Cinderella Waltz and has been a member of girls' crew.

The other NMH local student is senior Brett MacQuarrie, the son of Jane and Chris Kyricos of Cohasset and Stephen MacQuarrie of Wellesley. Brett is part of the team that has advanced to the 1997 playoffs in Springfield's television channel 22 "As Schools Match Wits," academic quiz show competition. The playoffs will be broadcast in May. Brett has been involved in a variety of activities at Northfield Mount Hermon. A student leader, he has served as co-captain of the varsity soccer team, participating in the 1996 New England Prep Schools Tournament. A member of the varsity lacrosse team, he was co-captain of the Southeast

Team in the 1995 Bay State Games. Twice a member of NMH's "As Schools Match Wits" TV quiz show team, he has studied Advanced Placement economics.

We will be sure to keep track of both of these fine students, we are sure to hear more about them!

Robin M. Lawrence, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robin M. Lawrence, received his Bachelor of Arts Degree from Middlebury College after completing academic requirements at the 196-year-old Vermont liberal arts institution. He is one of 99 February grads who make up the class of 1997. We sure congratulate him, and want you to know that he skied down the mountain in a cap and gown with the other grads, and were met at the bottom of the slopes by family, friends and faculty with cheers and hearty congratulations. We extend ours also!

Steven R. Seaman has been promoted in the U.S. Army to the rank of sergeant. Seaman is an intelligence analyst at Schofield Barracks, Oahu, Hawaii. He is the son of Debra Seaman of Slate Hill, N.Y. His wife, Katharine, is the daughter of Rodney Gunnell of 301 Scheliet, Belle Chasse, La., and Mary Sheppard-Earon of Gammons Road, Cohasset. The sergeant is a 1993 graduate of Minisink Valley High School, Slate Hill.

Don't forget to call me with your news, we are waiting to hear all about it!

Alberta M. Pratt

Alberta M. (Marsh) Pratt, 86, of Cohasset past noble grand of the Cohasset Rebekahs, died April 10 at home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Pratt was born in Somerville and lived in Cohasset since she was eight. She graduated from Cohasset High School in 1928.

She had been very active in the Girl Scouts for many years.

Wife of the late Nelson C. Pratt, she leaves six sons, Nelson Pratt Jr., Donald Pratt and Richard Pratt, all of Cohasset, Allan Pratt of Hingham, Elliot Pratt of Duxbury and Edward Pratt of Northampton; two daughters, Marjorie Richards and Marilyn Morrison, both of Cohasset; 16 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

A graveside service was held April 14 in Woodside Cemetery.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Massachusetts Hospital School, c/o Karen Beecham, 3 Randolph St., Canton 02021.

Russell A. Smyth

Russell A. Smyth, 77, of Cohasset, a retired district sales manager for S.C. Johnson's Wax, died April 9 after a brief illness while vacationing in Florida.

Mr. Smyth was district sales manager for S.C. Johnson's Wax for 30 years.

During World War II he was a Navy ensign and pilot aboard the battleship, the USS Missouri.

An avid golfer, he was president of the Cohasset Golf Club for two terms. He was a member of the club since 1949.

Mr. Smyth was raised in Hingham and graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree. He attended St. Lawrence University.

He lived in Cohasset for several years, then in Norwell for 24 years. He returned to Cohasset 11 years ago.

Husband of the late Elizabeth (Mit) Smyth, he leaves two daughters, Susan Smyth of Weymouth and Roxanne Stern of Riverside, R.I.; a sister, Wilma Wiggins of Pittsford, N.Y.; and his companion, Elaine Brackett of Cohasset.

Arrangements were made by the Van Orsdel Funeral Home, Coral Gables, Fla.

COOL!

▶Conclusive evidence that chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) significantly contribute to the depletion of the earth's ozone layer (which blocks most of the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation) has led to cessation of production of the refrigerant known as CFC-12. This is the refrigerant found in the air-conditioning systems of all but more recent model cars. While existing supplies of CFC-12 may be added to older model-cars in the event of loss due to leaks in the system, conversion to a newer, safer refrigerant may be better long-term financial sense than a repair. The EPA-accepted alternative to CFC-12, known as R134a, is used in all new cars and may be installed in older cars as part of a modification of the existing system.

▶Because the safety of us all depends on the care of each one, we make safety our priority--in our automotive care, in our disposal of wastes, in our selection of top-quality parts. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, sticky service problems are challenges we like to solve. Catch the Comet

Have you seen it yet?
We have.

Several members of the Mariner crew gazed heavenward on a recent night in Norwell to marvel at splendid Hale-Bopp.

The twilight began with a haze, but the comet did not disappoint the crowd that filled the Council on Aging parking lot across from a snow covered centennial park.

With the help of the South Shore Astronomical Society's powerful telescopes we saw the bright blue comet, tail and all, and on that night the familiar stars were green, the constellations jealous of their cosmic competition.

"What do you see?" one Norwell dad asked his young daughter, whom he had lifted up to peer into the telescope.

"I see the comet! Its pretty!" replied the child gleefully.

She probably hadn't noticed it before, and maybe won't remember it in years to come. But it's been up there, every night this spring, hovering above the rooftops in the evening sky. And each night, as April progresses Hale-Bopp will appear lower in the sky as it heads away from us and vies with the moon for top billing in the evening sky.

The Hale-Bopp comet with its milky tail is the brightest one earthlings have seen in more than 400 years when the great comet of 1577 streaked by our solar system.

Back in those days, the appearance of comets struck fear and awe in the hearts of men and women who did not understand what on earth they could be, and where they were headed.

Today scientists and astronomers can tell us just about anything and everything you'd ever want to know about the comet du jour, including a comparison to others that have come and gone before it. For instance, scientists tell us that located outside of Jupiter's orbit, the Hale-Bopp Comet is said to be 1,000 times brighter than Halley's which came into view in 1986. The closest Hale-Bopp came to our planet on March 22, is 122 million miles — a bit more than a day trip for sure. Size wise Hale-Bopp — nucleus plus the surrounding atmosphere (known as the Coma) — is more than 100 million km in size with a tail ranging from 15 to 30 million miles long. Consisting of ices, dust and rock, Astronomers compare comets to "dirty snowballs" – as if we haven't seen enough of those recently.

But all that data can't explain away the excitement, the awe and the sheer wonder millions of us all over the planet still feel when we lift our eyes to the night skies, fix them on the comet and say "I see the comet! It's pretty!"

Government Structure Process Clarified

To the Editor:

As a member of the Cohasset Government Structure Committee ("GSC"), I read with dismay the article "Town Manager Process Unwelcome to Some Selectmen." A short review of the "process" is in order.

Many months ago, in the form of a letter from former Town Administrator Gregory Doyon, the Board of Selectmen requested that the GSC research and study options and the advisability of adopting a town manager form of government. The letter ended by requesting that the GSC make a recommendation at the Annual Town Meeting. Appended to the letter for the GSC's review were various town charters employing a town manager form of government. The GSC took this request very seriously. Over the following months, it reviewed the Selectmen's material, collected additional relevant town charters, and interviewed citizens from towns with such a form of government.

This spring, Mr. Tom Gruber, aware of the GSC's research project, presented a draft Citizen's Petition for a Town Manager to the GSC for review and feedback. Over several weeks the GSC shared its research with the citizen's group and worked with the group to assist them in crafting a town manager role that would prove effective and be customized to fit within the existing structure of our town. The meetings and meeting minutes were open to the public and available to the Board of Selectmen. The finished product, to be put before the citizens at the Annual Town Meeting, was enthusiastically supported by both the citizen's group and the GSC.

A few weeks before the Annual Town Meeting, the GSC went before the Advisory Board and the Board of Selectmen to acknowledge its support for the citizen's article and to elicit substantive feedback. Disappointingly, neither board offered any, simply voting not to support the article. The citizen's article was then reviewed by Town Counsel and his recommendations were incorporated into the final draft.

A few days before the Annual Town Meeting, a number of GSC members were called by certain selectmen who asked that we change from supporting the citizen's article to supporting a postponement of the issue for further study. However, once again, when asked, these selectmen could offer no substantive changes or suggestions that would warrant the GSC's recommending the delay of an article that had already received months of thoughtful consideration. Understandingly, the GSC remained enthusiastic about supporting the article and felt that the citizenry deserved a right to hear all sides on the issue and to vote at the Annual Town Meeting. (Interestingly, at the annual town meeting, a majority of the selectmen finally articulated their choice — creating a "strong" town administrator position versus a town manager. Notably, over all of these months, no such proposed job position was ever put before the GSC — a proposal it certainly would have thoughtfully reviewed, notwithstanding its support for a town manager).

In short, for some of the Selectmen to suggest that the above process was somehow a "game," and that the GSC did not retract its support for the Citizen's Article when requested to do so because it had a "need to win," is simply offensive. As a first-time member of a town committee, I was impressed by the efforts of all concerned who worked tirelessly to present this progressive choice of government structure to the voters. Their enthusiasm and time spent should be commended. As a citizen, I am concerned that a majority of the Board of Selectmen, who will hire, direct and supervise the Town Manager, view such responsibility as an "unwelcome task." Better that those involved channel such passions in the direction of ensuring the success of this position. The citizens of this town deserve as much.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

• For all candidates:

Some of public officials are guilty of arrogance in their dealings with citizens. Fact or fiction? If it's a myth, what would you do to dispel it? If it's true, what would you do to change it?

SELECTMAN/Diane C. Sullivan

It is no myth that some elected officials and an occasional member of some appointed board forget why they sit on their board and who put them there and why they are there. Fortunately we are speaking of a minority. Cohasset is most fortunate to have the volunteers we do and who acquit themselves in the highest and best manner, but a very few abuse the function of their committee and let it go straight to a "fat" head.

Our family came to Cohasset from Hingham 20 years ago. I had been active in some issues in Hingham and always felt Hingham is a well run town. When we came to Cohasset, however, we felt as if we had come straight to heaven. One of our sons was born in Cohasset (yes, we have a "townie" in the family). My evenings were pretty much free and I started attending meetings of just about every board in town. I did this both before being elected to the board of selectmen in 1985 as well as after being elected to the board of selectmen.

Often what I saw as a sat in the audience of these meetings horrified me. It seemed to me that some board members were obstructionists. I felt then as I do now that the role of our town boards is to be facilitators. Boards should be helping residents through permits, applications, license procedures and requests for help with equanimity and in a helpful manner. Often that was not the case. No matter what the applicant seeks he must be treated cordially and with respect. No one respects a demagogue.

SELECTMAN/Wigmore Pierson

"Webster's New Encyclopedic Dictionary, 1993" defines arrogance as "a sense of one's own superiority that shows itself in an offensively proud manner." Can there be any doubt that several public officials, both elected and appointed, on several town boards have on several occasions displayed symptoms of this self-serving and offensive behavior?

A cornerstone of my candidacy for the board of selectmen is to bring common sense and a willingness to listen respectfully to all citizens both at board meetings and in private conversations. Common decency and simple humanity demand no less.

Sadly, civility has gone out of our public discourse led by the arrogance of several public officials. Some of our most distinguished and dedicated fellow townsmen have been publicly abused and berated because of their views. For the sake of our town this behavior should stop.

Disagreement on public policy is one thing and a vigorous public debate in the arena of ideas has always been healthy in our democracy. But when certain individuals or groups of individuals come to believe that their views are the only valid ones and that the rest of the population is either stupid or misguided, then it's time for a change of leadership.

If you honor me by electing me as selectman, I pledge to listen to all the people and to serve to the best of my ability.

And if elected, I ask one thing of you, my fellow citizens: If you see any sign that I am becoming arrogant, disrespectful or too impressed with myself, please call me on it at once.

SELECTMAN/Alex Koines

We are all human and often become emotional over issues we believe in but uncalled for arrogance displayed by some of our officials boils down to bad manners. The most recent example centered around the town manager issue and was directed at the government structure committee and our much loved and respected state representative, a woman who nobly served her country in World War II and then dedicated her life to her family, town and district as our state representative. The comment was unfortunate. Members of the school committee have also been criticized for having a "we're right and you're wrong" attitude. It seemed that they would stop at nothing to build the new primary school. It was a mad rush that resulted in an environmentally sensitive location, questionable design and materials, and projected over runs exceeding $1 million.

I look at our town officials and see dedicated people but I do not often see the different opinions or beliefs which we need in order to extract and enact the best ideas. It is not uncivil to have a differing opinion. The answer to the problem is in the hands of every citizen of our town. We all need to become involved. Join a citizens group and put on the pressure, write letters to the editor, help a candidate or run for office yourself. It's your government and it's your money. Town manager is a great start but we also need competence, efficiency, and clear practical thinking, not egos and arrogance.

SELECTMAN/Tom Callahan

Arrogance is the wrong word — incivility, though, is fact. Whether attributable to stress, Hale-Bopp or whatever, we, officials and citizens alike, are all guilty of it from time to time. Indeed, I am more alarmed at the open hostility and incivility shown some boards and officials in the past two years rather than the reverse. We all need to stop and think about it.

The answer is better communication. As an attorney and mediator, I've learned that the key is to find a win-win situation for both sides. I know from experience this isn't easy to do all the time, but I try. On the ConCom, we usually find a way to work out differences. The school site was a perfect example of our turning strong divisions into a win-win compromise. The divided camps that arose over recent issues seem to all result from poor or non-existent communication. As a selectman, I would advocate that all major proposals, programs or changes be fully aired through public meetings and media. Both officials and citizen groups should be willing to fully air all proposals and viewpoints even if they do not agree with the other side. Our major debates must be conducted with sufficient time, depth and information to make informed choices, not by Machievellian town meeting maneuvering. Usually the light of day takes care of a position's merits or lack thereof, and if we simply take the time to debate and find the win-win result, incivility, arrogance and disrespect would disappear.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Susan Turgiss

We are all aware of some instances of arrogance by our public officials at national, state and local levels. I believe that most people come to public service with hopes of contributing to and energizing their town government. They are committed to issues and concerns. Accordingly, frustration is to be expected and limits will be tested. We are often unaware of the commitment of hours beyond professional and personal life that volunteer positions demand.

It is important for public officials to remember that they represent a cross-section of people who have different perspectives about government and life. Citizens expect their public officials to be accessible, and to listen to their concerns.

Realistically, I cannot be responsible for the actions and manner of all public officials. By my conduct, I can set an example of respect and tolerance. As a school committee member, I would present myself in a clear, concise manner and listen carefully to others. My questions would be relevant with the purpose of increasing understanding and checking for accuracy. I would work towards resolving conflict in a positive and productive manner without allowing issues to become a personal power struggle. I believe in an open climate for discussion and decision-making. My strong communication skills would play an important role in this area.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Joe McElroy

Yes, a small minority of our public officials are guilty of arrogance in their dealings with citizens.

To correct the situation, we must encourage broader participation in all aspects of town governance. Voter apathy has translated into the election of too many marginally qualified candidates. At the local level, elected and appointed officials are essentially "volunteers" and we must balance our respect for their commitment with a reasonable expectation of accountability and fairness to all.

The public must display interest in the broad cross section of issues confronting Cohasset if we are to elect officials who respect thoughtful differences of viewpoint.

Too often, elements of the electorate become transfixed by "one issue" candidates. Because of insufficient enthusiasm for public service, "one issue" candidates are sometimes elected and they display zero tolerance for other opinions.

If elected, I will bring a broad perspective and crucial skill sets to the Cohasset School Committee which has become too homogenized. Recently, a small minority has dominated too many aspects of school policy. Successors are carefully selected to fit the accepted mold. Disagreement is not tolerated and some parents feel intimidated. This perception is confirmed by the many citizens advocating for secret ballots. They fear that they will be the subject of subtle (or not so subtle) reprisals.

We are a beautiful town of 7,500 people who will flourish if we respect differences of opinion and the democratic process.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Kathy Ofsthun

I'm sure there are instances where townspeople perceive a public official as arrogant. They feel not listened to or brushed aside. And while I cannot speak for any town official, I can imagine that their arrogance or abruptness is born of frustration. Frustration because they re-visit the same issues (the train, the new school, the sewers) and because they are given responsibility but not always trust.

We could reduce the repetitive discussions/votes by establishing a more definitive process for decision making, e.g. how many non-binding votes should be taken and whether this should occur at the polls or at town meeting. Specifically as related to the school committee, I think that expanded communications with the town would strengthen relationships. School committee meetings could begin with ten minutes for public questions, much like the selectmen's meetings. A mid-year financial report on spending versus the budget may increase knowledge of the budget process and awareness of necessary changes.

This year as president of the PSO, I have tried to be accessible and responsive, and those are goals I would pursue if elected to the school committee. I would contribute energetically to the expansion of the communication efforts begun this year, and would use my financial expertise as a CPA to clearly inform residents about spending and needs.

WATER COMMISSION/John McNabb

Most elected and appointed town officials are hard-working, responsive to citizens, and perform thousands of hours of valuable service to the town of Cohasset. Working for the town is often a thankless task, and one should not idly criticize officials. However, it is unfortunately true that some public officials have shown arrogance in their dealings with citizens.

Such behavior has manifested itself in some cases by town boards improperly conducting public business in private, by individual citizens or groups of citizens being prohibited from speaking before a town board at an open meeting, or being otherwise treated discourteously. Also, sometimes town officials have neglected to respond in a timely manner (or at all) to legitimate complaints from one or more citizen about problems with a town service or department.

Solutions are relatively easy to suggest, but hard to enforce. One way to deal with this would be to establish a written procedure to require all town boards and officials to respond in a reasonable period of time to all complaints or questions from taxpayers or ratepayers. This is especially important in the areas of essential services, such as water or sewer, where all complaints about service should be promptly dealt with.

Town business should always be conducted in the open, except in limited circumstances when an executive session is authorized under the state Open Meeting Law. Town officials should always be courteous and responsive to all citizens and should never forget that they are public servants, not masters.

Next Week's Question:

• For Selectman Candidates:

Some citizens are easily intimidated and are uneasy about voicing their concerns. Do you think selectmen encourage enough public input at their meetings? What would you do to make the board more accessible?

• For School Committee Candidates:

After the divisive debate over the new school last year, do you think the school committee can play a role in healing old wounds and reaching out to those most polarized by the issue?

• For Water Commission Candidates:

If elected, what will you do to prepare users for the water flushing program which will clean out the old pipes but may wreak havoc on household laundry and the like?

Responses must be no more than 250 words and be submitted by noon Monday. Responses my be FAXed to 617-741-2931. The Question of the Week is a service provided to candidates in contested races by the Cohasset Mariner, whether or not those candidates choose to participate is entirely up to them.

Interested citizens are requested to call listed coordinators if they would like to meet the candidate.

April 22 Coffee For McNabb

A coffee has been scheduled April 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Russ and Jean Lennon, 20 Tad Lane, for interested voters to meet John McNabb Jr., candidate for Water Commissioner.

Interested citizens may call the campaign at 383-6202 if they have any questions, and are encouraged to attend. All are invited.

Beechwood Coffee For Ofsthun

On Thursday, April 17, there will be a coffee at the home of Janet Costa, 473 Beechwood to meet Kathy Ofsthun, candidate for school committee. The time of the coffee is 12:30 to 2 p.m. Call 383-1199 for details.

Sullivan Open House

An open house to meet and talk with selectman candidate Diane C. Sullivan will be held Sunday, April 20, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the home of Mrs. John O'Toole, 55 Linden Drive. Mrs. O'Toole and Mrs. Mary Hartwell will be co-hostesses of this event. Anyone who may wish to attend, please call either hostess at 383-6188 or 383-6676.

Coffee for Susan Turgiss

A coffee will be held for Susan Turgiss, candidate for school committee, at the home of Weezie Welz, 12 Windsor Road, Thursday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m.

RSVP to Weezie Welz at 383-9192 or Marie Kelly at 383-1924.

SAFE Candidates Forum

Thursday, April 17, SAFE will host a candidates forum to discuss environmental issues facing Cohasset. SAFE invites all interested citizens to meet candidates for the offices of selectmen, board of health, planning board and water commission, and listen to their views on these important issues. The forum, which will be held in Trueblood Hall at the Unitarian Parish House, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Chamber Candidates Night

Meet the candidates running for local office Tuesday, April 29, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Hear each candidate debate the issues which effect your business and community. Take advantage of this opportunity to ask the questions which impact you and your business.

The following candidates will debate:

Selectmen — Thomas J. Callahan, chamber member; Alexander C. Koines, Wigmore A. Pierson, chamber member; Diane C. Sullivan.

School Committee — Joseph R. McElroy, Hugh Joseph Morgan, Kathleen A. Ofsthun, Susan M. Turgiss.

Water Commissioner — John K. McNabb Jr., John C. Pereira.

Many of us have our businesses in Cohasset, yet we may call our home the community in which we live with our families. Many of us agree that we tend to spend much of our time in our "work" home, Cohasset. Cohasset, then is really our home away from home where our livelihoods are based. Therefore, the decisions of Cohasset elected officials not only impact the residents but they also impact us, the business community. Whether the question is on the tax classification rate; a zoning bylaw; water and sewer restrictions; sign bylaw, parking meters, or even the location of a commuter rail station, all such questions impact the business community and our livelihoods.

Your voice is important and needs to be heard concerning local business issues which are managed and influenced by local elected office holders. Join us on candidates night to question the candidates on your second home, where our livelihood lives.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Solid Work Was Trivialized

To the Editor:

Of course Mary Jeanette Murray had the right and one might argue, obligation to speak to the issue before town meeting. As our state representative, her insights and perspective as to what it will take to make our local government responsive to challenges of complex contemporary issues and fiscal pressures, are invaluable. What troubles me is that in all the silly post meeting "she shoulda-she shouldn't-a's", somehow the solid work and informed presentation by Lillian Murray Curley and the Government Structure Committee has been trivialized.

Make no mistake, Lillian Murray doesn't need anyone's coat-tails to "win" a vote. Her articulate, factual and carefully reasoned presentation reflected the lengthy period of study and unemotional research and review invested in the matter by the Government Structure's Committee. Speaking as one who went to town meeting undecided on the town manager model, I was persuaded by factual information I gained from Ms. Curley's summary of the committee's work, and her unemotional and direct responses to questions raised in the course of debate.

Let's be fair. Lillian Curley, as are all those on our hardworking boards and committees, is a volunteer. She deserves our thanks and respect. And personally, whether Lillian Curley is the daughter of Mary Jeanette Murray, Hillary Clinton, or Bella Abzug won't make a dime's worth of difference in our tax bills. A skilled town manager just might.

Time to Consider Light Rail

To the Editor:

Now that "mitigation committees" meet in South Shore towns, along with a potential lawsuit to demand Hingham's tunnel, the time has come for a reconsideration of a light rail line to Greenbush, over the Old Colony track bed. This is the ultimate "mitigation:" no locomotive noise or vibration, no pollution, minimum disturbance of wetlands and historic sites, no Hingham tunnel, in-village stops, and easily achieved safety.

Greenbush light rail would terminate at Quincy Adams station on the Red Line, near where the Old Colony used to branch west to Hingham. Greenbush would thus resemble the Riverside Line, which also carries commuters through Newton, Chestnut Hill and Brookline on an old heavy rail track bed. The MBTA's present plans for parking lots need not be modified.

Rapid-transit interurban light rail cars would minimize fares, maximize use, and provide low-cost scheduling flexibility. Street-crossings are no problem, and safety can be maximized with automatic traffic signals and without objectionable warning horns.

I am fully aware that to switch from heavy rail to light rail at this point in time requires a very high-level decision. There are, I recognize, clear disadvantages to light rail, some of which were published by the MBTA, resulting in its earlier rejection. But the rejected system (to Braintree and then to Boston on the Red Line tracks) is not the one proposed here, which would place an Ashmont-type transfer station at Quincy Adams. In my attendance at the heated discussions of heavy-rail mitigations in the Citizens' Advisory Committee in Cohasset, I have found people also ready to discuss, at least informally, a light rail alternative. In particular, I was asked to report the list of objections to light rail in the MBTA literature I had with me. The objections were regarded, in the main, as solvable problems, considering especially the near-unsolvability of the heavy-rail problems discussed.

While the choice of light rail would be in line with MBTA construction and operating experience, it would also be forward-looking and state-of-the-art. For example, low-noise wheels could be used, as in systems in Montreal and Washington D.C. Recent re-establishment of light rail in Baltimore and its proposed use in Orlando point the way to the future in urban-suburban transit.

My advocacy of light rail is based on my concerns, as a resident of the South Shore, for the need for a commuting facility and at the same time the preservation of rural character. My professional experience (in systems engineering) suggests that the choice of light rail over heavy rail for Greenbush is primarily a matter of scale; heavy rail is overkill in this particular application.

Bravo! For Teen Center Support

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Teen Center Board of Directors and the teens, I would like to extend a very sincere "thank you" to the Cohasset Drama Club and all the very talented students and adults who participated in the outstanding benefit production of "The Wizard of Oz" held on April 8 at Scituate High School.

This was a wonderfully successful fund-raiser for the teen center. We wish to thank all our supporters and extend a special thanks to Mrs. Collins' second grade students and families who came to show support for the teen center and to cheer for a classmate in the play. "Bravo!"

Thanks for Fine Article

To the Editor:

The "Special to the Mariner" article by Mary Earon about me was very well done. Thank you so much.

So many people complimented me on the write-up and admitted their lack of knowledge on the issue until they read the interview.

Please tell Alan Chapman that I also appreciate his fine photographic work.

It was such a pleasure to meet Mary Earon and I am looking forward to reading other special features she has in the Cohasset Mariner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Standpipe Decision Should Be Changed

To the Editor:

Cohasset is fortunate to have an abundant supply of surface water with the interconnection of Lily Pond and the Aaron River reservoir, a modern treatment plant capable of meeting the demands of the town well into the next century, and secondary back up ground water source of supply in the James Brook watershed. However this source of excellent quality water was abandoned due to neglect several years ago, leaving the system with only one source of supply.

If a major mechanical breakdown should occur at the treatment plant, pollution or contamination of Lily Pond and/or the Aaron River reservoir, or any other interruption of the supply, with no back up supply to put on line, the storage tank could be depleted within hours.

Now it has been recommended to the commissioners that a second storage tank should be constructed at the same location as the existing tank and connected to some of the oldest mains in the system.

Let us now apply the same type scenarios to the storage facility as we did with the supply. The plant alone could not meet the fire flows and the domestic demand in all sections of town under these conditions.

First and foremost, the second storage tank must be constructed now, at a different location and connected with new direct main lines to the distribution system. Sufficient funds to accomplish this have been approved at the recent town meeting. Water main replacement, without question, is essential. However adequate storage and back up supply must be given higher priority.

Call your water commissioners and attend their meetings. Convince them the second storage tank must be in a separate location, remind them of the need for a secondary ground water supply. The James Brook watershed has been a source of excellent water since 1886.

Many of you must be wondering, who is the writer of this letter. I was born and raised in Cohasset and made it my home for more than 50 years. I served with the U.S. army amphibian engineers during World War II. A licensed master plumber, I have worked in Cohasset and surrounding towns for many years. Spent over 20 years with the Cohasset Water Department, 14 years as superintendent, and superintendent of the newly formed sewer department simultaneously. After moving from Cohasset, I held the position of water resource technician with the Southwest Florida Water Management District. I am now active in sales and bookkeeping for a small manufacturing company. I spend a part of every year in Cohasset with family and friends.

I have no ax to grind, nor would I benefit financially or politically from anything pertaining to these projects.

My heartfelt concern is that the Cohasset water system becomes the system that was the vision of so many hardworking dedicated people with whom I worked when the improvement project began with the construction of the Aaron River dam, reservoir and treatment plant several years ago.

You, the citizens of Cohasset deserve nothing less.

Thanks for Lobster Lab Support

To the Editor:

On behalf of the generations of students who will now have the opportunity to develop and pursue their scientific interests at the Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology & Genetic Research, we wish to sincerely thank all of our supporters who provided such a clear mandate for the project at town meeting. We are especially grateful to those members of town boards and committees who stood up and spoke in favor of the lab, despite the concerns and opposition of a vocal minority. We now look forward to moving ahead with fund raising and building renovations, and hope that everyone will unite behind this unique project and assist in bringing the lab to life.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

COSMETIC SURGERY

QUESTION: My home needs quite a bit of repair before I put it up for sale. How far should I go financially in order to make it "salable"?

ANSWER: If it's relatively small amount of improving apperance, fine — but think twice before investing large sums into making EXTENSIVE improvements prior to selling. You'll be lucky to get back 50¢ on every dollar spent. The exception to the rule is what we call "cosmetic treatment." Paint and paper once over lightly may be prudent.

You may find that you can sell the house faster, with more profit by dropping the price the same amount you expect to spend on repairs.

$63,825 Raised to Fight Cancer

The American Cancer Society has reached its $1.1 million goal for the 1997 Daffodil Days campaign. The Society's South Shore Unit, which includes Cohasset, raised $63,825 for American Cancer Society programs of cancer research, prevention, patient support, and education. More than 44,000 bouquets of daffodils were sold for $5 each, to make up the record-setting statewide total.

Proceeds from Daffodil Days have contributed to programs including $26 million in American Cancer Society research in Massachusetts, patient and family support networks, free goods and services for cancer patient, skin care screening, tobacco control and smoking cessation education, a toll-free information line that receives nearly 20,000 calls a year, and mammography outreach and education.

For information about cancer prevention and detection, and referrals to local support services for cancer patients, call the American Cancer Society toll-free at 1-800-ACS-2345.

Carol Baroudi

Internet Author to Speak

What do families at the Boston Computer Museum, rocket scientists in Washington, D.C., faculty at McGill University in Montreal, and Cohasset residents all have in common? All have the chance to hear Carol Baroudi, co-author of the million-plus seller "The Internet for Dummies." Baroudi has guaranteed us a "hot time" on May 8 when she comes to Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. and presents an engaging, funny, thoughtful look at how new technology affects us and what we can do to get the most out of it.

Baroudi has spoken to audiences throughout America and in Europe and Canada. She was recently featured in The Interview in "The Boston Globe" magazine. Her book has been translated into 14 languages. She has been lauded for her ability to explain, both in print and verbally, the global Information Revolution and its boundless opportunities in a manner that is both understandable and entertaining.

Recently Cohasset residents have been asked to support a town web site and they will be asked at an upcoming town meeting to provide financial support for technology improvements for the town. Baroudi's presentation will be a good resource to help voters make an informed decision.

Mark your calendars. Save the date. Join us for this special evening, Thursday, May 8, 7:30 p.m., in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Spring Benefit For Nursery School

Usher in the warm breezes of May with an evening out to benefit the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. The sounds of the Grateful Dads will fill the Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeeper's House from 8 to 11 p.m. as the Parents' Board presents its first-ever spring fundraiser May 2. Proceeds from the evening will benefit the school's programs and scholarship fund. Tickets are $50 per couple and may be purchased by calling Janyce Brown at 383-9828 or Ann Stenbeck at 383-2753.

Birth Order Is Topic

The Social Service League of Cohasset will present 'Birth Order: How Your Place in the Family Affects Your View of the World' by Jack Agati, Thursday, May 1 at 7 p.m. This informative program will take place at the Lightkeepers Residence, 96 Border St., Cohasset Harbor for $5 per person. Pre-registration is required.

Look at the many characteristics associated with the various positions in the family. Participants will gain a better understanding of their children's behaviors and learn how to avoid potential conflict.

The workshop will help participants to identify many characteristics associated with the oldest, only, next to oldest, middle and youngest in the family, and understand how family position affects interactions between parents and children, teachers and students, spouse and spouse, manager and employee.

Agati has worked in public education for more than 15 years as a teacher, counselor, and director of special education. For the past 12 years he has worked full time as a presenter in the area of child development and home/classroom management strategies.

Food Pantry Hours

Starting Tuesday, May 13, the Cohasset Food Pantry will no longer be open during the evening. Beginning with Tuesday, May 13, the food pantry's expanded morning hours will be from 9 to 11 a.m.

The Destruction of Minot's Light

By David Ball
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One of the most disastrous storms to ever strike this coastline occurred 146 years ago this month. That storm and the recent April Fool's Blizzard of 1997 should be good reminders that major storms do take place during this month. While our recent snowstorm dumped close to 2 feet of snow and caused widespread power outages, the other storm, nearly 1-1/2 centuries ago, was far more destructive. Like many calamitous storms, it became known ever after as the Minot's Light Gale, since the storm toppled the first Minot's Light. It was not until the Great Blizzard of 1978 that a storm would produce a higher tide along the Massachusetts coast.

The story of the destruction of the first light starts with the construction design of the light. When it was determined a light was needed off the coast of North Scituate, engineers at the time decided the most economical and safest design would be a tower on iron legs. The theory was that waves would pass harmlessly through the supports. Work began in 1847 and the 80-foot tower was officially placed in operation Jan. 1, 1850.

The legs of the tower extended 40 feet above the ledge. The first platform was open to the weather and used as a boat deck. Fifteen feet above that was the store room where all the supplies were kept. Directly above the storeroom was the living quarters. It was in the shape of an octagon and 10 feet in diameter. The lamp room was about seven feet high and fitted with the best lamp available at the time. The upper structure weighed nearly 30 tons.

Almost immediately, the keepers noticed the structure vibrated during storms. They only had to look at the design to know why. The vertical leg supports were placed too close together and the keeper's quarters made the light top heavy.

Mr. Gordon visited the light

"The lighthouse won't stand over tonight—she shakes two feet each way now."
—JW & JA Minot Ledge Lightkeepers

Dec. 28, 1850. Gordon later said of his conversation with Keeper John Bennett, "I was cooly told that it was very doubtful if it stood through the winter, as one of the supports had split the rock, and when a sea struck the house, it shook so as to take a man off his feet, and only a week before, one of the assistants was thrown from his berth by the shock of the sea, and a barrel of water was emptied of two-thirds of its contents by the oscillation."

Another storm struck Sunday, March 22, 1851. For four days the keepers struggled to keep the light burning. Because of the constant swaying of the tower they found it nearly impossible to eat or sleep. "The Odd Fellow" newspaper published the following after that storm:

"The Government can easily provide additional security to this now frail structure; and if it is desirable, to have a light on Minot's Ledge, it is of vital importance, not only to the mariner, but to those who have the bravery and courage to live in and keep it, that immediate steps be taken to afford protection to both."

Three weeks later the horror of living on the light played out once more. John Bennett, the head keeper, had gone to Boston to purchase a new boat for the light. The assistants, Joseph Wilson and Joseph Antoine, were at the light to carry out the duties. April 16 a storm of unprecedented strength hit the coast. Throughout the day the tower was pummeled by the high seas. Somehow the keepers managed to keep the light burning until shortly before high tide at midnight. By then Wilson and Antoine knew they were doomed. Somehow one of them, probably Wilson, managed to write a short note, stuff it in a bottle and throw it into the ocean. Then a wave higher than all the others smashed into the tower and knocking it over into the sea. Wilson managed to swim ashore, but he later died from exposure. This is known because his body was found well above the reach of the surf. Antoine's body was also recovered a short time later. An excellent account of this storm is found in Historic Storms of New England by Sidney Perley published in 1891. A copy of the actual note will be on display at the new maritime and Irish Mossing museum.

"The lighthouse won't stand over to night — she shakes two feet each way now." JW & JA

David Ball is president of the Scituate Historical Society.

LIBRARY CORNER

Library Computer Network Upgrade

The computer system of the Old Colony Library Network will be unavailable for use April 19 to 27, while a new system is installed and the 2.5 million item database is converted to the new system.

The system upgrade is funded by a federal Library Services and Construction Act grant of $230,000, administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

The upgrade is necessary in order to provide 90 added terminals, for a total of 464 terminals. Brockton recently joined the Network, which serves 25 cities and towns from Quincy to Plymouth, Cohasset to Walpole.

Services will continue. Staff will help customers locate books and information even though the on-line catalog will be unavailable. Customers should bring their OCLN cards to any member library so staff can record the barcode number. The Paul Pratt library will ask customers to limit their checkouts to five items in order to ease the temporary manual procedure. Overdue charges will be waived through April 30.

The system upgrade will also enable graphical display of the on-line union catalog and of remote databases including the Massachusetts Library and Information Network (www.mlin.lib.ma.us/) and Internet.

During the downtime, on-line hold-requests and interlibrary loans will not be possible. Staff will take written requests and fill them when the system is restored.

Dust off those dancing shoes. The Cohasset Soccer Club will be hosting a Boston Harbor Sunset Dance Cruise Saturday, June 14. Enjoy a very casual evening watching the sun set over the skyline of Boston aboard the 200-foot Provincetown II, while being entertained by continuous live music from four bands on three separate decks. Passengers may board at the World Trade Center in Boston, or at Pemberton Pier in Hull. Tickets are $30 each until May 31 and $37.50 from June 1 on. Tickets may be purchased from any Cohasset Soccer Club coach or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Soccer Club, Sunset Dance Cruise, P.O. Box 409, Cohasset, 02025.

Proceeds will provide three $1,000 scholarships to selected graduating Cohasset High School seniors who are active in voluntary community service. Maintaining and upgrading soccer fields, equipment and uniforms. Continuing education — coaching courses, youth and adult refereeing courses, and pre-game soccer clinics.

Homework Discussion Postponed

The Deer Hill School Council has postponed its evening discussion: "Homework and Time Management: Balancing the Fulcrum Between Work and Play," which was originally scheduled for April 2 but canceled due to the blizzard. The forum will be held in early September as a kick-off event to start the school year.

Spelling Bee and Paris Raffle Raise $15,000 for CEF Language Lab

By Jim Kinch
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A recondite (difficult) list of words, coupled with the relentless ticking of the horologium (clock) kept the capacity crowd enthralled as they cheered for their favorite teams in the third annual Cohasset Spelling Bee, Wednesday, March 5.

The adult bee, sponsored by the Cohasset Education Foundation and held at the high school cafeteria, was a velitation (skirmish) to the very end, with teams successfully spelling words such as oscilloscope, anorthopia, and demulcent. Curt Collins, principal of Cohasset High School, served as moderator for the second year in a row, and provided quite a few laughs with his dead-pan humor; at one point consoling a team who had misspelled an easy word by saying "Makes you want to die, doesn't it?"

A new feature of the bee this year was a "bee-stro" set up the Silver Spoon Cafe, where contestants and audience could purchase delicious dinners, desserts and snacks throughout the evening.

Competing for prizes and glory were 30, three-person teams, many sponsored by local businesses. Organized into five preliminary rounds, and one final championship round, there proved to be some formidable spellers on the roster this year. When the dust finally settled, the champions were the St. Stephen's Bee Sharps (Louis Eaton, Sally Slade Warner and Paul Krupczak), who each won a one-month membership and fitness evaluation at Fitness First. Second prize went to the Swimming Bees (Mary and Bill Foley and Mary Staunton), who won gift certificates to the Fireking Bakery. The other finalists were the Heather Drive Honeybees (Sue Spofford, Diana Kinch, and Trish Morse), the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High Teachers (Ed Leary, Jed Fitzgerald and Tom O'Neill) and the Senior Class (Mary Ahearn, Ham Tewksbury and Jackie Dormitzer).

Finally, came the moment that many in the crowd were waiting for, the drawing of the winning ticket for the trip to Paris. Rev. Gary Ritts, Citizen of the Year, did the honors, and pulled the ticket of Alan and Linda Genovese of Howe Rd. Organizers of the bee had hoped to notify them by phone on the spot, but unfortunately got their answering machine! However, when reached by phone later, they were very excited, and have already booked their trip for May.

The event was a huge success for the CEF, and much of the credit goes to the organizing committee of Pam Speed, Midge Stone and Bernadette Faulkner. They are very grateful to the many individuals and businesses who participated this year, and note that the CEF is now getting closer to their $100,000 goal to have a new language lab in place at the high school for the '97-'98 school year.

Special thanks to the following businesses and organizations who sponsored teams or made donations this year: Cohasset News, Cohasset Teachers Association, Cohasset Soccer Club, Cohasset Basketball Boosters, Cohasset Tennis and Squash, Jack Conway Inc., Dunkin' Donuts, Fireking Baking Co., Fitness First, Flemings, Gems of Hope, Hallmark 100, Hunneman Coldwell Banker, Mill Pond Tennis Club, Nut'n More Natural, Pat's Barbershop, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Prescription Orthopedic Sports Therapy, Rockland Trust, St. Stephen's Church, Silver Spoon Cafe, South Shore Chevrolet, Village Butcher and Deli and Village Greenery Inc.

The CEF plans to make the European trip raffle an annual event along with the spelling bee, and looks forward to announcing next year's destination. Stay tuned.

David Buick, Paul Cotter and Terry Kahn check each other's spelling during the successful spelling bee last month to benefit the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Laxmen Teach Hingham Tough Lesson

Lacrosse Team Beats South Shore Power at Own Game

Bigger is not always better, but it can get the job done with quality personnel.

You can pencil the Cohasset High lacrosse team into the postseason tournament nearly every year. And be sure to put an asterisk next to it when you do because the Skippers also have the distinction of being the smallest school to go up against the Newton Norths and Weymouths.

And while the squad may be from the smallest school, it certainly doesn't lack the talent and will to win. Hingham High found just how tough the Skippers are on Tuesday as Cohasset built a 4-1 halftime lead and held the tough Harbormen club off in the second half for an exhausting 6-5 win.

Lacking the overall depth of Hingham, the Skippers' defense came up big on several plays and got some fine goaltending in the waning minutes from Ely Kahn.

"The great ones will keep you in the game," said Cohasset coach Ken Ekberg. "Ely made three or four great saves and kept us in it in the last four minutes."

The Skippers moved the ball well in the opening half, highlighted by textbook transition goals. Jamie Buick led Cohasset with a pair of tallies and an assist, while Erick Moore also whipped home two goals. Jon Lacks and Burke Davis each had single tallies for the Skippers.

Hingham threatened in the second half as Cohasset made a half dozen mental mistakes. Ekberg attributed some of the mistakes to the players' overall fatigue of playing such a strong first half. However, Ekberg said the mental mistakes are the main aspect of Cohasset's game it must overcome for continued success on the field.

"If we can do that," Ekberg said, "we can play with a lot of people."

Buick accounted for seven of Cohasset's nine points in the Skippers' mistake-filled 9-6 home win over Falmouth, last Friday. He garnered a hat trick and assisted on four Cohasset goals. Cohasset went up 4-1 after the opening period and led by a seemingly comfortable 7-3 at the half.

It was the third period, however, that forced Ekberg to have a none-too-happy meeting with the team, following the game.

"It's easier to criticize a team after a victory," he said. "The number of mental mistakes we made was enough to lose the game. If we play like that the rest of the way, we won't go far."

Kahn had 14 saves, nine of which came in the second half.

Lacks joined Buick with three goals, while Ted Goff, Moore and Matt Belson netted single tallies.

The win over Falmouth came on the heels of a meaningless 20-1 fiasco against an overmatched Westwood team on April 10. Cohasset had little trouble dominating Marshfield during the teams' April 8 contest. Moore led the way on offense, scoring four goals and adding an assist. Bob Stansell found the back of the net three times and Buick, Lacks, Dave Noble and Burke Davis all had a tally each. Buick and Lacks led Cohasset with three assists apiece. The Skippers play their first night game of the season on Friday night against Duxbury. The game gets underway at 7 p.m. on Alumni Field.

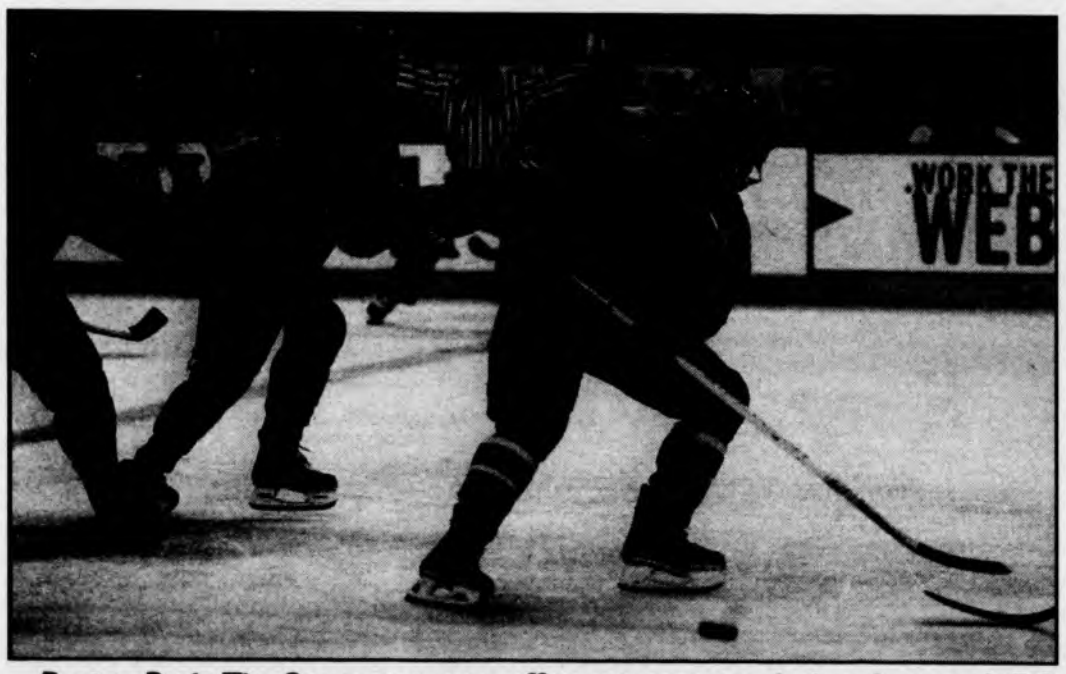
Bruin Tim Sweeney Looks to The Future

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Two young boys stood next to Boston Bruin Tim Sweeney as they waited to have their photo taken with the former Olympic star at Saturday's sports memorabilia show at Hanover High School.

One of the boys, however, wanted to get closer to Sweeney so he moved past the other youngster and stood comfortably next to him. Content with his position the photo was taken and the boys went on their way, clutching glossy photographs of Sweeney, which he autographed, giving a personalized touch to both.

For Sweeney, who turned 30 years old on Saturday, appearing at the show was a welcomed change of pace.



"I usually have time to do only two or three shows a year," he said. "I enjoy doing them and seeing the fans. The only time you really get to talk to people during the season is before and after the games."

Sweeney was obviously enjoying himself during the two-hour autograph session. Several of the younger kids, in awe of Sweeney, hesitated as they approached the table, but they soon became more relaxed as the personable Sweeney began chatting with the youngsters. He asked kids their names and struck up conversations with them as he signed hockey cards, pucks emblazoned with the Bruins' logo, and game photos.

Sweeney, whose wife gave birth to Timothy Jr. four months ago, was approached by a young girl who gave him her name and phone number in case he ever needed a baby-sitter. One young boy placed a team photo of the '96-97 Bruins in front of Sweeney for him to sign.

"This photo's going down in infamy," Sweeney said with a laugh before giving the glossy his John Hancock.

It was an enjoyable afternoon for Sweeney, one day before the Bruins were to finish up what a disastrous season for Boston. The Bruins won their final game of the campaign, 7-3, over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

For Sweeney, and the Bruins in general, the end of the season couldn't come quick enough. A shoo-in for the playoffs over the years, Boston missed qualify for the postseason for the first time since 1967.

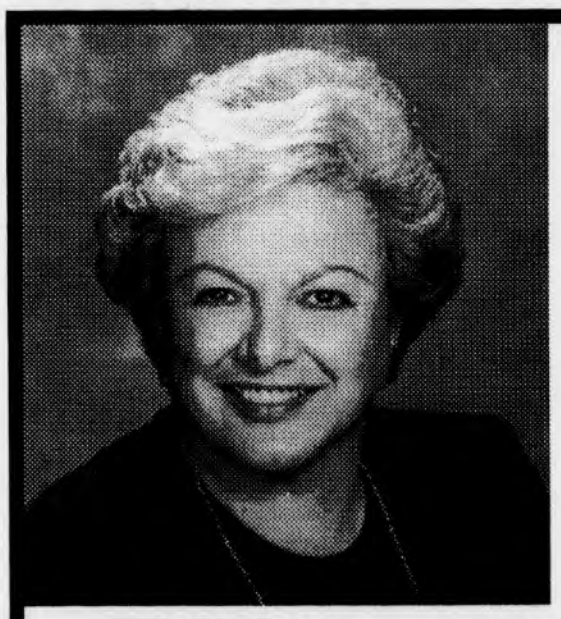
Junior Laxmen Swamp Falmouth

The Cohasset junior lacrosse team won its first game of the season in convincing fashion, routing Falmouth, 15-4.

For most of Cohasset's players, who are in fifth and sixth grade, the game at Falmouth High School represented their first time playing in game conditions. They responded by jumping to an early lead and then setting a new single-game scoring record for the youth program.

Midfielder Matt Davis scored three of Cohasset's first four goals en route to a 4-0 first-quarter lead. Curt Kahn netted three of his four goals in the next period, which ended with the score 11-1.



Attackman Evan Pestone was the third Cohasset player to record a hat trick on the day. Robert Hickey added two goals and an assist, with Paul Cotter, Robert Carpenter and Michael Rasmussen adding single tallies. Mike Geddes, Dwayne Morris and Mike Ernst registered assists.

Nick Murphy, who stepped into the goal for the first time just two days before the team's first game, made eight saves.

The junior lacrosse team plays its first home game on April 20, against Duxbury at 1 p.m.

Investing: Improving on dollar-cost averaging

Investors who put a fixed amount of money in stocks or mutual funds each month - a practice that benefits from dollar-cost averaging - may want to check their calendars before they mail in their next check.

By Amy Barrett
Worth Magazine

Making those regular purchases at the right time of the month can pay off over the long term. Recent studies show that stocks have monthly cycles, and an investor may be able to benefit by buying shares during the "down" period before it trends upward.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Dollar-cost averaging itself can be a smart strategy because it helps investors get a good price when they buy stock. The idea is that by buying stocks systematically, spending the same amount each time, an investor will end up acquiring fewer shares when the price per share is higher and more shares when the price is lower - resulting in a lower overall cost per share.

But proper timing can make a difference, too. Recent studies show that the broad stock market (reflected in the Standard & Poor's 500 Index) goes through a monthly ebb and flow and suggest that an investor can make the dollar-cost averaging strategy even more profitable. An upward swing in prices tends to happen in the last couple of trading days of a given month and the first four trading days of the proceeding month, according to Yale Hirsch, president of the Yale Hirsch Organization, Inc. and editor of The Stock Trader's Almanac. "It would be best -- based on this strategy -- to buy on the 25th of the month," says Hirsch.

Hirsch bases his conclusions on a study of the S&P 500's performance over the last 33 years. Hirsch broke the period down into three 11-year segments and calculated the average monthly gain for the period of the 26th day of a given month to the 10th day of the following month and then the 11th through the 25th. He found that in all three segments the first period outperformed the latter period, rising on average 0.6 percent versus 0.1 percent (you can get roughly 0.1 percent by putting your money in a savings account).

Chris Hensel, client executive at the Frank Russell Co. has come to similar conclusions. In a study he did with William T. Ziemba, a professor at University of British Columbia in Vancouver, he found that the "turn of the month" pattern extends back to 1928 (they concluded the study in 1993). And Hensel and Ziemba narrow the window during the last two days of the month through the first three days of the following month

Why is this "turn of the month" phenomenon so seemingly consistent? Hensel and Ziemba say it results partly from money flowing into the market from salary, dividends and interest payments made on the first or last days of the month. Another factor could be the behavior of money managers who, before the end of a financial quarter, want to sell stocks that have done badly so they don't tarnish their quarterly reports, says Hirsch. "Anything that becomes embarrassing to hold they will dump at the end of the month and reinvest that money at beginning of the next month," he said.

Because both of these studies used the S&P 500, the strategy of buying stocks a few days before the end of the month best applies to broad indexes designed to mirror the market. "The pattern should show up in individual stocks, but would apply best to mutual funds," said Hensel.

And remember that these trends tend to span at least ten years; buried in these averages are aberrations (already this year, for instance, the S&P 500 rose 10.2 percent only to give up virtually all of this ground by the first week of April). If you stick to a disciplined dollar-cost averaging plan, though, you should benefit in the end—and not the least because it will help you stave off urges to buy stocks based on cocktail party chatter.

Jeffrey B. Little and Lucien Rhodes, in their book Understanding Wall Street , illustrate how dollar-cost averaging works by looking at shares of Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa) for the period between 1977 and 1986. Alcoa's stock wasn't a particularly good performer over those years. But by 1986, those investors who had bought $2,000 worth of shares per year by making monthly payments would have done quite well. The average price they would have paid for their accumulated 677 shares would have been 29 1/2 per share. In 1986 the shares traded at a median price of 39 1/2 and as high as 46 3/8. If the investors sold the shares in 1986 at the average price, they would have realized a 34 percent gain over ten years, not including dividends which could add perhaps another 30 percent (at 3 percent a year, for example). So that's 60 percent over ten years -- not bad for a supposedly laggard stock.

Question Marks Surround Batmen's Slow Start

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset started the baseball season solidly, triumphing over Scituate on a diamond tundra. However, the Skippers won only one their next five, beating Norwell at home, but getting blown out by Norton and fading in the late innings to a solid Abington squad. The Boys in Blue battled the Hanover Indians ferociously in their fifth game the season.

The Indians, one of the two or three strongest teams in the highly competitive South Shoe League, sent a lefty to the mound, while Cohasset coach Ron Ford started hard-throwing righty, Joe Magner. Magner pitched a solid game for five innings, allowing only one run, but the Skippers nonetheless lost, 3-0, in a hard-fought battle.

Magner held the Indians, who were technically playing a home game on Cohasset's Milliken Field due to the unavailability of their own diamond, to no hits through three innings and actually had a perfect game until a Texas Leaguer fell in behind second base. Center fielder Grant Emde had several putouts on the day and his performance was indicative of Cohasset's defense through out the game. Committing zero errors, the Skippers were led defensively by first baseman Kevin McKenna, third baseman Rob Buckley, and Magner, who later played superbly at second base.

Despite their goose egg in the scorebook, Cohasset had no trouble hitting Hanover pitching. Buckley ripped two hits and McKenna had two more. Sophomore hurler Jim O'Sullivan mopped up for Magner, allowing two runs on a bases-loaded single to right.

If Cohasset deserved to win against Hanover, they certainly deserved to lose to Hull the following day. Playing without emotion and with no offense, Cohasset went down quietly, 6-4. The only sign of life came in the sixth inning, when Buckley scored on an O'Sullivan single to right. Shortstop Greg Taylor, the team's leadoff hitter, followed by roping a triple to left field, scoring O'Sullivan and catcher Mike Rossi.

The Skippers' pitching staff is on the mend, with most of the hurlers nursing sore arms. Taylor, normally a horse on the mound, has been unable to pitch due to arm problems. Freshman Joe Pergola was forced to leave the game early on Tuesday because of arm trouble. Magner and Ben Ketchum have been strong on the mound for CHS, and John-Paul Laugelle has also provided some spot relief.

The Skippers hold a lot of promise and this year's edition is the most talented in years. However, they have yet to pull it all together. If the defense can be shored up and the bats find a little life, who knows what lies ahead for this year's club.

"The last 20 games or so have been tough," Sweeney said. "A lot of guys without much N.H.L experience have been playing and you don't really score a lot of goals that way."

It was also a season filled with several bizarre incidents that left fans and players alike, scratching their heads; Adam Oates' criticism of management which sealed his fate in Boston, and Bill Ranford signing a two-year extension and then, along with Oates and Rick Tocchet, being dealt to the Washington Capitals for former Vezina Trophy winner Jim Carey, Jason Allison and Anson Carter.

Sweeney said he was "surprised by the trade" and only time will tell if it was successful.

He did say he was "especially surprised" Ranford was traded, especially after having signed the contract extension. But he believes the change of Ranford for Carey in the Bruins' net should solidify the position for several seasons.

"I think that was the best part of the trade," Sweeney said. "Both guys are quality goaltenders, but Jim is 10 years younger."

Sweeney admitted he was looking forward to putting the season behind him and getting prepared for next year. But he knows there is a chance he may not be wearing a Bruins uniform next season. His contract expires and Sweeney is not sure what management has planned.

Sweeney, though, is hoping he'll stay put with the black and gold. "I'd love to come back next year," he said. "It'd be great. I have a house in Hanover and can drive to the games and come home after."

Sweeney always had the NHL in the back of his mind in high school, but he concentrated more on getting into college.

"The NHL was always a dream in high school," he said. "I was hoping to go to a good college. Things fell into place and it turned out working well for me."

Sweeney politely excused himself and stood with a pair of boys for yet another photo. It's a picture they'll no doubt save for a long time.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Baseball Tryouts

American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118 in Cohasset will hold baseball tryouts May 10 at 8 a.m. at Milkin Field, Cohasset High School.

Basic Navigation Course

Hewitts Cove Marina, Tern Harbor Marina and Cohasset Harbor Marina are proud to offer a course in basic boating navigational skills. This half-day seminar will be offered Saturday, April 19, at the Weymouth Vo-Tech School on Commercial Street. Instructors for the course are Paul L. Milone, Weymouth harbormaster and Robert A. Buotte, Tern Harbor Marina manager. Buotte is also the former Hingham harbormaster. The course, designed to instruct boaters in chart reading and navigation, is for those who are new to boating or need a refresher. This is one of a continuing series of seminars offered by the marinas to promote boating safety and enjoyment. Call Paul L. Milone at (617) 682-6109. Hewitts Cove Marina is in the Hingham Shipyard. It is one of the largest marinas in New England and offers more than 350 slips and 120 moorings. Hewitts Cove Marina is a member of the Sea Chain family of marinas.

Little League Dance

The annual Little League dance and fund raiser will be held on May 17 at Kimball's by the Sea from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. There will be hor d'oeuvres and a silent auction. Music will be provided by "The Greatful Dads." Tickets are $25. For tickets or donations to the auction, contact Kevin Lewis at 383-2076.

Mary Jo Meisner Named Editor of 119 CNC Papers

Mary Jo Meisner

By Kurt Blumenau
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Proclaiming "high goals and big ambitions" for the Community Newspaper Company, former Milwaukee Journal Sentinel editor Mary Jo Meisner was named editor of CNC's 119 publications yesterday.

In announcing her appointment, CNC president Michael Veitch praised Meisner's experience in competitive journalism markets throughout the United States. Before editing the Journal Sentinel, Meisner served as managing editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, city editor of the Washington Post, and metropolitan editor of the San Jose Mercury News and Philadelphia Daily News. She began her career as a labor and business reporter at the Wilmington News Journal in Delaware.

"It's invaluable to us that we have someone in here who's had so many different experiences on the reporting, editing and executive editing side of things," Veitch said. "We wanted someone who has been exposed to consistent editorial excellence, and who expects it."

Meisner, 45, grew up outside Chicago and earned bachelor's and master's degrees in journalism from the University of Illinois at Champaign.

She is a board member of the International Press Institute, a past Pulitzer Prize juror, a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and chair of that society's 1996 Writing Awards.

"I'm thrilled to be coming to Boston to work with CNC's great team of journalists," she said in a written release. "I firmly believe that community journalism is the heart of newspapering because it provides the strongest link between journalists and the readers they cover."

Meisner said she wants to build CNC's reputation as the premier place for strong local reporting, from breaking news and enterprise stories to school sports scores. CNC owns six daily newspapers, 95 weeklies, and 18 shoppers that circulate in more than 140 communities with a total circulation of more than one million.

"We want to be known as the best," she said. "This is really the cutting edge of journalism, at the very local level. I think we can show we do it, and do it really well."

Meisner, who has taught at the Maynard Institute, the Poynter Institute and the American Press Institute, said she hopes to bring educators from those schools to work with current staffers.

"We're looking forward to the leadership she will provide to our talented editorial staff," Veitch said in a written release.

She also plans to form associations with local journalism schools to attract talented young writers to the company.

"I'd like this to be known as the destination point for the best young journalists coming out of schools," she said. "I want people to think, 'This is a place where I can come and get a real good workout as a journalist, and I could stay here ... It's a place where I can make a difference and learn some things every day.' "

Meisner said she will help set quality standards and editorial policy where appropriate and expand CNC's on-line content. She helped develop the Journal Sentinel's Internet service during three and a half years with the Milwaukee paper.

Meisner, who will be based in CNC's Needham office, plans to work out of all the company newsrooms on a regular basis.

Rethinking Career Options at Mid-Life

Matrix Career Services will be offering two Career Workshops at the Hingham Public Library. Joanne Meehl and Florence Reddish, career counselors with more than 10 years of experience, will present the following workshops.

"What Do I Want to Be When I Grow Up? Mid-Life Career Changing" will be offered Tuesday, April 29, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library, Whiton Room, 66 Leavitt St., Hingham. Cost $35. Call (617) 792-0032 to register.

Tuesday, May 6, Matrix Career Services will offer a job search workshop "Interviewing Techniques for the Career Changer" from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library Whiton Room, 66 Leavitt St., Hingham. Cost: $35. Call (617) 792-0032 to register.

Mars, Venus Counseling Center

Joyce Dolberg Rowe, licensed mental health counselor, and president of the Massachusetts Mental Health Counselors Association, announces the grand opening of her Mars and Venus Counseling Center, currently the first center of its kind in Greater Boston and New England at large.

Personally trained and licensed by Dr. John Gray, author of the book, "Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus," Dolberg Rowe is offering counseling (individual, couple and group) and workshops for singles and couples based upon John Gray's work. Dr. Gray uses the Mars/Venus metaphor because he feels that, "Pretending that men and women are from different planets helps to deal with the opposite sex in a loving and accepting way, leading to better relationships."

Tuesday, April 22, you are invited to attend a free one-hour introductory seminar at the Hingham Public Library. Sunday, May 18, Joyce Dolberg Rowe will present a full-day workshop on "Men are From Mars, Women are From Venus" at The Red Parrot Restaurant in Hull.

Clamming Fee Issue Stuck in the Mud

Cohasset Diggers Pay Out-of-Town Rates

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

In 1994, when the clam flats at Bassings Beach reopened for the first time in 12 years, local recreational clammers flocked to town hall for digging permits.

That year, 312 Scituate residents and 67 non-residents were issued clamming permits, said Town Clerk Barbara J. Maffucci.

Much to their dismay, Cohasset residents found that they had to pay $50 annual non-resident clamming fees to dig in their own backyard. Scituate residents pay $20 annually for clamming privileges.

While Bassings Beach is located in the south section of Cohasset Harbor, the town of Scituate owns the area where the flats are open.

"It's caused a lot of hard feelings," said Cohasset Shellfish Constable Clifford Dickson. "But people interested in clamming are willing to pay the $50 to go to Scituate."

The high cost of clamming for non-residents seems not to have discouraged out-of-towners from getting their feet muddy, said Maffucci.

In 1995 and 1996, more than 60 non-residents received clamming permits, she said.

For now, the clamming fee issue between Cohasset and Scituate hovers "in limbo," Dickson said. Until a few months ago, the town administrator had been "nibbling away" at resistance in Scituate.

"It never worked," Dickson said. "If you're not a resident of Scituate, you have to pay out of town fees."

Since the town administrator resigned a few months ago, "I don't think anybody's been bothering them

Town Rebuts CHL's Cedar Street Claims

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Town officials are calling Cohasset Heights Ltd.'s latest lawsuit against the conservation commission an attempt to divert attention from its own problems.

CHL attorney Anton Moehrke has confirmed that Paul Barry has filed a lawsuit in Norfolk Superior Court against the conservation commission for violating a town bylaw. Moehrke has also filed a complaint with the Department of Environmental Protection.

The latest filing brings to six the number of lawsuits between the privately-owned CHL and the town.

Moehrke made a request for determination (RFD) on the town-owned Cedar Street landfill March 5, alleging that siltation and runoff was damaging wetlands and vegetation.

Town bylaws require the conservation commission to hold a hearing on an RFD within 21 days, but the Cedar Street hear-

Route 3A Changes with the Times

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

What state road measures 53.2 miles long and stretches from Neponset Circle in Dorchester to within one mile of the Plymouth/Bourne line? The answer, of course, is Route 3A and the busy road is experiencing significant changes along the three-mile Cohasset stretch.

It's hard to believe in this age of super highways that just a few decades ago Route 3A was the main highway to Cape Cod.

In a case of "the more things change, the more they stay the same", Route 3A traffic traveling to and from Cape Cod experienced major back ups.

Cohasset's Week

Healthy Bites at Beach

Douglas Bennett, 250 Gannett Rd., Scituate will be allowed to sell healthy snacks at Sandy Beach, selectmen said this week.

Bennett was awarded the last of three transient vendor licenses awarded in town each year.

Bennett said he plans to offer healthy meals and alternative snacks including yogurt, freshly squeezed juices, fruit cups and chicken and vegetable roll ups.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris pointed out that the other vendors are offering sausages and ice cream.

She said Bennett's food selections "sounds great."

Bennett also said he is creating a cookie that he will offer for sale.

Vacation Time is Extended

Selectmen agreed to allow DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield to extend the time he can take his unused vacation time to Oct. 31, 1997. Litchfield said he has 98 hours of 1996 vacation time that he was unable to use by April 1 because of various town projects.

Gjesteby Appointed to Regional Board

Selectmen appointed Martha K. Gjesteby, Old Pasture Road, as the town's representative to the Massachusetts Area Planning Council subject to her acceptance. They thought they had appointed Gjesteby some time ago but now think that may have been to a transportation committee within the MAPC because of recent MAPC notification that the town needed representation to that state agency.

Monte Carlo Night Coming

The American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118 plans to hold a Monte Carlo night from 7 p.m. to midnight May 16 to raise money for its scholarship fund. Selectmen approved the request this week pending that any necessary state permits and licenses regarding "games of chance" are obtained.

Eighteen Arrests in March

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan reported to selectmen in his monthly written status report that there were a total of 18 arrests last month. Arrests included three for possession of a Class D substance with intent to distribute; two for operating under the influence of alcohol; two for assault and battery domestic; one for assault and battery on a police officer; three for operating a motor vehicle after license suspension; one for operation a motor vehicle without a license; three for outstanding warrants and two individuals were taken into protective custody.

There were 107 emergency 9-1-1 calls last month.

Noonan said the two new police recruits graduated from the 18-week police academy and after a short in-house training period will be assigned permanent shifts.

"These assignments will greatly reduce our need for overtime," Noonan said.

Cunningham Bridge may be Painted

Selectmen will consider using surplus highway funds to paint Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue.

DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield notified the board that would be a good use of the excess money which is usually used to resurface streets.

The money has been freed up because this year there is no sense in resurfacing those streets, which will be torn up later for installation of sewer and water mains.

But selectmen held off giving Litchfield the go ahead to paint the bridge until they determine if the money should be used on other projects such as sidewalks or the resurfacing of other roads.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said the bridge had not been painted since 1978. He explained that an engineer must be hired to examine the bridge and get the necessary permits in order, a process that could take three months.

Painting the bridge is in the capital plan, but selectmen may advance the project if Litchfield convinces them it is a priority this year. Otherwise the bridge would be painted next year, selectmen said.

It will cost about $50,000 to get the permits and paint the bridge, which is steel and should be maintained. There is a surplus of about $80,000 in the highway account.

Selectmen will also work on a plan to prioritize various public works projects.

Fifth-Graders at the Dump

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown reported that Deer Hill School fifth-graders and school Principal Paul Callahan had a successful tour of the Recycling Transfer Facility.

"It was a great time, they had a great day," Brown said.

Warrant Printing Costly

Selectmen authorized a transfer from the town's reserve fund of $558 to cover the printing of the town warrant which was twice the normal size, town administrator Ed McCann. He said the project went out to bid and is charged per page.

Pre-Prom Plans at Lightkeepers

Selectmen were notified this week that the pre-prom party will be at the Lightkeeper's House on Government Island from 6-7:15 p.m., May 29. The teenagers will then be taken by three trolley buses to the Barker Tavern in Scituate for the prom which goes until 11:45 p.m. They will return to Government Island at 1 a.m. after the post-prom party at the Second Congregational Church.

The Ed Young parking lot next to the Lightkeepers will be used for the seniors' cars. Parents and friends will park at the sailing club and fishermen's pier.

Plans for Route 3A Subdivision Aired

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

A developer wants to build a 17-acre subdivision in an area surrounded by wetlands close to Sanctuary Pond.

Members of the conservation commission reviewed the preliminary plans Apr. 3 and asked the builder to return with a wildlife habitat evaluation and revised measurements of the flood plain line. Rose Hill will appear before the conservation commission again on May 1 at 8:30 p.m. in town hall.

The developer must also receive approval from the planning board, which reviewed the plans at its Apr. 16 meeting. The planning board granted the developer two waivers: one to construct only one sidewalk in the subdivision instead of two, and the other to flag trees greater than 18 inches instead of 12 inches.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore Jr. said there were so many trees on the lot that it seemed reasonable to ease up on the flagging requirement. The board also exempted a 100-square-foot area from any tree flagging because it is a protected wetland.

The planning board closed its public hearing and will decide whether to approve the plan at its May 7 meeting.

Daniel V. Calano Jr. is one of the landowners in a trust that wants to build a 14-home subdivision, called Rose Hill, on a 17-acre site off Route 3A. The entrance to the subdivision would be off Route 3A with the road branching off into two cul de sacs.

Daniel V. Calano Jr. is one of the landowners in a trust that wants to build a 14-home subdivision, called Rose Hill, on a 17-acre site off Route 3A. The entrance to the subdivision would be off Route 3A with the road branching off into two cul de sacs.

Calano said the plans conformed to all ecological requirements including the placement of property lines at least 100 feet from wetlands and 200 feet from the river. He added that the health board had approved all of the lots for septic use and a septic design was being created.

Conservation consultant Paul Shea said the commission would scrutinize the subdivision closely because of its location near a river.

"This is the first project before us since the state Rivers Act for undeveloped property," Shea said. "This is a big project near the James Brook and Sanctuary Pond."

Some members of the commission questioned whether the developer's drawings showed the proper buffer zones for wetlands and the river.

Shea said the plan may not meet the state's 200-foot buffer zone for development near rivers because the developer did not take his measurement from the annual mean high-water line.

Calano's engineer, Peter J. Ogren of Hayes Engineering in Wakefield, said the state had not yet clearly identified the correct way to implement the Rivers Act. Ogren said the state had advised developers and towns to use the Rivers Act as an advisory tool until it defined the correct method of implementation.

Conservation commission member Tom Callahan also questioned the developer's 200-foot buffer zone delineation for the flood plain. Callahan said the engineers did not take their measurement from the center of the brook.

Conservation Commission Chairman Vee Roebuck said she wanted to examine the project closely because of its scope.

Calano said the site would require a large amount of grading and filling because it was so much lower than the surrounding area.

But Callahan disliked the idea of filling in a wetland.

"I'm reluctant to allow an inch of fill in the flood plain because of the flooding that hit the village last October," Callahan said.

Callahan also wanted to know how much vegetation would be displaced by the construction.

Ogren said the land already contained significant paved areas including an old road and a former DPW site.

"There is already a road there so the site is not undisturbed," Ogren said.

Calano said he planned to construct homes only as each lot was sold.

Callahan said he wanted individual homes to appear before the conservation commission for the possibility of permits and notices of intent.

Shea wanted to see a plan detailing how detention ponds would be maintained and who would maintain them.

Tom Foster, the southeast regional director for the Trustees of Reservations, was concerned about the impact the project would have on the dam at Sanctuary Pond.

Linda Keller lives downstream from the proposed development and was concerned about flooding.

"We were flooded from James Brook in the October storm and we want to make sure this project doesn't worsen our problems," Keller said.

Thank You Letter

Selectmen will send a thank you letter to U.S. Congressman William Delahunt for his efforts to file special legislation to secure $1.5 million in dredging money for Cohasset harbor. The bill will start in the House of Representatives and then move to the Senate, Selectman Peter Pratt said.

"This puts our foot in the door. We owe Delahunt a debt of gratitude on this," Pratt said.

South Shore commuters sitting in lengthy traffic jams on Route 3 this summer can take solace in the fact that traffic on Route 3A traveling to and from the Cape used to move so slow that drivers would pull over for lunch, said David Wadsworth, curator of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Wadsworth remembers traveling to Cape Cod by way of Route 3A.

"I remember enormous traffic jams even worse then what you see now on Route 3," Wadsworth said. "The traffic would back up for miles and it could take you two or three hours to get home."

Wadsworth said 3A was built sometime in the 1930's. Because some of the streets in Cohasset were used as part of the highway, sections of 3A still use original street designations, like the lower end of King Street.

"As we like to say, King Street runs underneath Route 3A," Wadsworth laughed.

Planning board Chairman Al Moore Jr. said the construction of 3A predated zoning regulations and made for some unique challenges.

"A lot of land owners opposed zoning, but they saw Route 3A as their road to riches, because they owned property on a big, state highway," Moore said. "The town had to make a lot of deals permitting commercial development. That's why there are a lot of commercial lots on 3A."

Wadsworth said the Cohasset stretch came about after the town negotiated its best deal with the state.

After the road was built, Wadsworth said the first new business development he can remember was a group of shops on the Scituate town line.

In 1955 the town enacted its first zoning regulations and Route 3A was zoned for light industrial use, Wadsworth said.

"It was zoned light industrial purposely to attract light, but not heavy, industry to what was a vacant area at the time," Wadsworth said. "That's why there are so many strip malls and small businesses on 3A. It also added some money to the tax base."

Now the Cohasset stretch is a mix of residential, commercial and light industrial zoning.

Moore said most of the development problems on 3A can be traced to the years before zoning was implemented.

"Prior to zoning people just did what they wanted, like building a storefront with no parking," Moore said.

Moore said he hears a lot of complaints about the ugliness of 3A. He said people who complain about new development on Route 3A are forgetting how bad things used to be.

Moore points to redevelopment like Super Stop & Shop and Shaw's as examples of major improvements to Route 3A.

"There was a terrible disaster previously with the plaza that is now becoming Shaw's," Moore said. "That development had a totally failed septic system and the board of health couldn't keep up with receiver after receiver controlling the property in the real estate bust of the 1980s. That thing was heading for a boarded up center and we should be grateful that Shaw's is coming in."

Moore said some people equated the new Stop & Shop with cutting down a rain forest, but forget that it used to be a "decrepit" car dealership and auto body shop.

For years there was little new development on Route 3A, but things are picking up now.

Moore said people don't need to worry about new development on 3A because there are few unused commercial properties left.

"If you drive along 3A and look for undeveloped commercial parcels, you won't find much," Moore said. "The forested areas that you see now are wetlands, residential zones or people's back yards."

Moore said new development is also limited by a zoning restriction that allows only 60 percent lot coverage of any new development.

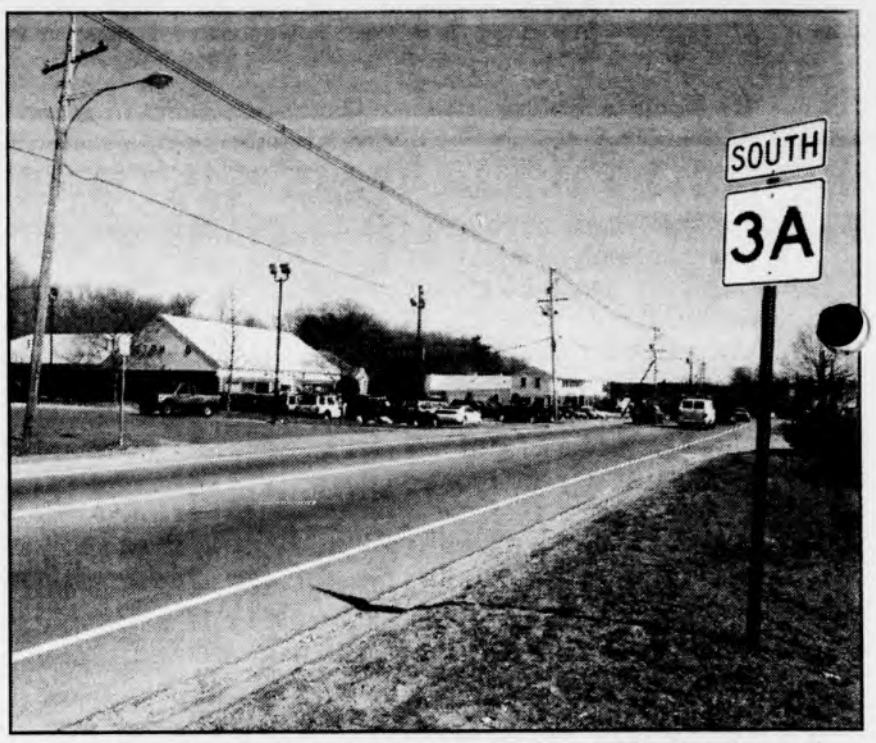
"What you will see in the future is more recycling of existing properties as retailers approach 30-40 years in business," Moore said. "After that amount of time you have gotten your return on your investment and it's time for something new."

Many residents are also upset about plans by the MBTA to build a new commuter rail station on Route 3A. Supporters of a Cohasset Village station say the 3A location will divert business from struggling Village businesses.

Moore said it is inevitable that the 3A station will divert business from the Village.

"All 3A development is just a reflection of where the money and the population density is locating," Moore said.

Moore said he thought people who opposed the Village Station were doing so for noble reasons.

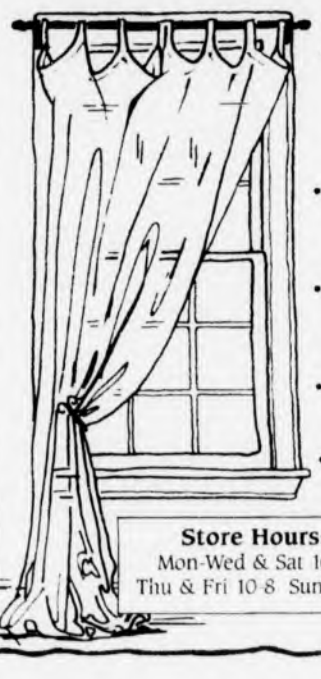


"But the train is still going to go through the downtown, it's just not going to stop," Moore said. "You end up with all of the bad and none of the good. If I lived there I'd rather have it stop than roar through. Zoning could have possibly offered some relief to Village residents."

Moore said another common complaint about 3A is traffic. But traffic is a regional problem that must be solved on a regional basis, he said.

Wadsworth said 3A still retains much of its charm as a scenic route to see some of the old New England South Shore.

But Moore laughed when he thought about how much 3A has changed over the years.



"Route 3A has long since passed the days when it could be considered a bucolic country road," he said.

ing wasn't held for 29 days. No one from CHL attended the hearing.

Moehrke said the conservation commission sent him a letter dated March 6 accepting the RFD application under the provisions of the town bylaw and the state Conservation Act.

Moehrke maintains that the hearing was illegal because it was held after 21 days. But conservation commission members say the RFD application was incomplete and therefore a 21-day hearing was not required.

"The conservation commission has taken the position that the filing is incomplete," said conservation commission member Tom Callahan.

Conservation commission members complained that Moehrke had not filed appropriate plans or notified abutters.

Moehrke countered that the hearing date was illegal from the beginning so it would have been "illogical" to notify abutters. He added that additional plans are only required if the property owner or someone performing work on the site submits the application.

In a letter to the Department of Environmental Protection, Moehrke said the town should be familiar enough with Cedar Street, which is town-owned, to waive the requirement for plans describing the site.

Callahan said the lawsuit in Superior Court may have no real value.

"I think the only thing Superior Court can tell us to do is hold the hearing and we've already done that," Callahan said. "Personally, I think it is a war of attrition. CHL is aware we have limited resources and they're trying to wear us down."

Moehrke has also asserted that the town has two standards for landfills: one for Cedar Street and one for CHL.

Conservation commission Chairman Vee Roebuck said it's impossible to compare the two sites because Cedar Street was built in the 1940's, long before wetlands laws existed.

In comparison, the landfill now controlled by CHL was constructed in 1976.

"There is sediment and siltation at Cedar Street, and things could be better," Roebuck said. "We've all been very conscious of what was going to happen there and what we want."

Callahan said the board of health, which controls the landfill, has worked diligently to correct problems at Cedar Street.

"Whenever we ask the board of health to do something, they do it," Callahan said. "Is it perfect? No. There's trash flying all over the place. But very shortly the town will have a capped landfill with a proper detention pond."

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said CHL's claims are difficult to corroborate because Cedar Street is so old.

"It's difficult to determine when these things occurred," Godzik said. "There is siltation there, but did it occur 30 years ago? No one knows."

Godzik said the large pond on the south side of the property was formed when the landfill was constructed at Cedar Street. Godzik said the landfill redirected storm water, forming the pond which eventually killed many trees.

"You have to realize that Cedar Street was built in a wetlands long before the Wetlands Protection Act," Godzik said.

Health board member Alix White said the health board plans to bring in heavy equipment to remove siltation as soon as the high spring waters recede. White added that the health board has been working diligently to cap the landfill.

White scoffed at CHL's use of the RFD process. She said RFD's are usually employed by civic-minded people seeking to protect the environment. White said CHL had no interest in the environment.

"The only way Paul Barry communicates with the town is through lawsuits," White said. "CHL doesn't want to perform a clean up at its own site so they pay lawyers. He (Barry) could have cleaned the trustees wetlands twice over with the money he's spent on lawsuits."

White said CHL is comparing 40-year-old problems at Cedar Street to current problems at CHL.

White added that Barry can afford to pay for lawyers because land filling is extremely profitable. CHL accepts construction and demolition debris.

"They're providing a service for things people don't want," White said.

John McNabb Jr. of Stop Any Further Expansion, an activist group opposing CHL's expansion plans, said the latest lawsuit was a "tremendous abuse of process."

McNabb said CHL's latest lawsuit is just another diversionary tactic, and an attempt to force the town to negotiate.

"They're trying to force the town to make a deal and we have to tell them we're not making any deals," McNabb said. "CHL's thinking may be that this is a town agency they're suing and the town landfill will cost the town a lot of money so maybe they can leverage a deal. Tell them McNabb says, 'No deal'," McNabb said.

McNabb said he was also a little nervous that the board of selectmen might try to make a deal with CHL.

McNabb pointed to the infamous "secret letter" incident in 1995, when former selectman Martha K. Gjesteby released a document marked "confidential" to the public. The document detailed a confidential negotiation between the town and CHL to settle a lawsuit to put an end to expensive legal fees.

Clamming

in Scituate Town Hall."

Cohasset clammers can't harvest clams in their hometown because the clam flats are closed there due to fecal coliform pollution, Dickson said. Flats at Little Harbor and Whale Meadow — located across the channel from Bassings Beach— closed after the blizzard of 1978.

"That storm really did a lot of damage. It shook everything up and broke a lot of sewage systems," he said.

Dickson said he doesn't expect the closed flats to reopen any time soon because of continuing high levels of bacteria in the area.

"I don't think we'll see any changes. It gets discouraging," he said.

In Scituate, Bassings Beach provides the only haven for clammers.

"It's the only place in town for clamming," said Scituate assistant shellfish warden Laurence Swain.

Scituate's clamming regulations, which are based on state regulations, allow clamming activity once a week — either on Thursday or Sunday, the only days the flats are open.

"The whole purpose behind the regulations is to conserve the resource," Swain said. "People had better not be taking more than they are entitled to."

Clammers can dig up to eight quarts of mollusks larger than two inches in size during a day at the flats.

"Infractions are extremely rare," said Swain, who patrols the flats. "That's not the way it was when they first opened."

Three years ago, four men from the out of town violated the clamming regulations by digging about 720 pounds of clams from the beach in one day.

During peak clamming season in the summer, about 30 to 40 diggers gather at the flats.

"There's nothing nicer than walking into what amounts to a wildlife refuge, with egrets, wild blue heron and occasional falcon," said Swain. "It's just magnificent. It's wide open and beautiful. It's a really nice experience and you get some clams."

It's Moving Time for Cushing Plaza Shops

Shaw's Supermarket to Open This Summer

By Melissa Boynton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As a powerful nor'easter ripped through the South Shore last Saturday, Shaw's new plaza at the former Cushing Plaza on Route 3A had it's own "movings and shakings." The first store opened its doors and the last tenant celebrated their successfully negotiated lease.

Betsy Detwiler of Buttonwood Books & Toys fusses with this and that as she describes the process that she went through to transform her agreed upon "plain vanilla box" into a softly lit retail space with a drop ceiling.

"I live in my store," says Detwiler, "so I knew I wouldn't want to live under cold fluorescent lights."

She also wanted to try and recreate the interesting "nooks and crannies" that she had in her first store. To this end, she hired a designer to come in and drop the ceiling in certain areas. She also chose to increase her move-in budget by going with purple paint on the walls and a easy-on-the feet green carpet.

She explains that Shaw's was very accommodating throughout the renovation process, even though the construction manager reiterated her request for "purple" with some skepticism! Referring to the fact that most of the stores will remain in the plaza, she states, "I think that Shaw's was very sensitive to the fact that the businesses here have been serving the town for quite some time.

"They could have closed any of us down in the first phase of the demolition, instead they relocated us in temporary spaces," she explains.

In addition to Buttonwood, plans are to move the Consignment Shop, Walgreens, the American Image Beauty Salon and Cohasset Harbor Travel into their new retail spaces in the weeks ahead. The 40,000-square foot supermarket will be the last piece of the puzzle and is slated to open this summer.

Justine and Victor Van der Lugt of Cohasset Harbor Travel describe their pleasure at being made part of the Plaza, even if it did come at the final hour. Their space which is located at the far end of the strip has a drive-through location, which reveals its originally scheduled tenant, BayBank. They laughingly brainstorm how they can utilize this unique feature.

"Hmm, maybe we can offer drive through travel itineraries," Victor said.

The couple, who are now entering their fifth year in business do anticipate that their walk-in traffic will increase given the proximity to the other stores. To capture that walk-in market they plan to extend their hours to accommodate customers.

They too have been planning their new space with enthusiasm.

Justine describes her plans.

"We are planning to have large scale maps on the walls so that people can know exactly where in the world they are going."

Both look forward to opening in their new location on Tuesday May 13.

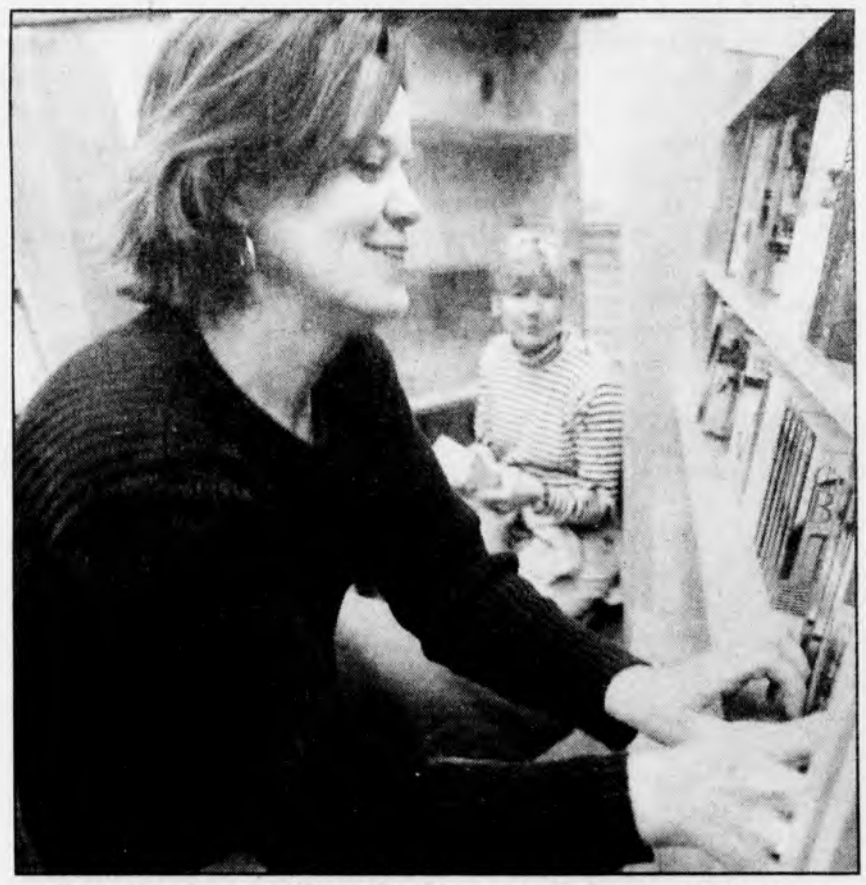
"The Cohasset Consignment Shop will open it's doors on Monday, April 28 if all goes well" says Andrea Merrill, who operates the consignment shop. She too is looking forward to having a nice, clean slate to work from.

"It will be nice not to have a leaky roof," she says pointing to the ceiling. According to Merrill, although the location pleases her a lot, she is bit concerned about the size. She explains that she will be losing space.

"The bright side is that I have been forced to be more creative in how I merchandise each area," she says.

The leaky roof problem is obviously building-wide in the old structures which will be demolished. Linda Johnson, co-owner of the New American Image Inc. is also singing the praises of a brand-new salon space, as she points to her water-stained ceiling. She too, has seized the opportunity to recreate her work environment.

"We have used a lot of glass block to provide additional light since we will be losing some windows. We're putting green ceramic tiles on the floor to give it a really classy look," she says with excitement.



They plan to open their new salon at the end of May depending on the timing of the new lighting, flooring, and cabinets.

Each shopkeeper expressed an interest in having a mini-grand opening for all of the local stores once they've settled in.

Buttonwood Books & Toys owner Betsy Detwiler wipes her brown during a hectic moving day last week at the former Cushing Plaza.

Considering a Medicare HMO?

If you're a Medicare beneficiary, you've probably thought about joining a Medicare HMO.

Medicare HMOs offer many benefits, but they may limit your choices.

Before you join a Medicare HMO, you'll want to ask the health plan questions like, "Will I still be able to see my regular doctor?," or "Where will I be hospitalized?"

Give us a call if you'd like more information on how to select an HMO. We'd be happy to talk with you about your Medicare options and to send you free information.

Public Comment Period Needs Restraints

Selectman Ronnie McMorris suggested the ten minutes or so put aside each week for public comment be limited to issues that can be handled briefly. More complex issues should be put on the selectmen's agenda for a future meeting, she said.

McMorris said the public comment period is more casual in nature and serious issues require more research and therefore should be on the agenda so selectmen are prepared to respond.

"It gives us time to prepare for an issue that comes before us," she said.

In a related matter, McMorris suggested selectmen hold "office hours" to address citizen's questions or concerns. She suggested a time when citizens can meet with a selectman and the town administrator to have their issues addressed.

But Town Administrator Ed McCann said while McMorris' point is well founded, limiting concerns to a certain time would be too restrictive.

"The door is always open," he said.

So selectmen agreed that many issues could be passed by the town administrator first and want the public to know that it is not always necessary to come before the entire board with a concern.

Good Citizenship Recognized by DAR

Once again the Massachusetts DAR sponsored the DAR Good Citizen Program, established to honor high school seniors who are outstanding in character and exhibit qualities of good citizenship.

The contest was open to members of the senior classes of high schools, public and private and provides for the selection of a student with the proper qualifications by classmates and faculty.

The faculty chooses three seniors who best exemplify outstanding qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism in their school, home and community. From these three, the senior class chooses the school's Good Citizen.

The Colonel Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the National Association of the DAR held a reception Sunday, April 13, in honor of the winners. The Cohasset elected winner was Jarod Batts, whose proud parents are Mark and Nichole Batts. The reception was held at the lightkeepers' house, and the awards were presented to Jared and the other four high schools (Hingham, Hull, Rockland and Weymouth). Members, winners and families attended, more than 50 people in all.

Special congratulations go to you, Jarod.

Steve Sinopoli gave us a call last week, he is trying to get his 20th reunion planned — the class of 1978, CHS. Why a year early you ask? Well, there were 157 students in the class! He has reached about 100 of them already, but he figures it will take a year to round everyone up and make plans. Steve would love it if you can give him a hand with either planning, contacting, providing an address, etc. Give him a call.

Another reunion in the works is the 40th anniversary of the CHS football team — that would include all players who graduated from 1958 through 1961. Clark Chatterton has plans underway, and a letter composed, so be watching the mail if you qualify!

Had a nice chat with Betty Brooke last week, she is so excited! She is a grandmother again, this time to a baby girl! Jessie Kearney was born April 5 to John and Jami Kearney. Jessie's older brother, Jack, is 3-1/2, and real excited too! As is Donna Cloney, Jessie's maternal grandmother. Spring is the best time to have a baby, enjoy that little girl and love her to pieces!

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, La Keisha Ruley of Weymouth, Jarod Batts of Cohasset, Megan Williams of Hingham, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Nancy O'Toole, regent of the Colonel Thomas Lothrop Old Colony Chapter of the National Assoc. of the DAR at the recent reception honoring good citizenship.

South Shore Hospital's 75th anniversary golf tournament is set for Monday, June 9, at Cohasset Golf Club. Braintree resident Donald Olson is this year's tournament chairman. Proceeds from the tournament will support the planned $3 million expansion of South Shore Hospital's cardiac center, enabling it to better serve the hospital's growing number of cardiac patients. Heart disease is the region's number one killer, and more than half of all cardiology patients in the region seek care at South Shore Hospital. A number of corporate sponsors are already in place, other corporate sponsorship opportunities are still available. Don't miss this chance to enjoy a fun day of golf while supporting a great cause. Call Jill McDonough at South Shore Health and Educational Foundation at (617) 340-8848 for more information or to register.

Happy birthday greetings to Tommy Coburn!

Speaking of birthdays, there is a big one in store for Leo Fiori next month! Can you believe that he will be 75? Yep, it is true! The big day is May 10, but we wanted to give you plenty of warning so that you will be sure to stop by and give him a big birthday hello! One of Cohasset's finest, that's for sure!

With spring having arrived (at least on the calendar), we all can see tons of yard work to be done! The Social Service League has compiled a list of CHS students who are all set to tackle any job you may have for them! Besides yard work, they will water plants, take care of your pets, babysit, drive, water your plants — the list goes on! The rates are great, so give them a call for names and phone numbers of students. Call the Job Bank at 383-0771.

Guess by now you have heard about the Junior Gardeners of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's latest venture. They are selling property on our own town's game board in Cohassetopoly — this is a fund-raiser, and you can help them make it a huge success while advertising your business at the same time — just imagine, every time the game comes out, someone will see your business or name, or whatever. For space on the board, call as soon as you can, 383-2254. All properties will be sold on a first-come, first-serve basis, and you will be part of the "First Edition."

That's the news for this week, give me a jingle with your latest adventure, or feat, or birth or whatever!

Cohasset Garden Club on Arbor Day

The Cohasset Garden Club will celebrate the 125th anniversary of Arbor Day — April 25 — by planting two Dogwood (Cornus kousa chinensis) trees at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The planting will take place at 10:30 a.m. that day.

One of the trees is donated by Genevieve Good in memory of her husband, Fred, who spent many enjoyable hours at the library. Polly Logan donated the other tree in memory of Mrs. John E. Teagan, Marilyn Keane's mother.

The tree planting is part of an ongoing project by the Cohasset Garden Club and Friends of the Library to landscape and replant the area in front of the library. The new plan will include more trees and low-maintenance ground cover.

The Cohasset Garden Club has been a member of the Garden Club of America since 1927 and a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc. since 1929.

Getting Involved

'The first requisite of a good citizen in this Republic of ours is that he shall be able and willing to pull his weight.'
— Theodore Roosevelt.

This is the final week for Question of the Week. While we know that the candidates are relieved not to have anymore "homework," we've really enjoyed their participation.

Not everyone liked all our questions. We had a few complaints from a candidate or two and some from members of the public. But we're in the news/information business, so we welcome comments both pro or con — your input helps us to be more relevant.

Along the campaign trail, we've met nearly all the candidates. We find them articulate, talented and courageous. It takes guts to throw your hat into the ring and get involved.

Cohasset is lucky to have citizens who think they can make a difference and are willing to try by running for elected office.

It's not easy to stand at a podium at a candidates' night and be put on the spot with a difficult question. And it's not always pleasant to hold signs and wave to fellow residents hour after hour at the dump or at busy intersections in all kinds of weather.

The sad fact is most of us would rather complain about government than get involved. We've become a nation of armchair critics who hide behind frustration with government status quo as an excuse not to try and change things.

The May 3 election will not only decide the how the north and central Cohasset sewer projects will be paid for but voters will choose a new selectman, two new school committee members and a new water commissioner.

While we'd like to encourage political activism in everyone — we accept the fact that the desire and energy to serve in elected office is something that has always attracted the few.

But "being able and willing to pull our weight as citizens" of this great country and town doesn't necessarily mean running for office.

Taking the time to cast an informed vote on May 3 is the responsibility of each and everyone of us. Democracy is rarely easy and it's not always convenient but it's the best system we have and it deserves our attention.

As a reminder, the Cohasset Mariner does not endorse candidates in local elections. We will publish a voting guide for candidates in contested races next week. As we stated in our policy printed at the beginning of the election season last month, we also do not accept letters to the editor on campaign issues for the Thursday edition before the election.

Don't Pick the Flowers

To the Editor:

The picture on the front page of your April 17 issue of a child picking flowers on the Common sends the wrong message. No one should pick flowers from any public space. The flowers are there for everyone's enjoyment, not just for the few who pick and remove. There is an all-too-common misconception that public space means public picking. Blooms are removed from shrubs in the Central Cemetery and holly branches cut from trees in Wheelwright Park.

Let's leave the flowers where they grow for the rest of us who pass to enjoy.

Town Manager Process Questioned

To the Editor:

I believe it is my responsibility as your elected representative to the board of selectmen to comment on the "process" by which a town manager form of government was recently adopted. The decision to concentrate administrative and financial authority in the hands of one individual, the town manager is a significant one for Cohasset to undertake. There are complex and serious changes involved and the unease and misunderstanding that continues to surface are a direct result of the failure of the town to undertake an appropriate study and review process. This decision was not studied, debated, or made by an informed government structure committee or an informed community. It was made by a handful of people — well intentioned though they may be operating in a vacuum, with no input from anyone other than the proponents of a citizens article.

Communities considering such an important change traditionally use a study and review process that includes the formation of an independent group, often a charter commission. This group looks at all options for professional management — town administrator or town manager — in a "weak" or "strong" form. It also looks at independently elected officials and boards (i.e. planning, health, water and recreation) and determines if any should be appointed. It approaches centralized, efficient management from all angles. Most importantly the process includes public meetings, public hearings and debate. All points of view are sought and heard. Finally, a town meeting vote and often public referendum follow.

I am distressed that none of this happened in Cohasset this year, and we are now moving forward with changes with which many citizens and elected and appointed town officials are uncomfortable. Cohasset may be overdue in making necessary changes in its administrative operations, and we are all paying for a lack of planning on the capital improvement side. But basically we are a well-run town and have been for years, particularly from a financial perspective.

I am personally worried about the hastiness with which this proposal was adopted and the lack of meaningful discussion. If after a full and thoughtful review of the issues and their ramifications the consensus was for a town manager, then we could all be confident that we are moving forward with an informed choice.

Wrestlers Appreciate Support

To the Editor:

From April 4 through April 6 we represented Massachusetts in the National High School Wrestling Tournament in Pittsburgh, Penn. This tournament was very important to us in competing against the best in the country. The trip to Pittsburgh could not have been possible without the support from numerous local businesses and businessmen. In particular, we would like to thank Mr. Jon Lacks, Mr. Bob Davenport, Mr. John Kinchla, Mr. Montgomery Burns, Robbins Garage, The Silver Spoon Cafe, Cohasset Plaza Cleaners, Fitness First, NorEaster, The Village Butcher Shop & Deli, French Memories, Cohasset Hardware, Little Harbor Antiques, The Cohasset Pizza House, Goodwin Graphics and Nothin' More Natural. Because they supported us, we ask that you support them. Your continued patronage of these businesses would be greatly appreciated.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

Selectman Candidates:

Some citizens are easily intimidated and are uneasy about voicing their concerns. Do you think selectmen encourage enough public input at their meetings? What would you do to make the board more accessible?

• School Committee Candidates:

SELECTMAN/Wigmore Pierson

Because so many citizens feel they have been mistreated by both elected and appointed board members in recent years, there is a natural reluctance to come forward and voice opinions for fear of being tarred and feathered and run out of town. Therefore, feelings of intimidation are understandable.

Four things need to change to encourage more public comment and to make the board more accessible.

First, selectmen should display a more open and welcoming attitude toward the citizens.

While it is possible that some board members may feel threatened by citizens, other selectmen seem to believe that they are the only true repositories of the truth and the light in the entire town of Cohasset. Many God save Cohasset from any more leaders with this attitude.

Second, more time must be allotted for the public comment period at weekly meetings, say 8 to 8:30 p.m.

Third, each person wishing to bring an issue or concern before the board should be allowed a strictly adhered to time limit before the issue is either adjudicated or scheduled for more in depth discussion at a subsequent meeting.

Fourth, a mechanism needs to be established to record and track concerns voiced by telephone to the board of selectmen at town hall and to respond promptly.

SELECTMAN/Alex Koines

At our Monday night selectmen's meetings, some individuals must certainly feel uncomfortable facing five selectmen while television cameras record every word. I do not think the selectmen discourage public input but I believe it will become easier and more effective when citizens can go directly to our new town manager's office with many of their questions and concerns. Consider also that, under the new system, the selectmen will be free of many of the details that currently bog down meetings. This will result in more efficient meetings centered around important subjects and encourage greater citizen participation.

I would suggest that the selectmen hold monthly, or even bimonthly, informal office hours during which citizens could meet with them. This would take the pressure off those citizens who do not want their point of view made public. I realize that the position of selectman is part-time and time is often hard to find but citizen input is fundamental to a representative's job and I feel this would be worth trying.

Finally, when I need to discuss something with our state representative, Mary Jeanette Murray, I do not drive to the statehouse, I call her on the telephone, sometimes at home. I have always been grateful to her for this privilege and do not abuse it. My phone number is in the Cohasset book. It's 383-9461 and you can use it.

SELECTMAN/Diane C. Sullivan

When we have a town manager up and running he or she will have the authority to deal with citizen concerns and resolve them quickly. If the citizen prefers, he should have every opportunity to come before the selectmen and have a full airing of his problem or concern. The resident can ask to be put on the agenda for the next selectmen's meeting and will be asked to give an estimate of the time his visit may take. He will be treated fairly and courteously.

The residents who seek selectmen agenda time may be the ones who are least likely to feel intimidated. No one should ever fell intimidated; the board of selectmen was voted by the people and is there to serve those people.

An area that I feel should be extended is the 10 minutes allocated for meeting attendees to bring up anything they wish for discussion. Ten minutes is too short a time and I would hope this could be expanded. This could help to make the board more accessible. Some of the items now appearing on the selectmen's agenda will be handled by the new town manager and thereby give the selectmen more time for policy decisions and listening to the citizens as requested. Selectmen should always be responsive to residents.

We have a great deal of citizen talent in this town and their input should be encouraged. Different perspectives, new ideas, and knowledgeable suggestions should be welcomed by the selectmen as they deliberate and act on the issues for the good of our town.

SELECTMAN/Tom Callahan

It does not seem to me that, of late, we've had an intimidated citizenry, but nevertheless all town officials should strive to do their best to be accessible to citizens at all times and to make government more understandable. Being "on call" comes with the job.

Televising all selectmen's meetings is a great idea. Indeed, I favor other boards' meetings being televised as well on a periodic basis, especially when dealing with major issues. The public comment period within each meeting is another positive. Both should be continued.

I favor having once-per-month office hours, similar to those federal and state officeholders periodically conduct. This would be during the day, say for an hour. The selectmen would rotate this duty (two times per year each) to accommodate their individual schedules. As an alternative or in addition, perhaps a small periodic "selectmen's corner" column in the Mariner could be done. Selectmen should give a detailed "state of the town" address at, or shortly before, annual town meeting, and as I stated last week, major articles should be aired at public hearings, regardless of who initiated them. I also favor selectmen appearing more frequently at the meetings of boards to which they are the liaison.

Finally, selectmen just need to be seen around town or available in person or by phone, and I think our current board does this sufficiently. I have never shied from discussing the commission's work with anyone who wants to know, and I would continue this practice as a selectman.

• School Committee Candidates:

After the divisive debate over the new school last year, do you think the school committee can play a role in healing old wounds and reaching out to those most polarized by the issue?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Hugh Morgan

I feel as though the school committee can play a large role in voter satisfaction regarding the building of a new and much needed school. This can be accomplished by the committee's dedication to place new programs into effect using its budget wisely and to work closely with the new school administration who are dedicated to optimum education for our children.

We must keep in mind at all times that educational costs may seem great but our children are our most important asset and our country's greatest future.

If elected I will strive toward educational excellence for our children.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Joe McElroy

The school committee must play the lead role. They have been long on rhetoric and short on planning and execution. Understanding one another is a two-way street. They need to realize that taxpayers are besieged on all sides by big-ticket capital items.

Shortly the public will become aware of compromises on quality, unfulfilled promises of a "turn-key" operation, and probable major cost-overruns. The best thing the school committee can do is be honest and restore quality to its design. the first step the school committee needs to take is come to an understanding with the Design Review Board. It must take a serious look at prudent cost-cutting measures recommended by the DRB.

The school committee is confronted with complex challenges because of its insistence on a "campus" for PK-3. It has left the Deer Hill and Jr/Sr High School buildings in serious disrepair. Teacher morale is low in these schools as they realize the cost of failing to compromise. Decimating the professional development budget by approving a $15,000 sailing junket for only three teachers doesn't help matters. These are public, not private schools.

As president of the Lightkeepers' Corporation, I led the most successful volunteer project in recent town history. Similar success as a military leader, businessman, and educator indicate that I am best qualified to redress chronic mismanagement. I have demonstrated competency found with no other candidate to bring various people together, build consensus and move forward. With your support I'll work for you to heal these old wounds.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Kathy Ofsthun

Both last week's question and this week's question for candidates relate to mistreatment and bad feelings. While I think it is important to address the issue, I am not one to dwell on negatives. I believe that most of the town has moved forward, and that we have the common goal of high quality education at a reasonable cost.

Defining reasonable cost is what causes divisiveness. This is not unique to the school committee. From water rates to transfer facility prices, there are differing opinions on what is reasonable. Unfortunately, a new school costs far more than most financial obligations and so the debate/divisiveness surrounding it was heightened.

I believe the school committee could help heal these wounds by reporting capital needs sooner and finding new ways of communicating, more frequently, with the townspeople. Several steps were taken this year already, e.g. writing a monthly column in the Mariner and televising meetings. I would add to this: periodic reporting on the status of spending versus the budget and broadly circulating the capital and maintenance plans. I think that more frequent communication, especially regarding finances, will help to heal old wounds, will reach out to those most polarized, and will better prepare the town for the next time a major capital expenditure is needed.

• Water Commission Candidates:

If elected, what will you do to prepare users for the water flushing program which will clean out the old pipes but may wreak havoc on household laundry and the like?

WATER COMMISSION/John McNabb

A flushing program is necessary to clean out accumulated sedimentation in water pipes throughout the water distribution system and to avoid the permanent build up of sediment that degrades the quality of water pipes and reduced their ability to carry water. However, flushing cannot be conducted until the existing storage tank is cleaned out, hopefully by next spring after the second standpipe is constructed, or the flushing program will merely flush the sludge from the existing tank into the distribution system.

Communication is the key to an effective flushing program. Since flushing the system will cause release of the accumulated sediment into the water, causing discoloration, it is imperative that all residents are informed prior to the flushing in the area so they can avoid washing or using the water. Flushing, where feasible, should take place only late at night.

I would suggest that the Water Department prepare their customers for the flushing with a mailing that describes the entire flushing schedule and with press releases in the local newspapers. These efforts should be followed up by reminders at the weekly selectmen's meetings, and then signs which should be put up on a street a few days before the flushing is done on that street. If there are any problems with the initial flushing that indicates that residents have not gotten the message, then any future flushing should not take place until the affected residents are notified by phone or by a door-to-door leafleting by the water department.

Meet Susan Turgiss

Meet Susan Turgiss, candidate for school committee, at the Council on Aging Candidates Luncheon at noon on April 29, 3 North Main Street; at the Chamber of Commerce Candidates Night at 7 p.m. April 29, to be held at the Second Congregational Church; and at the home of Weezie Welz, 12 Windsor Rd., Thursday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m. (RSVP to Weezie Welz, 383-9192 or Marie Kelly at 383-1924).

Coffees for McElroy

Joe McElroy, candidate for the Cohasset School Committee, will be present at a series of coffees to answer questions, listen to concerns and accept suggestions:

Sunday, April 27, 2 to 4 p.m. at Merle and Joan Brown's, 546 Beechwood Street. Coordinator is Pat Buckley, 383-0304.

Interested citizens are requested to call listed coordinators if they would like to meet the candidate.

Chamber Candidates Night

Meet the candidates running for local office Tuesday, April 29, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Hear each candidate debate the issues which effect your business and community. Take advantage of this opportunity to ask the questions which impact you and your business.

The following candidates will debate:

Selectmen — Thomas J. Callahan, chamber member; Alexander C. Koines, Wigmore A. Pierson, chamber member; Diane C. Sullivan.

School Committee — Joseph R. McElroy, Hugh Joseph Morgan, Kathleen A. Ofsthun, Susan M. Turgiss.

Water Commissioner — John K. McNabb Jr., John C. Pereira.

Many of us have our businesses in Cohasset, yet we may call our home the community in which we live with our families. Many of us agree that we tend to spend much of our time in our "work" home, Cohasset. Cohasset, then is really our home away from home where our livelihoods are based. Therefore, the decisions of Cohasset elected officials not only impact the residents but they also impact us, the business community. Whether the question is on the tax classification rate; a zoning bylaw; water and sewer restrictions; sign bylaw, parking meters, or even the location of a commuter rail station, all such questions impact the business community and our livelihoods.

Your voice is important and needs to be heard concerning local business issues which are managed and influenced by local elected office holders. Join us on candidates night to question the candidates on your second home, where our livelihood lives.

Attendance at Train Meeting Urged

To the Editor:

Most recently, the Selectmen of Halifax, after requesting a four-quadrant gate (a mechanisms to increase public safety) be constructed at one of the town's crossings in an attempt to abate a whistle, received a letter from Robert R. Egan, project manager of Old Colony Railroad, which stated, "Though recent legislation did suggest the use of four-quadrant gates on the Old Colony lines, the MBTA is also bound to federal guidelines set by the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) and the Federal Transit Authority (FTA). Since the use of four-quadrant gates is largely experimental and has not been approved by either ... we will not be using this type of warning system on the Old Colony lines."

Here in Greenbush, we know this couldn't be true. Hadn't the MBTA proposed four-quadrant gates and a whistle-ban at Greenbush grade crossings? Why would Sverdrup, the MBTA's engineering consultants, in reference to Halifax suggest, four-quadrant gates pose a safety risk because they prevent cars from escaping if caught on the tracks? And why does the MBTA advocate the use of four-quadrant gates in Greenbush if they're a threat to public safety?

The truth is ... the FRA and FTA neither approve nor disapprove of four-quadrant gates. What they do disapprove of are whistlebans, and they don't even regulate them — yet. It is our towns which request whistlebans, and our state DPU which approves them and they deny having approved one — yet. Even the MBTA never liked whistlebans ... 'til Greenbush reared its 43 grade crossings, requiring a horn to sound continuously for 15+ miles. But what is most bewildering, our own state legislature requires the use of four-quadrant gates to be used at all grade crossings on all three lines of the Old Colony, Acts of '96 Law #151 sec. 643.

So what does all this mean, besides implicating the MBTA in another "mis-statement?" Does it mean Halifax can have its four-quadrant gate and whistle ban too? Or does it mean the MBTA can't stop the horn in Greenbush and avoid its impact; uninhabitable homes, dissolution of life-time investments? Do we want to become national statistics? Six hundred-plus deaths and 1,800+ accidents each year at grade-crossings (FRA). And where will the liability of fatality lay; with the communities forced to accept the train, or the state which conceived the banshee, restored the grade-crossings and proposed the morbid whistle-ban? For certain ... no one knows, the state legislator hasn't decided — yet. Two things are certain: without four-quadrant gates at crossings your chance of death increases, and if your community has a ban they triple.

Might I make a few suggestions: if the state is so intent upon restoring these crossings, proposing these bans; let them assume the increase in fatality, before another train crosses one Old Colony street; let's be given our rights to four-quadrant gates, and before one more "mis-statement" crosses the autocrats' lips, let's all (Plymouth, Middleborough and Greenbush) meet them at the public forum — Braintree Town Hall, 7:30 p.m., Thursday, April 24, and demand our Right to Know (Act).

Cohasset Food Pantry Serves Increasing Numbers
Post Office Collection is May 10

Approaching its fourth anniversary, the Cohasset Food Pantry finds the need still strong for food assistance to town residents, with an increase of 7 percent in families and individuals served during 1996.

Marjorie Steele, chairman of the Pantry's Steering Committee since its founding in 1993, reported that the Pantry made 467 distributions of food to family units averaging more than three individuals, during 1996, as compared with 438 in the previous year.

"There is clearly a continuing need for food assistance to some local families, and we are happy to be able to provide it through the generosity of individuals, institutions and businesses in town," Steele said.

The Pantry operates out of the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue next to the town hall, and is open Tuesdays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m. Any Cohasset resident who meets limited income guidelines or who has special need is eligible to receive food at two-week intervals.

"The town has really opened its heart to those in need", Mrs. Steele said. "This service would not be possible without the generous contribution of food and funds by many individuals, groups and businesses, as well as the work of volunteers to stock and staff the pantry."

She singled out for special thanks the town's churches and schools which organize food collections; Stop & Shop, which supported the Pantry through a "Food For Friends" program; Jack Conway Co., Realtors; and Cohasset Imports Auto Dealers. A major contribution has come through the food collection by employees of the Cohasset Post Office which brought in hundreds of pounds of food picked up by route mail deliverers. This year's Post Office collection is scheduled for May 10 .

In addition to the donations through food drives, the Pantry uses contributed funds to purchase food at the Boston Food Bank at minimal cost and at local and area supermarkets.

Over and above the regular bi-weekly distribution of food the Pantry distributes special holiday food packages, featuring turkeys at Thanksgiving, hams at Christmas and Easter, and also organizes Christmas gifts to children and adults in the client families.

"We have been more fortunate than some pantries in keeping our shelves stocked, but right now we could use more volunteers, particularly for the Tuesday evenings when the Pantry is open," Steele says. "Those interested should call Bob Thompson at 383-1448."

The Cohasset Food Pantry was organized under the sponsorship of six town churches and the Social Service League in Cohasset. Sponsoring churches are the Second Congregational, St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, Beechwood Congregational, First Parish Unitarian and the Greek Orthodox. The Pantry opened in May of 1993. Members of the Steering Committee, in addition to Mrs. Steele, are Gerry Ainslie, June Simeone, Harry and Joan Trask, Bette Nelson, Wallace St. John, Osborne Ingram, Ann Mitchell, Carol Sandblom, Annette Sawchuk and Robert Thompson.

Mammography Screening is May 1

Mammography screening is Thursday, May 1. The Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring the Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc. (MDSI) mobile mammography service. Appointments are necessary and can be scheduled by calling the Cohasset Social Service League ate (617) 383-0771. The mammograms are performed by fully licensed female mammography technologists in a comfortable, private mobile coach. The films are read by board certified radiologists and results are provided to each woman as well as the physician of her choice.

When used in conjunction with the following total breast health plan, mammography is the most reliable method for early detection of breast cancer.

Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc., ACR Accredited, FDA Certified and Massachusetts Licensed mobile mammography service, is a not-for-profit corporation with a history of serving women in Massachusetts for more then nine years. Mammography is their only business. Because cost and accessibility are cited as major factors discouraging women from having mammography, MDSI provides low-cost mammography on a mobile unit, bringing this life-saving 30-minute examination to women at worksites, health centers and community locations.

Insurance can often cover the cost of a mammogram, and MDSI can bill your insurance company directly, or you may pay on the day of the exam and obtain a receipt for insurance reimbursement. Medicare covers their portion of a mammogram examination every two years. Deductible and co-pay may apply, so you should call Medicare at (800) 882-1228 to check your individual status.

Last Touches Being Put on Athletic Field

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

It's "last call" if you want to buy a commemorative brick for the soon-to-be-built sidewalk leading to Alumni Field.

The bricks, which run from $75 to $200 in cost, can be inscribed with your family name, business, or year of graduation, and will make up the T-shaped sidewalk section leading from the parking lot to the bleachers.

Since the bricks went on sale before Christmas, well over $10,000 has already been raised. The money will be used to help defray the cost of the new press box at Alumni Field and other costs associated with maintaining the field.

Gary Vanderweil, the chairman of the track and study committee, said sales of the bricks have dropped off during the spring months, but he is hoping for a late push in sales until May 15 deadline. Work on the sidewalk is expected to begin in June.

"There has been a real good response," Vanderweil said, "but it has tailed off a little this spring."

Meanwhile, work on the three-story, state-of-the-art press box has been moving smoothly as 80 percent of the siding was completed on Sunday after five weekends of work by Bob Gledhill and a dozen fathers of Cohasset High athletes.

The press box is enclosed on both the second and third floors. The bottom is used to store football equipment and the second floor is for the press covering games. The third floor is used by football coaches to get a good view of the field and talk to coaches on the ground by microphone.

Cohasset High Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said the cheapest bid for a two-story structure was $20,000. The three-story press box, done mostly by volunteers, should come in at less than $10,000.

"It was really like building a house," Chatterton said.

COHASSET MARINER

Tiger Woods' historic victory in the Masters' golf tournament have already filtered down to the high school level. And Cohasset High Athletic Director and golf coach, Clark Chatterton, couldn't be happier.

His 16-member team has been buzzing with excitement after the 21-year-old Woods became the youngest Masters winner and first Afro-American golfer in history to come away from the prestigious event victorious.

"I've talked to every coach in the (South Shore) league," said Chatterton, "and they're getting a lot of young kids."

Chatterton himself recently received two calls from parents, acquiring if their kids could join the high school golf team. Chatterton said he had to turn them down because they are currently members of other spring teams. It is against MIAA rules for an athlete to compete on two different teams in the same sports season.

Chatterton is pleased with the turn out for this spring's team and expects the team to be competitive with the rest of the SSL this spring. The Skippers lost their lone match of season to Scituate, 9-0. Chatterton, however, was not disappointed by the loss because the Sailors are favored to win the SSL title with little problem. The town currently has two golf courses with another in the works.

The team did miss some practice time after the April 1 blizzard because the soaking fields forced the temporary closing of the Cohasset Country Club. The squad, however, was allowed to practice at North Hill Country Club in Duxbury while the Cohasset course was closed.

Chatterton is looking to Jordan Fiore, Andy Hamilton, Doug Sheerin, Will Prendergast, Will Moody, Ted Gledhill and Brendan Byrne to be the main golfers on this year's team and score the majority of points.

EXTRA POINTS/Joe Reardon

Giving '110 Percent' And Other Quotable Madness

Sports, from archery to swimming, can be dissected with a comb to pull out the most obscure statistics and facts. Fans scour the scoreboard section of the paper every day to see how many hits Griffey Jr. had the previous evening or the number of points Jordan poured in for the Bulls. These are the "normal" statistics, the kind everyone can relate to.

Certain numbers stand out in sports fans' minds that are considered sacred, along with the names who made them so. Who doesn't know the significance of the number 755 when it's associated with Henry Aaron, Roger Maris and 61, Wilt Chamberlain and 100, or Ted Williams and .406?

High school coaches keep their teams' statistics in "the book," or as some coaches would have you believe, "the good book."

Call a coach for results and he or she will tell you, "Just a minute while I get my book." These are the coaches who are just a mere shell of themselves when "the book" isn't within an arm's length away. Every significant game and statistic can be found between the pages.

Then there are the coaches who have a photographic memory when it comes to statistics. Name a player and they'll tell you what year he or she was on the team, his career high in points and rebounds, and possibly the players' shoe size.

It's fascinating. These coaches don't need "the book." They're statistical geniuses.

But experience has shown that there is no correlation between a coach living or dying by the "the book" and how quotable he is. A coach can know every statistic of every player he has ever coached by heart, but the book he swears by when it comes to talking to sports reporters is "The Complete Book of Cliches."

And high school coaches will never give you a quote that could possibly be interpreted as being controversial. Bill Parcells these guys and gals ain't. On the same note, they're all smarter than baseball hall of famer and noted "orator" Yogi Berra. Coaches fall somewhere in the middle, right on Boring Street.

They give you a sterile quote, but you know what they'd really want to say if they didn't think they'd get lambasted for it by the sports community. And there are also quotes that blanket the truth.

• "He goes out every day and gives 110 percent": Here's a test. Run as fast as you can for as long as you can. When you get to the point where you are about to pass out from oxygen debt, run five more miles. That, my ambitious friends, is 110 percent.

• "This looks to be a rebuilding year": Good God, we're awful! Sure we lost a few seniors who graduated, but haven't the juniors or sophomores ever seen a fly ball before.

• "He's a very versatile athlete": Oh, you mean you can stick him in the hurdles, two mile, 400 meters and relay without his questioning your sanity as a track coach and member of the human race because he fears for his life.

• "Once the tournament starts, the regular season record goes out the window": Hey, it's a small miracle we made it this far in the first place. So, let's forget the fact we lost the final six games of the season to sneak in. We're as much of an 0-0 team as the top seed is.

• "We didn't want it bad enough": The other team scored more points in the alloted time to play than we did. Either that or they gave "110 percent."

• "They're a great bunch of kids and I'll miss them a lot": Hey, we finished 16-4. I'll miss that record a lot.

• "We have to execute the fundamentals if we expect to win": Our infield can't field ground balls, the outfield can't catch fly balls, we don't hit our cutoff men and nobody on the team can bunt. Any more questions why we're off to an 0-6 start?

Cohasset Sailing Club News

Recently the Cohasset Sailing Club held its annual board meeting at the Lightkeepers Cottage. Officers were elected as follows: Chuck Peterson, commodore; Kevin O'Connor, vice commodore; Anne Musto, secretary; and Peter Pescatore, treasurer.

Items on the agenda for discussion and action were a new sign for the club; a possible rescheduling of the "Stanton Series," and the annual lobsterfest (Aug. 9) with an addition of a club regatta that same day. Also on the agenda was a look at the need for an increase in membership fees due to an increase in costs of operation expenses. A small increase was voted on.

Last week volunteers met to prepare the 1997 flyer to be mailed to the community shortly. Look for this to arrive soon in your mail.

The sailing club will open the season with the second annual "Kick-off of the Season Social" June 28. Watch for details to follow.

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617)

Little League Dance

The annual Little League dance and fund raiser will be held on May 17 at Kimball's by the Sea from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. There will be hor d'oeuvres and a silent auction. Music will be provided by "The Greatful Dads." Tickets are $25. For tickets or donations to the auction, contact Kevin Lewis at 383-2076.

Little League Parade, May 3

The Cohasset Little League will hold its annual opening day parade Saturday, May 3. The parade starts at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., Cohasset, at 8:15 a.m. and progresses up Main Street to Barnes Field.

The Deer Hill School Band will lead the parade, followed by an excess of 300 players, a fire truck with last year's champions and our special guest, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. We expect more than 1,000 town residents to participate in the parade and ceremony.

Over-40 Softball Players

Softball players age 40 and over are wanted to form a league to play at the Lower Center School (E.B. Hall) Field, off of Route 139 in Hanover Center. Games will held every Sunday from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. There is no upper-age limit.

EXTRA POINTS

• "From here all in, it's just icing on the cake": If you actually expect us to win a game in the tournament you need your head examined.

• "On paper we're a better team, but you still have to play the game": I don't know how, but this underachieving crew will find some imaginative way to blow the game.

• "It's too early to say which teams are in the running": Did any left-handed pitchers with a lot of off-speed stuff transfer from private school?

And finally..."These kids go out and practice hard every day and don't get a lot of recognition."

This is the most common complaint ever uttered to a sports reporter. There's no real answer you can give that will satisfy the parent. I just tell them to give me a call when the kid is giving "110 percent." So far, there haven't been any return calls.

COUNCIL CORNER/Pat Baird

Details of Two Months Worth of Meetings

The Junior/Senior High School Council met Feb. 12. The Cohasset Police Department delivered a presentation to the student council. The meeting was received positively and it is hoped that there may be more police involvement in the school to help improve relations and communications.

High school student handbooks are currently being reviewed in preparation for the '97/'98 school year. A middle school handbook will be completed for seventh- and eighth-grade students by the fall of next year. In addition, the Program of Studies for the middle school is complete and ready for distribution. Work continues on the high school program as the new block scheduling requires many changes. Mr. Collins and Mr. DeLorenzo have begun meetings with each class to explain the new schedule.

Mr. Cisneros reported that the basic set-up and schedule for the middle school has been completed. There is a plan to have the faculty, students and parents meet before the start of next years' classes.

There will be a Division 4 in the South Shore League as of Sept. '98. This will greatly benefit our athletic program. There has also been great success in finding suitable middle school teams for next year.

The state has adopted a new testing schedule for students.

The Junior/Senior High School Council met March 12. The new program of studies for the high school has been distributed and students have begun meetings with their guidance councilors to set up schedules for next year. Parents are invited to a meeting April 16 to hear about Block Scheduling and Time and Learning.

Meetings are also being planned to facilitate the transition of sixth-grader to the middle school. Dates will be announced soon.

The committee is currently reviewing the student handbook to update it for the coming year.

DEER HILL

The Deer Hill School Council met Feb. 11. Discussions included the school calendar for '97/'98, staffing and room assignments taking into account the class configurations and the need to accommodate three kindergarten classrooms.

Coffees will be held to discuss homework and to meet the current third-grade class parents.

The subject of keyboarding instruction highlighted the council's desire to fully support the Deer Hill community statement that the computer lab is an essential part of the curriculum.

OSGOOD

The Osgood School Council: A coffee with the principal was held Feb. 11. About 30 parents attended the morning session to discuss the topic of homework. Marilee Cantelmo, principal, and teachers Kristin Wrye and Jill Gomez, explained the Osgood School homework policy and gave parents a copy of the policy to take with them, as well as a handout with "tips" for parents, guardians and caregivers. Ruth Fennessy, curriculum coordinator for the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, was also present and explained the statewide reading test which will be administered to third-grade students this spring. Discussions included parental involvement with homework, when and where a child should do homework, and dealing with a child's frustration with a particular assignment. Parents should communicate with teachers if a particular assignment seems very difficult or too easy. If you would like information or the handouts, call the Osgood office at 383-6117.

The Osgood School Council met Feb. 27. The members discussed the school committee's support and recommendation for reinstituting a paraprofessional to provide support to at-risk children and the addition of a half-time health aide to the 1998 budget.

There will be six council-sponsored parent coffees coming up in the spring. Four coffees will be held for parents of incoming students in grades K to three. The topics will focus on grade level appropriated curriculum, social and emotional development, the placement process, and Move Up Day. The next two coffees will focus on language development and fine motor skills.

The STP/Respect school-wide project began March 10.

The report card revision committee has been meeting to revise the current report card to focus on the Mass. Education Standards.

Council meetings are open to the public and everyone is invited to attend.

Editor's Note: Pat Baird submitted two column which have been combined here. The columns haven't appeared in a timely fashion due to space constraints with the Question of the Week.

DRUG FACT

"LSD is really everywhere," said Michael Cunniff of the US Drug Enforcement Administration's Boston office. The typical progression is for young people to start with alcohol, add marijuana, then turn to LSD in their quest for a trip that lasts longer and takes them further, even if it is harder to get off. A 16-year-old Barnstable senior, Jeremy Lang, was found drowned in a drainage ditch last year after taking LSD. What put an end to the first wave of LSD use (at the end of the '60s) was the casualties. Everybody knew somebody who had a very, very, very bad trip.

" It (LSD) is not a drug you really would want to play with. All it does is lie to you, it makes you feel you can do anything, but you really can't," says a 15-year-old resident of Pegasus House, a residential drug treatment center in Lawrence.

It's amazing how kids respond to martial arts training, how it affects their self discipline, their self esteem...and it's a lot of fun. At Yuan Yen Do Karate Centers we specialize in children's programs, providing a safe, encouraging environment in some of the country's leading facilities. Your kids will love it, they'll learn valuable skills...they may even clean up their room.

Yearbooks are as Popular as Ever at Cohasset High

1996-97 Edition Sells for $45

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

For decades, seniors have signed each other's yearbooks as a way to remember best friends and acquaintances in years to come. And Cohasset's 1997 graduating class is no exception.

"There are so many memories in high school," said Courtney Goff, a member of the yearbook staff. "When we put together the yearbook, we also included events which occurred from the seventh grade on."

The 1997 Cohasset High School yearbook, which should be ready by graduation time, was put together by a staff of 20 students, under the direction of Florence Ely, a special needs teacher at Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, and English instructor Fran Cronin.

Plans for the next year's yearbook begin in June, when the staff is formed. They meet twice during the summer and work all year long, taking a one-month "breather" in March.

The staff meets once a week, with "kids coming in as they can fit it in among their other activities," Ely said.

At the beginning of the school year, an announcement is made in home rooms encouraging students to join the yearbook staff.

Most positions are filled by seniors, but an occasional junior helps out. One year a seventh-grader assisted with the yearbook.

"He did everything, including licking envelopes," Ely remarked. "He moved at the end of the 10th grade, but he stayed with the staff for four years. He knew all the ins and outs."

Goff said some students finish their jobs earlier, "but a lot of us hang around to help out with the odds and ends."

The yearbook will contain 112 black-and-white pages, including a supplement which will come out next spring. The special section includes events that occurred after the yearbook deadline, such as the senior prom, debate competitions and the Special Olympics.

The staff works into July putting the supplement together.

"By that time, we've already started planning for next year's yearbook," Ely stated. "It's a year-round project that never ends."

Using color in yearbooks is double the cost of black and white and calls for earlier deadlines.

Goff enjoyed doing the write-ups for the senior photographs, which include students' likes, dislikes, favorite place to hang out and parting thoughts.

To add to the fun, baby pictures of the graduating class appear under the senior pictures.

"Students even mention their worst horror show — the worst experience they've had in their lives!" Goff said.

Ely said students are encouraged to have their senior photographs taken by the school photographer, because the company also sends photographers to cover sporting and other events for the yearbook and takes the underclassmen photos.

"But it's up to the students. They can go to any photographer they choose," she remarked. "Some students follow family tradition by using the same portrait photographer other family members have used."

The yearbook includes photographs of underclassmen as well as the all-school musical presentation of "Mikado." It also contains a page featuring the South Shore Collaborative program and photographs of the school's 24 clubs, Spirit Week activities and Homecoming.

There's also a community service page and photographs of school dances and Appalachia Service Project activities.

"We have some great ideas when we're putting together the yearbook," Ely said. "Creativity's a tough issue with deadlines looming, but we do the best we can. It's a traditional yearbook."

The yearbook staff looks through past class books for inspiration.

A special four-page color "magazine" is included at the end of the yearbook, which features current events rather than school activities.

The work for the yearbook is all done on computer, including the layout and preparing the copy.

"We send our publisher, Taylor Publishing in Dallas, the computer discs, along with an envelope of photographs for every page," Ely explained.

Meeting the three "big" and five smaller deadlines is challenging for the staff.

The yearbooks will sell for $45, the highest price ever charged for a yearbook at the high school. The cost of putting a yearbook together is usually in the range of $10,000 to $11,000, but this year, costs amounted to less than $10,000.

"Everything costs more to do these days, which results in fewer sales," Ely remarked. "We have a very small graduating class of 67 students, and money is always an issue in a small town. And we just don't have the time for fund raising." The most yearbooks that the school has ever sold is 150.

Ely said there is a small core of businesses in town which help support the yearbook, and parents of students sometimes take out business advertisements. Family members also submit congratulatory messages, which account for about half of the advertising revenue.

"We're grateful for a small group of loyal advertisers, and occasionally new folks will join in with their support now and then," Ely remarked. "We don't have any malls in town or a Route 53."

The yearbook will contain 112 black-and-white pages, including a supplement which will come out next spring. The special section includes events that occurred after the yearbook deadline, such as the senior prom, debate competitions and the Special Olympics.

Funds for the yearbook also come from the senior class treasury, including seed money to get the project going in the fall.

"If any money is left after yearbook production, we turn it back to the senior class," Ely stated, "but we usually just about break even."

Ely reserves a few extra yearbooks for seniors who don't order them "in case they change their minds or their parents are disappointed that they didn't buy one."

"I make them buy them," she quipped.

A lot of effort goes into putting the yearbook together.

"The students do a great job," stated Ely.

According to a spokesman for the nation's largest yearbook publisher, Jostens Inc., yearbook sales on some large college campuses, where students have less of a sense of belonging, have been on the decline.

But sales at many smaller colleges, and at high schools, which account for most of the company's yearbook business, remain strong.

Some colleges are changing their yearbook format to video, magazine and even CD-ROM.

Of the 18,000 yearbooks Jostens publishes, 1,000 of them are for colleges and universities and the rest are for high schools.

On Senior Class Night in Cohasset, which is traditionally held the Thursday night before graduation, a video, set to appropriate music, is shown to parents and students.

"The kids put the video together from still photographs, with one fading into another," Ely explained. "Then it's broadcast on cable TV and made available for parents to purchase. The video usually makes every parent cry."

Goff said not everyone wants to help out with putting the yearbook together, "but everybody likes looking at it when it first comes out."

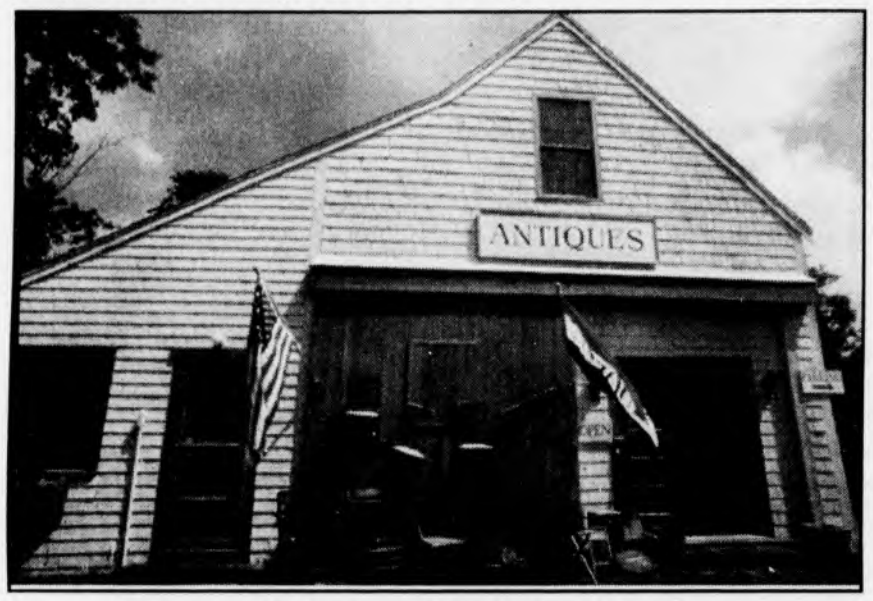
Rediscover New England's prized treasure

Cape Cod offers classic family fun



By Linda Saulnier

Cape Cod transcends the generations and the seasons. Whether you are 16 or 60, you will have much to choose from so set aside time and map a plan. As the song promises, you are sure to fall in love with ole' Cape Cod.

Spectacular beaches are the main draw and they present a valid argument for viewing Cape Cod from a horizontal position. But combine beaching with biking, boating or lighthouse tours and you have the makings of a superb vacation. Christmas shops, factory outlets, specialty boutiques and artisan's wares will inspire you to shop until you drop, on the beach that is.

You can take the kids to the Barnstable Fair, or spend solo quality time walking for miles on Sandy Neck's barrier beach admiring the dunes. Fishing off Monomoy Island in Chatham, breaking the waves at Nauset beach and golfing at a championship course in Dennis are worthy of your agenda.

Biking the Cape Cod Canal is an ideal day trip activity if you do not have a weekend to spare. Or bring your roller blades. Be warned that you will want to extend your stay.

Antique collectors have their choice of fine shops dotted throughout the Cape.

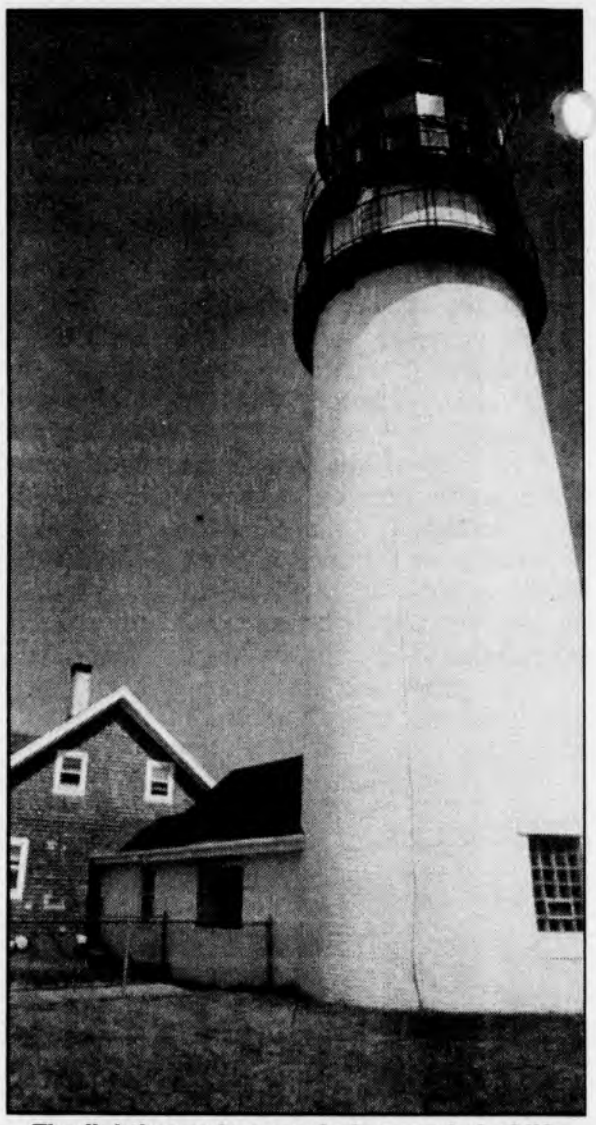
On the Cape side the six and a half mile path begins at the railroad bridge in Bourne and ends in Sandwich, or vice versa if you arrive by the Sagamore bridge. If you are an early riser bring your morning coffee to the canal, take a stroll and watch the ships come in. Later, you can get a bite to eat at one of Sandwich's quaint restaurants or a waterfront cafe in Falmouth. Locals favor the Chart Room on the Marina in Cataumet.



If you bike the road from Woods Hole to Falmouth you will have an ocean view. There is a bike path for part of the trip. Stop to relax and swim at the beaches along the way, or visit Nobska Point Light. Established in 1828 it overlooks Falmouth and Woods Hole harbors. If time is on your side you can board the ferry to Martha's Vineyard where your view will be East Chop Light off the port side and West Chop Light starboard.

For a bird's eye view of the coastline you should drive to Marston Mills airport and take a glider ride at Cape Cod Soaring. Owner Randy Charlton is your guide and pilot. Gliding is the Cape's best kept secret, according to his wife, Kyne Charlton.

"It is the safest way to fly," she says, "because you don't rely on an engine. The glider is a sailplane with long wings that is towed up in the air behind another airplane or auto."

Catch a warm rising air current, defy gravity in the process, and soon there is nothing between you and the fantastic scenery below but a glass shield and your camera. The pilot sits in the rear and you in the front. Charlton says a highlight of the trip is the airport itself, which is one of the oldest in the country and steeped in nostalgia and history.

Nearby, Hyannis offers a variety of nostalgic attractions from the Cape Cod Railroad to a Catboat. Here, your captain is lifelong Cape native, Marcus Sherman, whose 90-minute sailboat excursions on the Catboat Eventide depart from the Ocean Street docks. Reservations are recommended but Sherman will not turn people away if he has space.

The lighthouse is an enduring symbol of life on the Cape.

Catboats originated in the mid 1800s. Used for shellfishing and lobstering in the old days, it is a wide boat that gives a stable, easy ride. Birdwatchers, grandparents and children will enjoy a morning sail to Pine Cove Wild Life Sanctuary where Sherman gets close enough to shore for an up close and personal view of its denizens. A breezier excursion sails at 4 p.m. out the channel to Nantucket Sound. There is a cocktail sail and starlight cruise on Lewis Bay. The captain's choice for dinner is the Black Cat restaurant in Hyannis. No relation to his company.

We can thank the glaciers for retreating from Cape Cod 12,000 years ago and leaving behind 500 freshwater and saltwater ponds. Slip a canoe into Mashpee-Wakeby Pond then hike the Lowell Holly Reservation. Mute Swans and Blue Heron are said to frequent Chase Garden Creek in Yarmouthport.

Tourist brochures will tell you that Falmouth is the windsurfing mecca of Cape Cod. That may be, but John Miller, owner of Monomoy Sail and Cycle makes a convincing case for Chatham.

"A lot of people sail boards out of Falmouth because they don't want to go much farther than the bridge," says Miller. "Being at the elbow of the Cape we can sail Pleasant Bay if the wind is out of the north or east and Nantucket Sound if it comes from the south."

Board rentals start at $35 a day with high performance equipment costing more. Lessons are additional and Miller offers referrals. It is best to make reservations and you will need to show identification.

Antiquing on Cape Cod is an adventure. Every village harbors New England treasurers and more. Seek them out in Brewster, "America's Sea Captains' Town". While there, you will want to visit The Cape Cod Museum of Natural History. Leave time to explore the museum's 82 acres. Then, stop for an espresso at the charming cafe tucked in the lower level at Ocean Edge conference center. This stately building, the former Nickerson estate, will put you in an elegant mood.

Nightclubs dot the entire Cape. Music runs the gamut from local talent to famous performers. Playhouses feature popular favorites and avant-garde productions as well.

Accommodations on the Cape range from a Victorian bed and breakfast on a village green to picturesque seaside resorts. Take your pick. Of course, the beauty of making several return trips is that you can do it all.

Investment strategy should include preferred method of buying and selling stock

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

The element of timing in buying and selling stocks can play such a crucial role in the success of an investment. Gaining or losing even an eighth of a point in price (commonly called one tick) can mean significant money. Would you rather leave the details up to your broker? Consider this; you ask your broker to sell 1,000 shares of a stock. He follows your orders and immediately sells the shares at $84.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

A few moments later he could have sold them for $84.125. And one-eighth of a dollar for 1,000 shares means the loss of a potential $125 gain (in other words, a porterhouse steak for two, or a pair of nice shoes you won't enjoy).

You would be especially aggravated if you had a hunch that the shares would reach $84.125 because you had been watching the stock's trading pattern.

Knowing the different types of stock orders available to you could have given you more control in the process. For instance, you could have specified that you wanted to sell at $84.125 or not at all.

Once you and your broker have discussed your overall investment strategy, you can explore the finer points of timing and setting guidelines on the prices for buying and selling stocks within that strategy. Being well-versed in the types of orders available helps you to articulate your goals to your broker and ensure he handles the transactions effectively.

Keep in mind, however, that the process can be complex. There are always several variables to consider when choosing an order.

You may, for example, want to immediately sell, at any price, the shares of one company in the process of going bankrupt, while leisurely picking up shares of another company whenever they fall below a certain price.

Market orders and limit orders are the two trading methods most commonly used by individual investors. Market orders can be used to buy or sell a stock quickly; the broker should try to execute your order shortly after you've placed it. Having your broker identify the "ask" price before you buy or the "bid" price before you sell will give you some idea within which price range your trade may be filled. But no broker can guarantee that the prices will not change before he enters your order.

"If you think that a stock is about to make a major move, then you are better off getting the immediate execution of a market order," says James J. Angel in his report for the American Association of Individual Investors (AAII). "If you can be patient, then your patience may allow you to get a better price for your trade through placing a limit order."

Taking whatever the current best price your broker can get may work to your disadvantage at times; if a stock price takes a sudden drastic upswing, you may end up buying the shares for more than you anticipated. And vice versa if you are selling. The more volatile the trading activity is, the riskier market orders will be. Actively traded stocks of companies that have shown themselves to be financially stable -- such as IBM, Disney, Intel -- are prime candidates for this type of order. The large number of their shares in the hands of a multitude of buyers and sellers makes it harder for large orders to impact their prices.

Limit orders allow you to choose buy or sell prices independent of current market prices. To revisit the scenario above, let's say that you believe the market for your stock will change so that you'll have a chance to sell your stock at $84.125 instead of at $84. By setting your sell price at $84.125 you ensure that the broker will sell the stock at that price or better, if he can. This type of order comes in handy when a stock's price is bouncing around and you don't want to risk making a market order.

There is still a chance that you won't get the best price for the stock; once the stock is trading at $84.125 your broker has instructions to buy and if the price keeps rising you may buy before the zenith.

Of course, it's also possible that the price of your stock won't budge from $84, which means the broker never sells your shares. Therefore, it is important to consider how long your are willing to wait around for your order to be filled when you place a limit order. Stipulate to your broker whether your time line is as short as one day or as long as two months.

The most difficult limit orders to fill quickly are those outside -- versus in between -- the going ask and bid quotes, says Angel. It would be much harder, if not impossible, for a trader to find an investor willing to sell her shares not only below the bid price but the ask price too. A limit order whose determined price falls in between the stock's ask and bid prices are easier to execute because traders can match up an investor willing to sell slightly below the current bid price with one willing to pay a little more than the current ask price.

Customizing trading orders can get increasingly complex. In addition to market and limit orders, there are orders called stop, stop limit, versus purchase, and Do Not Reduce (DNR) that allow you to create trading guidelines even more specific to your needs.

Your broker can help you learn more about special orders and how they may fit into your particular investment strategy

Still, be sure to ask your broker, and yourself: What are the risks? There's no use tying yourself up in an intricate knot of trading orders if a simple cry of "sell now!" will do the trick.

First Parish to Welcome Ministerial Candidate

After several months of research and interviewing, a seven-member search committee chaired by Jane Goedecke is recommending a candidate for settled Minister to be presented to the First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) in Cohasset during the week of April 26 to May 4. During that period Parish members and friends will have opportunities to meet with the candidate at committee meetings, at a variety of social occasions, and during two worship services conducted by the candidate, Sunday, April 27, and Sunday, May 4. The worship services at 10:30 a.m. are, as always, open to all, and child care is available at the Parish House diagonally across the street from the Meeting House.

Candidate Rev. Elizabeth Tarbox, a Harvard University Master of Divinity, was born in England and came to the Boston area in 1968. She became interested in Unitarian-Universalism while living in Duxbury, and later was student minister with Rev. Richard Fewkes in Norwell, and also chaplain at Boston City Hospital. Since her ordination in Duxbury in June, 1990, she has served as minister of the Middleboro First Unitarian-Universalist Society. She is known as a gifted writer and poet, and some years ago impressed members of the First Parish as an inspiring guest preacher. She is expected to take office in early September.

Meanwhile, parish members and friends, though reluctant to say goodbye, as they must, to their cherished interim minister, the Rev. "Jenny" Rankin, are delighted for her that, next fall, she will become Associate Minister at First Parish in Concord. The position, she says, will allow her to balance her two vocations, minister and mother, and to face ministerial challenges as part of a multi-staff team. Her last sermon in Cohasset will be given Sunday, June 15.

Internet Author to Speak

What do families at the Boston Computer Museum, rocket scientists in Washington, D.C., faculty at McGill University in Montreal, and Cohasset residents all have in common? All have the chance to hear Carol Baroudi, co-author of the million-plus seller "The Internet for Dummies." Baroudi has guaranteed us a "hot time" on May 8 when she comes to Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. and presents an engaging, funny, thoughtful look at how new technology affects us and what we can do to get the most out of it.

Baroudi has spoken to audiences throughout America and in Europe and Canada. She was recently featured in The Interview in "The Boston Globe" magazine. Her book has been translated into 14 languages. She has been lauded for her ability to explain, both in print and verbally, the global Information Revolution and its boundless opportunities in a manner that is both understandable and entertaining.

Mark your calendars. Save the date. Join us for this special evening, Thursday, May 8, 7:30 p.m., in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Village Revitalization Committee Meeting

The Village Revitalization Committee will meet Thursday, May 1, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the South Shore Community Center senior room.

The following agenda is scheduled:

1. Charrette & Grant Application Recap – Where do we go from here?
2. Review Greenbush Line impacts on Village.
3. Review '97 plans for Farmers' Market.
4. Discuss Harborfest participation, June 20-22.
5. Develop goals for 1997.
6. Elect new committee chairman.

Please RSVP at 383-1994.

Pesticide Spraying Guidelines

The Tree & Park Department does not do any pesticide spraying. As in the past it is recommended that when choosing a pesticide company, you should call a certified sprayer with references.

The 1997 South Shore Insect Infestation Report predicts a light to moderate infestation of Canker Worms, Gypsy Moths and the Hemlock Woolly Adelgid. Copies of this report are available at the D.P.W office and Cohasset Town [illegible]

Open House at Sand Castles

SandCastles Child Care Center, 152 King Street, Cohasset, will hold an open house Saturday, May 3, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. SandCastles offers child care for infants, toddlers, pre-school and pre-kindergarten. For information, call (617) 383-9987.

Spring Benefit For Nursery School

Usher in the warm breezes of May with an evening out to benefit the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. The sounds of the Grateful Dads will fill the Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeeper's House from 8 to 11 p.m. as the Parents' Board presents its first-ever spring fundraiser May 2. Proceeds from the evening will benefit the school's programs and scholarship fund. Tickets are $50 per couple and may be purchased by calling Janyce Brown at 383-9828 or Ann Stenbeck at 383-2753.

Food Pantry Hours

Starting Tuesday, May 13, the Cohasset Food Pantry will no longer be open during the evening. Beginning with Tuesday, May 13, the food pantry's expanded morning hours will be from 9 to 11 a.m.

Three Races Top Saturday's Ballot

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Races for the board of selectmen, school committee and water commission and an override to help pay for town sewers highlight Saturday's town election.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

For the first time the punch-card voting machines will stay in the closet as local voters test the optical-scan system. Town Clerk Marion Douglas agreed the town should try the alternative system after last fall's recount of the democratic primary race between William Delahunt of Quincy and Philip Johnston of Marshfield in punch-card towns, including Cohasset.

Results in punch-card towns where

Voters to Decide on Sewer Funding

Saturday voters can opt for the town to share the cost of installing sewers in north and central Cohasset.

A yes vote on Question One means the town would subsidize 50 percent of the about $20 million in construction costs of the projects which were approved at town meeting.

Sparks Fly Over Train Stations

Scituate and Cohasset at Odds over Greenbush

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The Cohasset Greenbush commuter rail station will be located on Route 3A, and not in Cohasset Village. The MBTA is pursuing plans only for a station on 3A.

But Scituate's representative to the regional Greenbush Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) wants Cohasset to have two train stations instead of Scituate.

"With all due respect to the people of Cohasset and their board of selectmen, if it's just a matter of saying 'no' I can get a vote from my board of selectmen rejecting a station at North Scituate," said Joseph Norton, one of Scituate's representatives on the CAC.

Norton delivered his comments to the CAC, which reconvened April 24 in Braintree Town Hall after an 11-month hiatus.

Media Frenzy Follows Kennedy Story

But Locals Mum on Allegations He Had Affair With Baby-Sitter

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

As the rest of the state, country and even world focuses on Cohasset in the wake of the latest Kennedy scandal — most in this upscale seaside community of 7,000 try to take the attention in stride and get on with their daily business.

But that is proving difficult after a page one story in last Friday's Boston Globe detailing Michael Kennedy's alleged affair with his teenage baby-sitter — the daughter of another well-known Cohasset family — unleashed a media frenzy in the village. Vans with satellite dishes descend daily on town since the story was published, spilling out television and newspaper reporters who stop dozens of citizens on the street and corner them in the local shops to get their reaction.

Many in town are talking privately about the rumors, but most townspeople declined to comment publicly about the news which has put their community in the spotlight.

"Not a lot of people in town are

Dog Licenses at Town Clerk's Office

Dog licenses are available at the Town Clerk's office and valid from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31. The fee for licensing is $15 for females and males, $8 for spayed and neutered. Proof of rabies vaccination is required. May 1 is fast approaching and any individual who has not licensed his or her dog by May 1 shall pay an additional late fee of $25.

New Voting System at Polls

At this election we will be "testing" the Accu-Vote optical scan system. Instruction to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice, follow directions as to the number of candidates for each office, and to vote for a person whose name is not printed on the ballot, write the candidate's name on the line and completely fill in the OVAL.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Overrides are Confusing

Because they must follow a statutory format, all override questions are confusing, town counsel Paul DeRensis explained in a memo to Town Administrator Ed McCann.

At the request of selectmen, McCann queried DeRensis about the possibility of placing flyers or posters in the voting booths to explain Question One on Saturday's ballot.

DeRensis explained that summaries, explanations pro or con are not allowed and therefore, voters must rely on the events at town meeting for full information.

The matter arose when proponents of Question One, which asks for voters to approve 50 percent town subsidy of the north and central Cohasset sewer projects, said wording of the question is confusing. They asked selectmen to investigate whether informational material could be put in the voting booths to clarify the question.

DeRensis said "it is not lawful for the town to post literature of any kind in voting places, nor to try to present voters informational explanations no matter how neutral at voting places nor to spend public funds to influence any override election."

No More Brush Accepted

DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield said no more brush will be accepted at the Recycling Facility until further notice.

Bagel Shop Changes Hands

Selectmen agreed to issue Daniel Belz, 88 Forest Ave., a common victualler (food) and Sunday license for the Atlantic Bagel on Route 3A this week. While the Cohasset Atlantic Bagel will be independently owned and operated, the bagels will be purchased from the Atlantic Bagel company which has shops in Scituate Harbor and Hingham Centre.

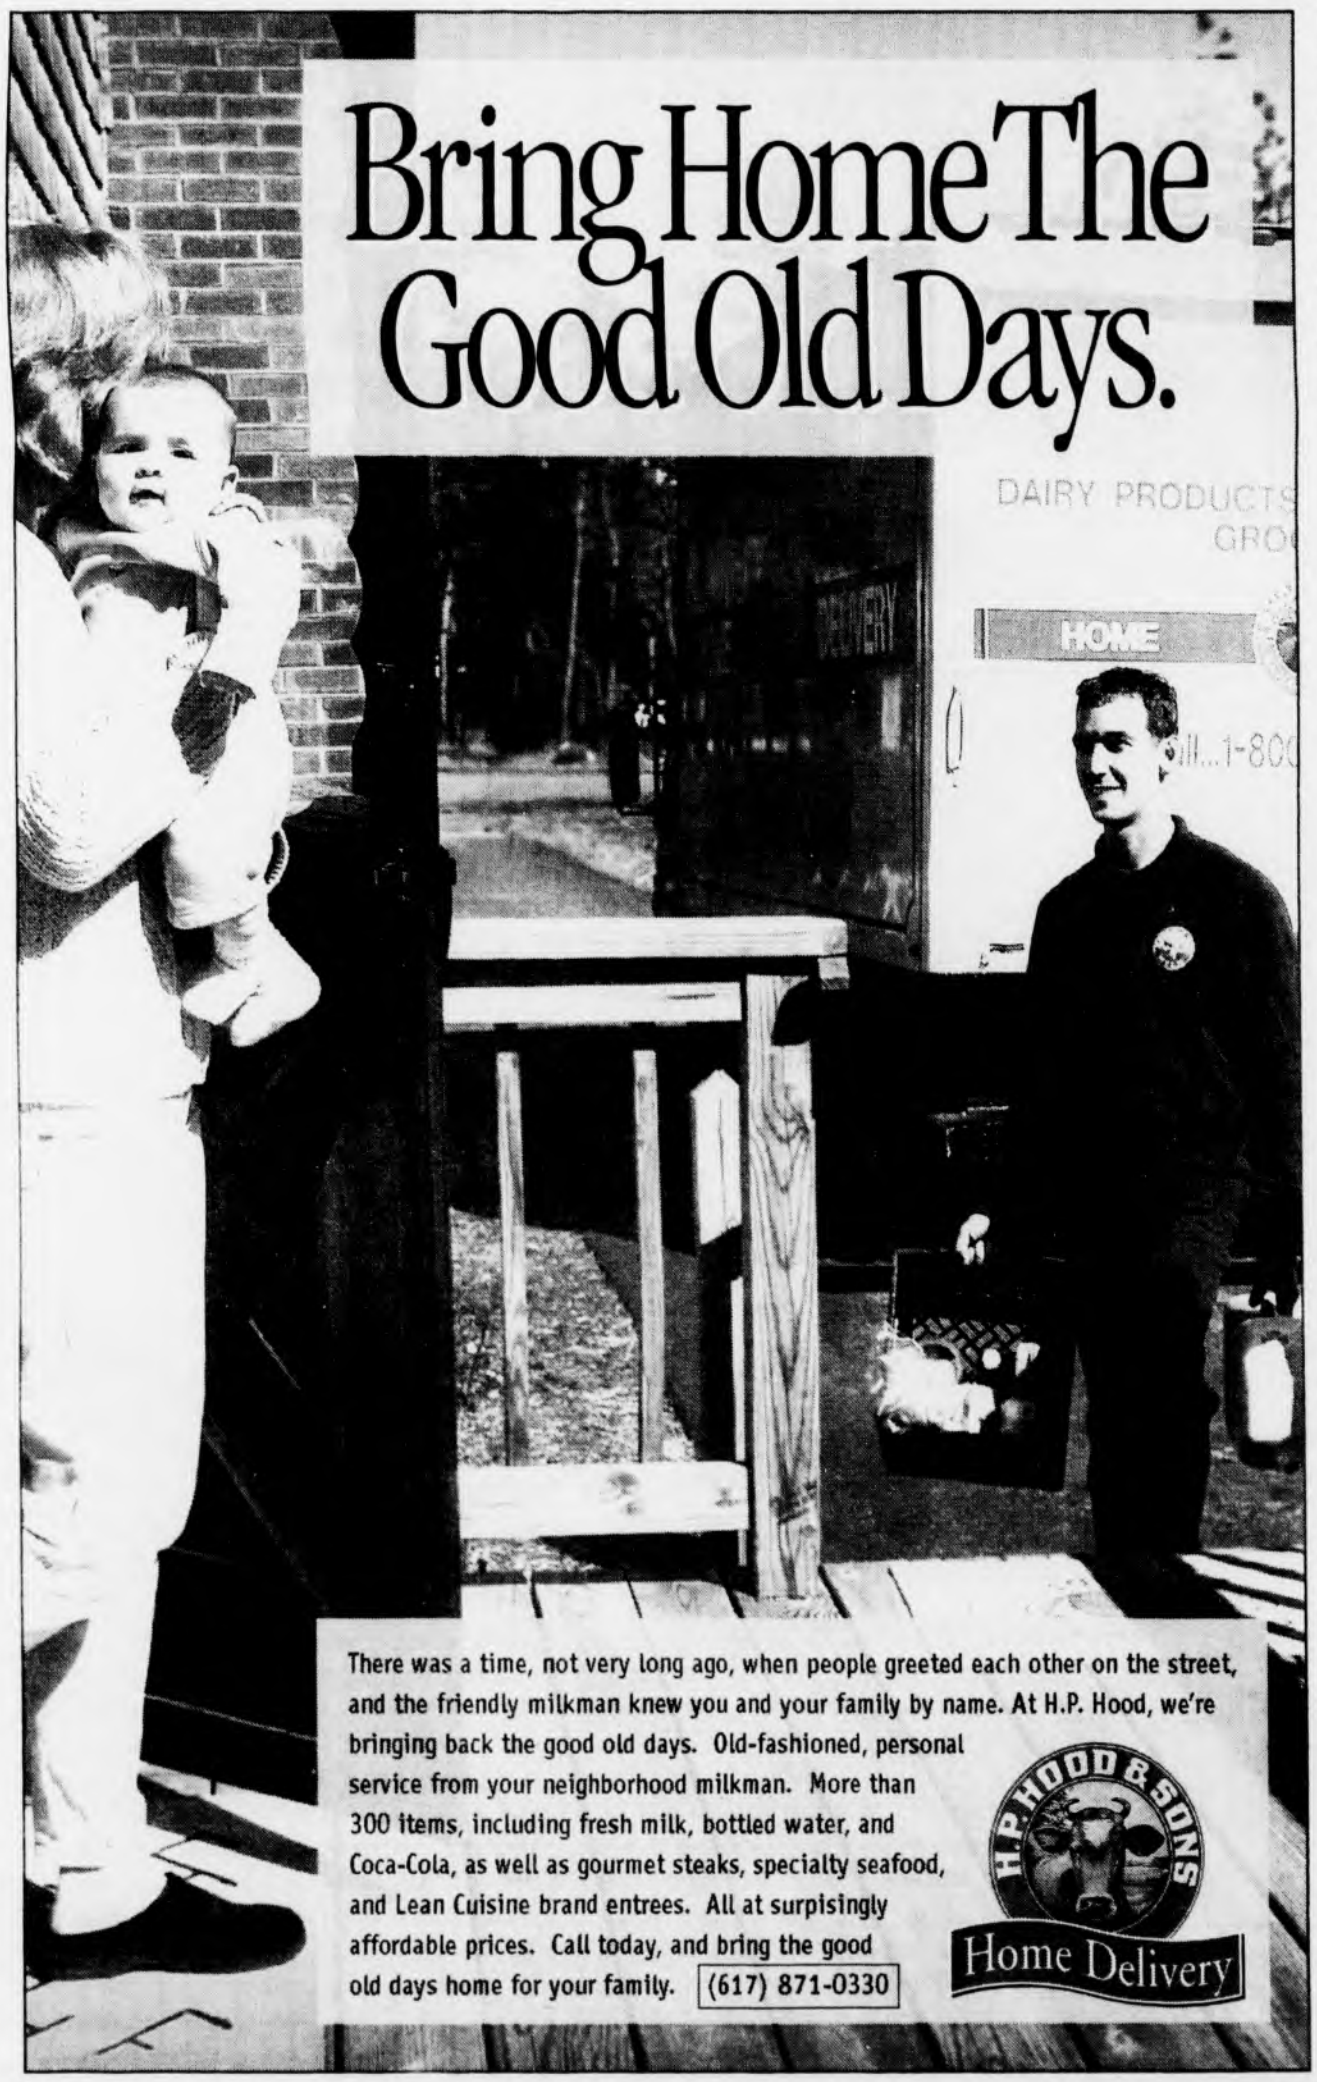
Town Manager Summit Slated

Selectmen will decide next week when to hold a summit among town boards, town counsel and interested citizens on the impending switch to the town manager form of government.

"The purpose of the meeting is to clarify issues and move forward," Selectman Nan Roth said.

Town meeting approved switching to a town manager last month.

Vacancies on Town Boards



Selectmen are seeking volunteers to serve on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, Mosquito Control Committee, Sidewalk Study Committee and Town History Committee. Interested citizens should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 or stop by the office, which is on the second floor at town hall.

Compost Bins Available

Due to efforts of the Cohasset Recycling Committee, composting containers are available for purchase by townspeople at a very good price due to a grant from the state Department of Environmental Protection, said Jack Hubbard of the recycling committee.

There are two styles of containers, the Earth Machine and the Brave New World Composter. Prices range from $20 to $30.

The new containers are on sale at from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday and Wednesday through Saturday at Aquarius Sunrooms on Depot Court. Payment must be by check made out to the town of Cohasset.

Plug not Pulled on Scituate Hill Standpipe

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The persistence of a handful of citizens may pay off as water commissioners agreed last week to consider building the new water tank on Scituate Hill off Route 3A.

The residents who live near the high school on Reservoir Road, Elm Court and Juniper Rise don't think it's fair for the town to saddle them with another eyesore.

"How many abutters are there to Scituate Hill?" asked Jean Thompson, 31 Reservoir Rd., at Thursday's water board meeting.

"That's why most of us are here. We don't want it in our backyard. We don't want the nasty looking thing."

At last month's town meeting, water commissioners said the $1.4 million standpipe would be constructed next to the existing storage tank on Bear Hill behind the high school only if the site proves to be more feasible.

The standpipe is part of an on-going, step-by-step $7 million plan to improve and upgrade the town's water distribution system.

> 'That's why most of us are here. We don't want it in our backyard. We don't want the nasty looking thing.'
> — Jean Thompson, 31 Reservoir Rd.

Glenn Pratt, 482 King St., led the charge at town meeting and again last week at the water commission meeting to move the proposed tank to Scituate Hill.

"I'd like to try and see if we can continue discussion to put the massive structure in an industrial zone not a residential zone with 100 houses within a 1,000-foot radius," Pratt said.

Commissioners say that both sites are technically adequate for the standpipes. They favor the town-owned Bear Hill location because it is the less expensive option by $210,000 and believe construction can begin in July.

The town would have to obtain easements to use the state-owned area proposed on Scituate Hill and construction would require 1,500 feet of new pipe as opposed to the 200 feet needed for Bear Hill, commissioners said.

But Pratt pointed out that zoning hearings on height regulations for structures could slow construction of the standpipe if Bear Hill is chosen. He also questioned commissioners' figures on how much more the Scituate Hill site would cost.

"I'd like to find a way to make the numbers work at Scituate Hill," Pratt said.

It is possible that the tank could be wider and shorter on Scituate Hill, which is higher in elevation than Bear Hill. Some questioned the need for a concrete tank which is more expensive initially but requires less maintenance.

Commissioners agreed to ask town engineers to take another look at Scituate Hill and will decided May 8 whether to continue to look at both or to narrow the plans down to one site.

In a telephone interview, Pratt, whose father Edwin Pratt served as water commissioner for many years, said that the Bear Hill site is "not right for the neighborhood or town.

"Once it's there, it will be there forever," he said.

with local officials to develop mitigation measures to offset the environmental effects of trains running along the Greenbush corridor.

Brennan meets periodically with the CAC to discuss regional issues involving all towns in the Greenbush corridor.

The CAC will meet again in Hingham on May 22 to review sections of an environmental impact report which reflects input from communities on the Greenbush line. Fancher said the CAC will also return to its schedule of monthly meetings in different communities in the Greenbush corridor.

Norton became angry at Cohasset's rejection of one of two stations when Scituate will get two stations.

However, Cohasset's representative, James Mullen, pointed out that Cohasset was never slated to get two stations. The two-station controversy in Cohasset was a battle over whether to put the station in Cohasset Village, Mullen said.

Dean Rizzo, chairman of the Cohasset Greenbush Mitigation Committee, also attended the meeting,.

Other Scituate representatives wanted to know whether the T would reconsider the North Scituate station.

"Would the MBTA consider putting a station on Route 3A and Cohasset Village in place of the North Scituate station?" Ilana Marks of Scituate asked Brennan. "Scituate is taking an inordinate hit with two stations and 1,500 parking spots."

Brennan said the MBTA had promised Cohasset that it would not pursue a station in Cohasset Village.

"Just having a station in Cohasset Village creates too many problems," Brennan said.

Marks also wanted Brennan to replace some of the 1,500 parking spots in Scituate with additional parking in Cohasset.

Brennan said there wasn't enough room at the Route 3A site to add more parking spots than already planned.

Scituate's representatives also suggested limiting the number of spots in North Scituate to prevent Cohasset residents from commuting to the station.

CAC Chairman Terry Fancher complained that the MBTA was not addressing "global" impacts — noise, vibrations, grade crossings, air pollution — that affect all towns.

Brennan said he was dealing with most communities on the local level to address mitigation issues. Brennan agreed to arrange future public meetings with the state Department of Environmental Protection, the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and the Federal Railroad Administration to discuss global issues and regional impacts.

Brennan also confirmed that completion of the Greenbush project would be delayed from 1999 until late 2001. Construction is now scheduled to begin in early 1999.

Brennan said local mitigation discussions, especially in Hingham, Scituate and Cohasset, were proceeding slower than anticipated.

He said the MBTA would develop a mitigation plan in 1999 to address the construction delay.

Flood Money in Question

Selectman Peter Pratt said while the town is slated to receive a $341,000 federal grant for flood relief it's not clear when and if that will happen.

"FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) has not released the funds," Pratt said. He explained while the money has been approved by the Department of Environmental Management (DEM), a state agency, FEMA reserves the right to approve grants to DEM. "We need a professional to have a look-see to see where we stand with FEMA and if FEMA will subject us to any further review," he said.

But rather than have the town's engineer lobby for the town, Town Administrator Ed McCann suggested selectmen ask the DEM to keep the town posted if more information is needed.

Comments from some of the current and prior town officials who support Diane C. Sullivan for Selectman

"The most important attribute of our next selectman to be elected on May 3 is the ability to grasp the overall best interest of the town. For me, Diane Sullivan is that candidate. Today there are just too many critical issues facing Cohasset to accept anything less than her caliber of leadership, good judgment, and dedication to the entire community." - Peter J. Pratt, Selectman

"I am convinced that the outcome of this race for selectman will rest on three issues: leadership, judgment and experience. Diane Sullivan has shown leadership by not backing away from taking positions on issues. She has shown good judgment by always representing the town's best interests and not her own. Most importantly, she is the only candidate with the experience of having served on the board of selectmen in Cohasset, including the chairmanship."
- Fred Koed, Chairman Cohasset Water Commission

"Diane is sensitive to the needs of all, and knowledgeable about past and current issues that impact each individual's ability to maintain a family residence in Cohasset."
- Ed Graham, Member, Conservation Commission, Town of Cohasset

"Diane was dependable, hardworking, and a pleasure to meet with when she was a member of the board of selectmen and I was the chairman of the capital budget committee. In 1997, when so many important and expensive projects are before the town, it is crucial to elect the candidate who is most fairminded, clear-thinking, and committed to finding the best solutions for everyone in our town. Diane, in my opinion, is that person."
- Edwin H. Tebbetts
former Chairman, Board of Selectmen former Chairman, Capital Budget Committee

"Diane and I served on the Citizen Sewer Advisory Committee together over 10 years ago. I welcomed her willingness to do extensive research and work cooperatively with other committee members. While understanding the "big picture," Diane also saw how every solution being considred would affect each individual and each business. I support Diane's candidacy for the board of selectmen this year -- she is experienced, fair, thoughtful and decisive.
- Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts, former chairperson voters use a stylus to punch a hole in their voting card were challenged due to the number of blank votes cast.

Douglas said instructions are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used to fill in the oval to the right of the voter's choice.

Douglas predicts that about 35-40 percent of the town's 5,236 registered voters will vote Saturday.

Voters will be asked to approve a debt exclusion Proposition 2-1/2 override for the town to pick up 50 percent of construction costs of the north and central Cohasset sewer projects (see related story).

Running for an open seat on the board of selectmen Saturday are: Thomas Callahan, 35 Hillside Dr.; Alexander Koines, 380 Atlantic Ave.; Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave.; and Diane C. Sullivan, 708 Jerusalem Rd. Incumbent Selectman Peter Pratt, 75 Ripley Rd., is not seeking reelection to a second term.

Vying for two open seats on the school committee are: Joe McElroy, 59 Windy Hill; Hugh Morgan, 24 Bow St.; Kathy Ofsthun, 45 Fair Oaks Lane and Susan Turgiss, 96 Jerusalem Rd. Jim Kirk, 254 S. Main St. and JoAnne Chittick, 98 S. Main St. are not seeking reelection.

Water commission candidates John K. McNabb Jr., 53 Pond St. and John C. Pereira, 115 Sohier St. are running for the seat being vacated by incumbent Fred Koed, 92 Pleasant St.

Running unopposed are Anne C. Bowdoin, 131 Nichols Rd., Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., and Patience G. Towle, 180 Lamberts Lane for the board of library trustees; Michael C. Patrolia, 15 Cushing Rd., for assessor; Alix P. White, 224 Jerusalem Rd., for health board; Ralph Perroncello, 10 Pleasant Lane, for housing authority; Alfred S. Moore, Jr., 101 Fairoaks Lane for planning board; Lillian Murray Curley, 28 Margin St. and Mary K. Muncey, 317 S. Main St., for recreation commission; and Raimund G. Vanderweil, Jr., 500 Jerusalem Rd. for sewer commissioner.

Funding

An override is needed because half the cost of the project cannot be absorbed within the tax limits set by Proposition 2-1/2, a state law limiting the amount a town can raise its tax levy without an override.

If the override passes, the owner of the mean Cohasset home — valued at $308,000 — would see an increase of $169 a year for the 20-year life of the bond issue. The 50/50 cost sharing means 55 cents in additional annual taxes per $1,000 of assessed valuation for all homeowners. The balance would be paid by all sewer users.

If the override fails, sewer users will have to pay for the entire project through betterments assessed over 20 years.

In any case, users will be assessed annual operating and maintenance fees of about $400 a year and a one-time connection fee of about $40 per linear foot to connect the sewer from the property line to the house.

The $13.5 million central Cohasset sewer project and joint override with the $6.6 million north Cohasset sewer project were overwhelmingly approved at town meeting last month with a vote of 264-3. The north Cohasset project will hook about 345 homeowners in that part of town via a sewer main to the Hull treatment plant. The central Cohasset project upgrades the town's waste-water treatment plant and extends service to about 600 homes not currently on the sewer.

Town Counsel Could Get 60% Raise

The Boston law firm, serving as Cohasset's town counsel, could get a big raise.

Selectmen discussed Monday about increasing town counsel's retainer from $2,500 to $4,000 per month because of the extra hours firm partner Paul DeRensis, who handles the bulk of the town's legal business, and the law firm spend on town matters.

The retainer covers the work DeRensis spends on the town's legal business regardless of how much time is involved.

But Selectman Nan Roth said the law firm added up the hours "and was spending more hours than the retainer is worth."

Selectmen Roth and Ronnie McMorris, who met with DeRensis last week, said the raise is the equitable thing to do. They pointed out that DeRensis who was hired a year ago, took on a backlog of issues and faced a number of serious matters including the special town meeting last summer and override elections on the school and sewer.

They expect the coming year to be equally challenging as the town switches to the town manager form of government approved at town meeting — a process which will require amendments to some town by-laws. Other pending issues include negotiating contracts for police, fire, and library and clerical workers; and flood control, sewer construction and train projects.

DeRensis of Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland charges the town $120 hour for services outside the retainer for matters relating to labor, litigation and real estate.

Selectmen held off making a decision on the increase until they renew DeRensis' contract, which could happen as soon as next week.

The town has budgeted $50,000 for town counsel which will cover the increased retainer. Selectmen said they could ask special town meeting in the fall to appropriate more money if needed for additional legal services.

DeRensis replaced longtime town counsel Richard Henderson, who charged $85 an hour which amounted to about $45,000 a year. However, the town hired special counsels to handle specialized matters, such as labor negotiations, at costs ranging as high as $200 an hour. By hiring a large firm, selectmen hoped to reign in the use of special counsel and keep legal bills under tighter control. They also said this week plans are to develop a form to track legal expenses and help the board monitor what is and what is not covered under the retainer.

Groundwork on Septic System Plans Starts

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The draft plan addresses 135 homes near Lily Pond and Little Harbor. Homeowners with septic systems that could threaten a water drinking supply are given top priority.

Residents of the Lily Pond and Little Harbor area s know they will soon be required to have mandatory Title 5 inspections every seven years. They also know it could cost them a lot of money.

What they don't know is when inspections will begin, who will go first, and how the regulations will be structured.

The health board conducted a public hearing Tuesday to get public comments on how to implement a plan to address failing systems in the two priority areas. Health board members said the plan must be submitted to the state Department of Environmental Protection by May 30.

About 10 residents attended the hearing.

Town meeting voters approved the second amended agreement with the state, which says the town will address failing septic systems in the two priority areas even if no funding is available. Health board member Kevin Ulmer said the town would not implement the plan until state funding was available.

"We will get DEP approval for our plan, but we will not notify homeowners until the money is in place," he said.

The state is offering $3 million in low-interest loans over six years, $500,000 per year, to residents within the priority district whose systems fail Title 5 inspections. Those homeowners whose systems fail an inspection have two years to make repairs.

Usually, homeowners need a Title 5 inspection only when they sell their homes.

Residents could borrow up to $20,000 and repay the loan through 20-year betterments similar to what sewer customers pay.

Residents with repairs exceeding $20,000 would have to obtain additional funding on their own.

Ulmer said it was too late for the town to receive funding this year, although it could get $500,000 in the next fiscal year. Ulmer added that no one can be certain when the state will allocate additional funding, if at all.

"You can never be sure of state funding because it allocates money from year to year," Ulmer said.

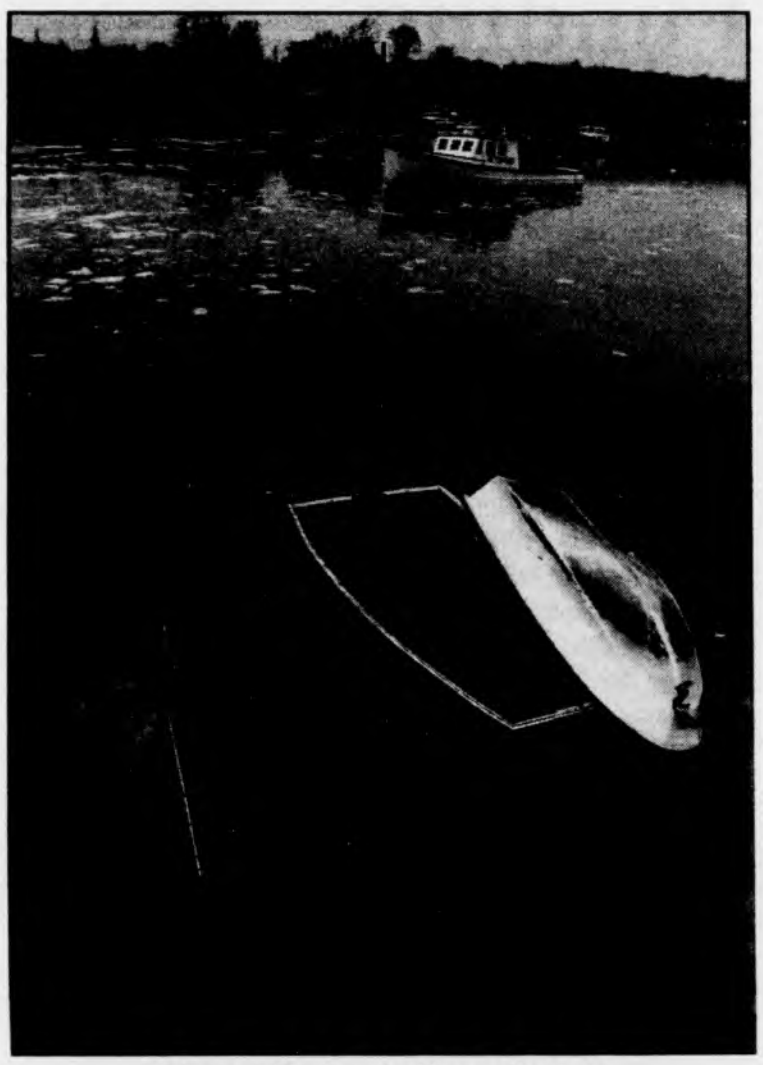
Health board Chairman Tom Cook said the draft plan currently being proposed was a scaled down version of the town-wide on-site waste water plan presented at town meeting.

The draft plan addresses 135 homes near Lily Pond and Little Harbor. Homeowners with septic systems that could threaten a water drinking supply are given top priority.

Ulmer said the health board would eventually formulate a prioritized list of homes numbered from 1-135.

Ulmer said the state's distribution method, $500,000 a year, would allow the town to provide loans for only 25 homes per year. "The big question is what happens in the future?" Ulmer asked. "Assuming a 40-50 percent failure rate, we may only need half of the $3 million. We may want to address homes near the Aaron River and the reservoir."

· Resident Rick Swanborg of Nichols Road wanted to know if he could get his house at the top of the priority list.



"The problem is we need to hit the priority areas first," Cook said. "If we have money left over we'll have to make sure we have a regulation to deal with that. Maybe it will be first-come, first served. I don't know."

Anne Lane of Nichols Road wanted to know if individual condo owners with a shared system were eligible for $20,000 each or $20,000 as a whole.

Cook said that would also have to be addressed when the health board writes its regulations. He added that the health board would hold public hearings on new regulations after DEP approved the plan.

Bruce McMeekin questioned how the plan would impact new homes or new septic systems. Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said new systems are exempt from Title 5 for two years. After that, the new systems would have to be inspected every seven years forever.

Swanborg praised the health board for doing an excellent job.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Kudos to Our Boston Marathon Finishers!

Boy, do we start off on an awesome story today; it is about the number of runners from Cohasset who took part in last week's Boston Marathon! Here is the list, along with their times, though it will be hard for many to believe that it was done! John Bradley (time, 3:12:13); Bill Cavanaro (time, 4:19:44); Alice Cook (time, 4:34:34); Don DeMichele (time, 3:37:13); Jeff Grossman (time, 4:22:34); Chris Haggerty (time, 4:55:24); Kerry Kirkendall (time, 3:43:43); Rick Kirkendall (time, 4:40:24); Geoff Nothnagle (time, 4:13:44); and, Steve Smith (time, 3:55:03). Our hats off to you all, we award each and every one of you your own laurel wreath! Jamie Langmaid also ran, it was his second running of the marathon. He improved his time, finished in just over four hours. Jamie is an employee of John Hancock.

Our own Cohasset seniors had a very important event Tuesday, it was the candidates' luncheon held at the Community Center at noon. The town should extend thanks to our seniors for putting this affair together, so that we may be knowledgeable about our candidates as we head for the polls!

The Saturday that all of you avid gardeners anxiously await each spring is right around the corner — the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host 'Not Your Ordinary' plant sale Saturday, May 10, at 9 a.m. at the Lighthouse Keepers' House (on Border Street, Cohasset Harbor). Chairman Maura Ditmar tells us there will be a large variety of gardeners' choice plants, including perennials, small trees, herbs, ground covers, ornamental grasses, etc. ... of special interest: many uncommon and hard-to-find perennials! It will be held rain or shine, and here is a word to the wise — go early for the best selection! The Garden Club stocks up wonderfully well, but the word has spread as to how great the sale is, so people cannot wait to get there! They will provide complimentary coffee for you, another super extra! Oh yes, the proceeds from the sale benefit the clubs' scholarship fund and many civic projects — so, your garden will flourish and the students and citizens of Cohasset will also! As will you!

There is a very happy/sad event around the corner that many will be interested in knowing about — Friday, May 9, from 4 to 6 p.m., there will be a tribute to Marie Price. Marie is retiring at the end of the school year, leaving most wondering what in the world our kindergarten will do without her! She has been "priceless" over the years, and loved by all that come in touch with her, be it student, parent, grandparent, etc. The party will be held at Kimball's by the Sea, and they are asking that you RSVP to Kate MacPhee at the Osgood School. They ask that you send a memory, photograph or tribute for Marie's Retirement Book. The cost will be $20 if you are unable to attend this event but would like to contribute, please see Kate. And, be sure we will inform you all about the event!

Have you seen the new press box at Alumni Field yet? It's truly spectacular, isn't it? Be sure to thank Bob Gledhill when you see him, he donated all of the siding for the building, as well as his time and expertise in putting it up!

Yeah Joe!! Joe Slotnick, that is. Word from Vassar College is that Joe is a member of the Vassar College men's basketball team that finished the season with a 12-13 record while playing a much more competitive schedule than last year. Joe is a member of the class of '99.

Hats off to Ashley Wilfand, class of '98 at Thayer Academy. Ashley made the honor roll for the second term. She is the daughter of Robert and Wendy Wilfand.

Dylan Lanzillotti (grade 6) and Jeffrey Schneider (grade 8) also earned themselves a spot on the Achievement List, an honor indeed!

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DO YOU REALLY OWN LAND?

QUESTION: I own my property fee simple with a fully paid up loan. Does this mean complete ownership?

ANSWER: You own the land you live on, but not unconditionally. Your rights do not override certain public rights. A utility company may have rights-of-way for power lines. The telephone company may have the right to a five-foot easement for poles along your back lot line. Similar easements are purchased or granted for local electric power lines, underground sewer piping, natural gas lines, and water supply piping.

You should know about all easements made on your land. This is the reason for a title search prior to purchase.

Annual Health Fair Today Until 5 p.m.

The Annual Health Fair, sponsored by the Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health, will be held Thursday, May 1, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church Hall, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

Free screenings will be conducted for cholesterol, blood sugar, cataracts, glaucoma, chiropractic care, hypertension, lung capacity and oral cancer.

The Guild for the Hard of Hearing Mobile Van will do free hearing tests. The van has been funded by the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank of Cohasset.

An oncology nurse from the Norwell VNA will be available to teach breast self-examination, and the Mobile Diagnostics Van will be in the town hall parking lot performing mammograms from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost of the mammograms is usually covered by most insurance plans. Please call the Social Service League office, 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., to schedule an appointment. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Pharmacists from Walgreens and C.V.S. will discuss both prescription and over-the-counter medications and drug and alcohol interactions.

Healthy snacks and drinks will be provided by Stop & Shop, Dunkin' Donuts and Atlantic Bagel Co.

Representatives of the South Shore Collaborative Tobacco Control Program, the Cohasset Police Department, and the American Cancer Society will be at the Cohasset High School with displays and videos for the high school students.

All residents of Cohasset are invited to attend and take advantage of all the free screenings and services.

Hire a Student

The Social Service League of Cohasset has compiled a list of Cohasset High School students who are ready, willing and able to do odd or not so odd jobs around your home; yard clean up, pet sitting, plant watering, weeding, baby-sitting, car care, window washing, etc. Many of the students can drive. The rates are reasonable. For names and phone numbers of students, call The Job Bank at 383-0771.

ROTTEN TO THE CORE

▶When a cooling system failure is traced to the radiator, it may seem that a total replacement is necessary. Closer inspection of the problem, however, may reveal that only the core of the radiator is beyond repair. If so, a radiator technician can clean and recondition existing tanks, coolers, and side brackets, and then install them with a new core. Today's repair techniques have kept pace with the introduction of new materials in late-model passenger cars. While lead solder still works as well as ever on conventional brass/copper radiators, epoxies and special brazing materials, among other products, can be called upon to repair aluminum and plastic components. The options, therefore, include recoring, repairing and replacing radiators.

▶Reconditioning and cleaning your radiator will help extend its life if you don't need a replacement. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO (383-9090), you'll find that you are given accurate estimates for both time and cost, and we get the job done as promised. Taking time out of your week to get your car fixed can be a hassle when your life is busy so we deliver fast, accurate repair to make your life easier. For the best care around, you need look no farther. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (open Thurs. eves.)

HINT

When internal or external debris inhibit radiator performance, any of a variety of cleaning techniques may be used to return this component of the car's cooling system to perfect working order.

Sharing the Cost of Sewers

Property owners in two parts of town are asking for a little help from their neighbors. Those in the north and central sections of Cohasset face paying for a major public works project alone if the rest of us don't pitch in.

A Yes on Question One means paying 55 cents more annually per $1,000 assessed valuation. So if you own the median-valued home of $308,000, your taxes will go up $169 per year. If you home is worth $200,000 you'll see an increase of $110 and so on.

Those of you who won't get the sewer may ask, why should I help? After all with Title V some homeowners could pay through the nose to upgrade and repair their septic systems.

But those affected by Title V aren't alone. The problem is affecting thousands across the state and the legislature continues to seek ways to provide relief. In Cohasset, a limited number of homes in critical areas will receive state-subsidized loans to upgrade their systems under a program being administered by the Board of Health.

Last year, the town supported a new school even though not everyone has school-aged children. Why? Because it was the right thing to do. In some way, each of us benefits from the schools.

A few years back, the town supported a new track at the high school. Most of you probably will never watch a game there — but you voted for it because it was good for the kids and good for the town. The town supported buying the Hagerty property. Why? Because owning a piece of the harbor front will be a positive addition to Cohasset.

Ultimately, we all benefit from a cleaner environment. The state knows that. That's why the town is under a court order to upgrade and expand its sewer system. The sewer is coming to north and central Cohasset whether residents there want it or not.

Without your help, they will be saddled with the entire cost of the project. Even with your help, they are still going to pay the additional taxes through the override, plus 50% of the construction costs through betterments, plus a fee per-linear-foot to hook up to the system and annual operation and maintenance fees of about $400 a year.

For too long residents of north Cohasset have been out there fighting the battle for shared-sewer funding all alone. And now they're being joined by those in the center of town.

It's time we became one town again. Vote Yes on One.

Thanks, Peter and Fred

This week two public servants, in the finest sense of the term, bid adieu to their respective boards.

Selectman Peter Pratt will soon have "former" selectman before his name. And water commissioner Fred Koed will become a past member of that board.

What a shame that neither man is running again.

But maybe we should count ourselves lucky to have had them for just three short years. They've compressed so much into their tenure of office and have provided leadership on tough issues.

Mr. Pratt's accomplishments include the monstrous harbor dredging and James Brook flood control projects which are closer to fruition thanks to his tenacity and determination. Mr. Koed tirelessly helped lead the water department back to credibility and financial stability.

Both men deserve our thanks. We wish them well.

'Lest We Forget

To the Editor:

Do we need more memorials to peace, and fewer honoring those who experienced war?

Peace is just a rosy ideal to those who haven't witnessed the suffering of war, especially by innocent children.

The death, destruction and disruption of WW2 need not have happened if Hitler had been faced down initially by democracies willing to be forceful, instead of allowing his depredations in the name of peace. How can we forget the rage we felt, as the disasters mounted and the horrors unfolded, for the unprepared and peaceful fools that let it happen?

Peace isn't preserved by idealistic memorials, or pious poetry, or meek acquiescence to bad people. It's preserved by demonstrating the will and the ability to punish aggression, or even threats of aggression.

Monuments and murals are only an aid to remembering history; more important is understanding the lessons of history. Remembering with understanding is the real memorial.

Stance on Town Manager Targeted

To the Editor:

I would like to take exception to Ronnie McMorris' comments regarding town manager (4/24/97).

Ms. McMorris has to be assured that the town has voted on this measure, not out of hastiness, as she wrote, but out of the experience and obvious, measurable, proven, lack of faith townspeople have in her board of selectmen.

Individually they bring us little qualification which would allow their management of a corporation with a budget as large as Cohasset's, and collectively they repeatedly show an ability of bringing more indecision to simple issues than unified answers. I will challenge Selectman Michael Sullivan, a successful, experienced recruiter, to show résumés of a school employee, a non-practicing lawyer, retired manufacturing manager, or executive recruiter, which he has submitted, successfully, for such high budget management and planning work. This is a generalized profile of who we have running our town and governing our finances. While their qualifications indicate a measure of accomplishment in their own right, today's town government is way too complex for volunteers with such unrelated municipal government experience.

On the other hand, the selectmen's disfavor of the recall provision article at town meeting, as well as their anti-town manager sentiment, show only a fear of unified citizen questions of their capabilities and a selfish regard for their want for power. Integrity would allow them to measure up for any challenge of recall, just as a qualified manager could elevate Cohasset with capable, unselfish, and non-politically aimed management. (Hint: Go to Hull.)

Selectman McMorris, show me a better way to govern, but not with one made up of dictator wanna-bees or some private "club." Show me credibility and accountability, not a way of snuffing out citizens' ability to question government. The day the selectmen give in to citizen rights and defer the disposition of issues to better judgment will be a day they might start being admired for leadership.

The volunteer selectmen should be relegated to such duties as the choices of food at the beach, and a qualified manager should manage the multi-million dollar infrastructure, business, and future planning decisions (there is such a thing) of the town.

A Time to Remember Two Brave Men

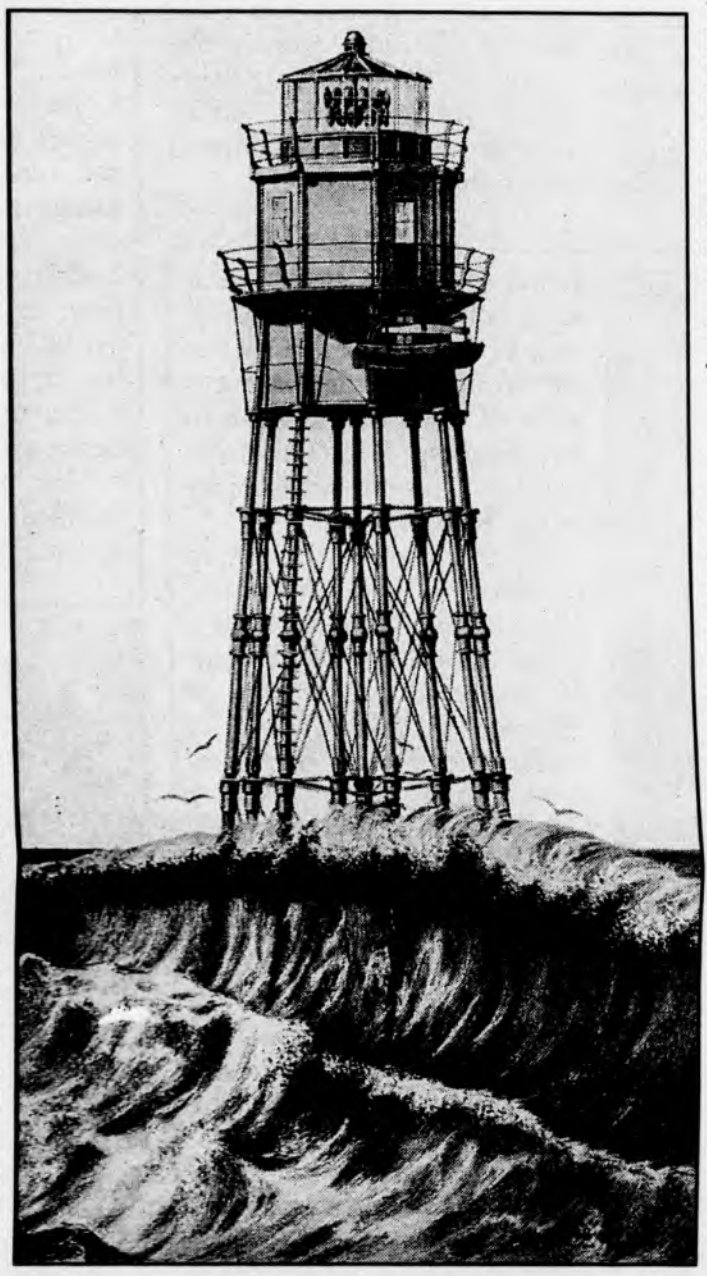
To the Editor:

During the early part of the 19th century, more than 40 ships were wrecked on the ledges off the town of Cohasset. So great was this loss of lives and ships, that the Boston Marine Society, ship owners and captains petitioned the U.S. Government to construct a lighthouse off the coast of Cohasset.

Captain William Swift of the Corps of Engineers was given the task to build such a lighthouse. After careful inspection of the numerous ledges, he chose Minot Ledge, being the furthest out from shore, at a distance of two and one-half miles.

Work began in 1847 on Minot Ledge. Nine holes were drilled five feet deep and twelve inches in diameter. The nine 40-foot wrought iron pilings which tapered from 10 inches down to four inches in diameter were secured with iron filings. The keepers' quarters and light room were built above that. The lantern room was 11-1/2 feet in diameter, with 15 21-inch reflectors. When completed, the lighthouse stood 75 feet above the sea.

The first lighting of Minot Light was Jan. 1, 1850, with Capt. Isaac Dunham as the first keeper of the new lighthouse.



No sooner had he taken command when his troubles began including northeast gales and a constant tightening and repairing of the bracing on the stanchions which supported the lighthouse. That January ended with the knowledge that the lighthouse was, in fact, unsafe.

The winter of 1850 at the lighthouse was very trying for the lightkeepers, with prevailing northerly and easterly gales most of the time during the months of January, February and March. However, this was nothing compared to what was to come in April, when the lighthouse was in grave danger of toppling over into the sea.

This is a story of a man in fear of his life.

April 6, 1850, Keeper Dunham writes, "I have stayed a lot longer than I should have." This is strangely prophetic when we realize that the lighthouse fell into the sea exactly one year from his above written words.

During the following spring and summer, Capt. Dunham wrote to the lighthouse service time and again, for support to strengthen the light, but Capt. Swift of the engineers said that the light would withstand any storm, and, therefore, did nothing to strengthen the light. Consequently, Capt. Dunham resigned from the lighthouse service. An excerpt from Capt. Dunham's log book reads as follows: "April 1850 Friday = This day and last night will long be remembered by me as one of the most trying that I ever experienced during my life. The wind N.E. to N. blowing very hard with a sea running mountainous high. It must be that we were in the hands a merciful God, for which I am thankful that we are yet spared."

"Saturday, sixth, the wind from the east blowing very hard with an ugly sea, which make the lighthouse reel like a drunken man = I hope God will in his mercy, still the raging sea = or we must perish. We have made out to clean the lantern up — with fear and trembling. God knows what the end will be."

"4 p.m. — The gale continues with great fury. It appears to me that if the wind continues from the east and it is now, is that we cannot survive the night, = if it is to be so O God receive my unworthy soul for Christ sake, for in him I put my trust."

"Sunday, seventh, cleaned up the lantern for lighting. Wind east with a tremendous sea which seems as if it would destroy the lighthouse, I pray to God to still the raging sea if it is his will."

"Monday, eighth, the wind now west north west WNW blowing very fresh which will kill the ground sea. Thank be to God for this blessed wind."

After Capt. Dunham resigned in the fall of 1850, Capt. John Bennett became the next keeper of Minot Light. He openly belittled Capt. Dunham of being timid and resigning. His repentance would come later. Keeper Bennett hired a new crew from Cohasset, Massachusetts. They were Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson.

After a bad northeast storm in late fall of 1850, Capt. Bennett's mind soon changed as to the safety of the lighthouse. He too advised Capt. Swift to strengthen the lighthouse. But again, nothing was done.

In December of 1851, one of the worst storms so far took place. Bennett became so worried that the lighthouse would fall into the sea that he put a letter in a bottle saying, "our situation perilous, but I shall if it be Gods will, die in performance of my duty."

Friday, April 11, Capt. Bennett flew the signal for the boat to come out. He left the weakened lighthouse in the charge of the two assistant keepers, Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson. That was the last time he would ever see them again. Sunday the wind was picking up from the east. Late Monday there were gale winds. Wednesday, April 16, 1851, the winds were northeast and intensified to hurricane force. Little did the keepers know that it would be the worst storm of the century. The two heroic keepers continued to perform their duties, keeping the bell ringing and the light burning. Their worst night was to begin. The northeast winds abated, but always after the wind passes, the murderous ground seas begin, and the worst time of all is at ebb tide when the sea surge climbs right up over outer Minots ledge, as if there were a stairway causing the seas now to reach high on the keepers quarters, 60 feet above the ledge and pounding it with every wave.

The lighthouse now was swaying two feet from side to side!

Around midnight, the lighthouse started to list to the leeward. As the pilings started snapping, the keepers realized that the end was near. They wrote a note saying the light would not last the night out, signed, "JA & JW." A bottle was found later.

About 1 a.m. the morning of April 17, 1851, the bell was heard ringing furiously, as the pilings snapped one by one and the lighthouse fell into the sea.

It has been 146 years since that terrible night of April 17, 1851, when the lighthouse pounded by gale winds and heavy seas was cast into the ocean, taking with it Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson to their death.

The town of Cohasset has always remembered those who gave their lives for their country, but somehow the town has forgotten two of its bravest men. They knew full well that the lighthouse was proven to be unsafe by Capt. Dunham and Cohasset mariners, yet in the true spirit of the lighthouse serve, they sailed out to the lighthouse never to return.

With that in mind, I honestly and wholeheartedly feel that it is time, and long overdue, that recognition be given to these two heroes. A granite monument to be placed on Lighthouse Island this year would be a wonderful tribute to these fine boys who sacrificed their lives in order to save others.

An account (The Antoine and Wilson Memorial Fund) has been established at the Hingham Institution for Savings, Ship Cove Lane (Elm Street) Cohasset, Massachusetts, should you care to make a donation. Your help and support would be greatly appreciated. Time to remember.

Egg Hunt Support Appreciated

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Recreation Commission held their 20th annual Easter Egg Hunt Saturday, March 29, and would like to thank the following organizations and individuals who made it possible:

For their continued financial support we thank the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, Cohasset Police Association, Rotary Club of Cohasset, George H. Mealy, American Legion Post and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9146 of Cohasset.

For logistical support, gratitude is extended to the DPW, tree and park crew, Peter Laugelle and Herb Marsh, Cohasset Fire Department, Chief Roger Lincoln, Cohasset Police Department, Chief Brian Noonan, Cohasset School Department and Cohasset Wire Department, Steve Wigmore. Our gratitude is extended to Mr. Glenn Pratt for his efforts and transportation of the Easter Bunnies aboard the Cohasset fire truck.

For donations, thanks go to Tom O'Brien Toyota, Mr. Bill Patrallo, manager, Mary Lou's Coffee Shops, Mr. Robert V. Davenport and Mr. Richard P. Barrow, Chairman, Recreation Commission, CVS of Cohasset and Mr. Paul Barry.

For their hard work conducting the Easter Egg Hunt our most sincere gratitude go to Georgine Butman, Ted Carroll, Emily Henderson, Jessie MacDonald, Karen Niessink and Eric Worley.

A very special thanks to Ms. Phyllis McComas and Ms. Shelia Sullivan. For their continued efforts, interest and support of this event, sincere gratitude goes to Jean, Manny and Dana Salvador.

SELECTMAN

Name: Thomas J. Callahan
Age: 38
Family: Wife, Alison; daughter, Katie, 7; son, Peter, 4.
Education: BA, Boston University, 1980; JD, Albany Law School of Union University, 1984.
Occupation: Attorney, self-employed, offices in Boston and Holbrook.
Years in town: 11+
Civic/Municipal Experience: Member of conservation commission, 1989-present; chairman, July 1990 to June 1991, July 1995 to August 1996; vice chairman, July 1994 to June 1995.
Reason for Seeking Office: I am running for selectman for the opportunity to continue serving the town as I have for eight years as a conservation commissioner. I want to help formulate the necessary management plan we need to address our problems, utilizing my experiences professionally and on the commission with similar issues.

I hope to be part of a board that will squarely address the tough decisions that need to be made. Those who know my commission work know I will commit the time and energy needed and do not shrink from the tough decisions.

Most importantly, I run to represent the interests of the whole town and not a single issue or interest group, or from the position of rampant negativism relative to our town boards. I want to bring back a sense of consensus and community. We need constructive action on the important issues ahead (budget, train, CHL, education) and not continued infighting.

SELECTMAN

Name: Alexander C. Koines
Age: 45
Education: Derby Academy, Tabor Academy, Chauncy Hall, Chapel Hill, BA, Roger Williams University, 1974
Occupation: Manufacturer's Representative
Years in town: 40
Civic/Municipal Experience: Founding member and officer, Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers
Reason for Seeking Office: The past two years have been exciting for Cohasset government. Some regard the controversies over the new school, the town manager and the sewer as divisive, but I see them as a healthy sign that our democracy is working. Citizens became more involved and began to question how and where their tax dollars were being spent.

Our property taxes have doubled in the past ten years and our town accountant has predicted a rate increase from $15.05 to near $20 per $1,000 in the next five years. I seek the office of Selectman to make sure this doesn't happen.

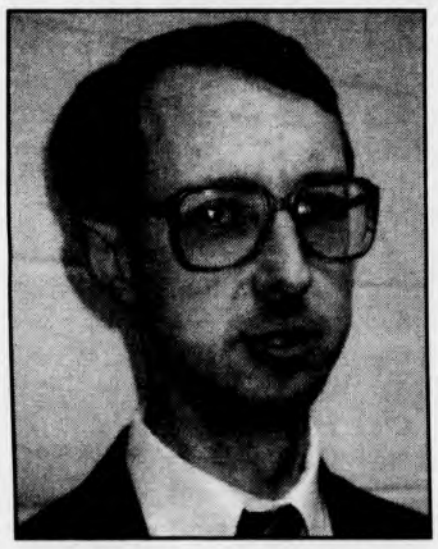
I will work cooperatively with all board members and citizens but such communication cannot always be harmonious. We need different viewpoints and ideas. My opponents support more overrides. I believe we must try to live within the reasonable limits of Proposition 2 1/2. We will be a better town for having made the effort.

SELECTMAN



Name: Wigmore A. Pierson
Age: 57
Family: 3 children: Elizabeth, 17; Morgan, 15; Carrie, 13.
Education: BA Lakeforest College, Tuck School of Business Administration at Dartmouth.
Occupation: Founder, president, New Options Group; president, Pierson Corporation, an investment management company.
Years in Town: 12
Civic/Municipal Experience: Chairman, Committee on Town History; member, Cohasset Historic Commission; member, chamber of commerce and historical society; former member Cohasset Historic District

Commission; founder, host "Pierson to Person", public affairs television show.
Reason for Seeking Office: I am a candidate for Selectman because I believe we can do better — better in listening to our fellow citizens; better in making timely decision; better in our responsiveness to citizen concerns; better in streamlining the management of town affairs; better in handling our financial affairs; and better in our accessibility to our fellow citizens.

Since I have been deeply involved in investment and financial matters, have been a career counselor for more than 20 years, served as host of "Pierson to Person" for 10 years, and served on three town boards since 1988, I believe I bring well balanced skills and talents to the boards of selectman.

In addition, and perhaps most importantly, I feel that the board can benefit from my experience, my willingness to listen openly to our fellow citizens and my independent voice.

WATER COMMISSION

Name: John McNabb
Age: 40
Family: Older brother of Mike, Lauren, Tara, Christopher and Gerald McNabb. Parents: John and Julie McNabb Education: Bowdoin College, 1978; major in psychology with honors; Cohasset High School, 1974 graduate Occupation: Environmental Government Officer's consultant
Years in town: 36
Civic/Municipal Experience: chairman, Water Resources Protection Committee, 1994-present; South Shore Water Supply Advisory Committee, 1996-present; Groundwater Protection Committee, 1991; Recycling Committee, 1996-present; South Shore Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Board, 1994-present; Town Government Structure Committee, 1983-84, chairman 1985-87; Trustee, Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 1984-87; vice president and co-founder, SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion); representative of citizens at the 1996 site assignment hearings.
Reason for Seeking Office: I am running for water commissioner to continue the work of Fred Koed and the water commission in the last three years to rebuild our water system so we will never again have the situation we had in the summer of 1994 when many Cohasset homes were without any running water. While the commissioners have solved the immediate problem that led to the 1994 water crisis, there is still much work to be done.

A second water storage tank is essential to provide the required fire reserve in the water system to allow the fire department to fight a fire without depleting water pressure throughout Cohasset. There are still many miles of old water pipes in Cohasset which must be relined or replaced.

The water commission also must continue the use of private contractual services to run its operations. These services provide important cost controls for operation of the department.

SELECTMAN

Name: Diane C. Sullivan
Age: 56
Family: Two sons, Michael, age 35, married, lives with wife and two grandchildren, Kelly and Daniel, in Amherst, N.Y.; Jason, age 19, in college at UMass/Amherst.
Education: Weymouth Schools, Salem College.
Occupation: Manager of Cost Containment and Managed Care Services at Medical Claims Service, Inc., Quincy.
Years in town: 20
Civic/municipal experience: Former selectman, 1985 to 1987, Chairman 1987 Drainage Advisory Committee, Sewer Advisory Committee, Fire Station Committees, former member Board of Directors, Cohasset Community Center, Selectman Liaison Harbor Committee, Elder Affairs and others.
Reason for seeking office:
I am seeking to return to the board of selectmen to fill the seat vacated by Peter Pratt. Since a potential move out of state in 1987 prevented me from running for re-election at that time, and based on what I have observed in town, I feel it is a good time for me to bring my experience back to the board as the town deals with the very important issues before us. In addition to my experience, I will bring personal commitment, knowledge and willingness to work hard, listen well, and make sound judgments with fairness for all.

This is an important time for Cohasset as we move forward to achieve professionalism in the operation of our town's government. Implementation of a professional town manager will be an exciting challenge and will require a commitment to the mandate of our town meeting vote.

Age: 52
Family: Two sons, Derek, Chris
Education: Cohasset Public Schools
Occupation: Retired supervisor MBTA; currently bus driver to Cohasset public schools
Years in town: Most of life
Civic/Municipal Experience: U.S. Navy, Vietnam Era Veteran; St. Anthony Church; Cohasset Little League; George H. Mealy Post #118
Reason for Seeking Office: I am seeking the office of school committee for many reasons. Namely, quality of education, maintenance of school buildings, transportation and budget. As we embark into the 21st century so too does Cohasset schools with education reform.

The new administration in place at all three schools are dedicated to the education of our students. The school committee also has an obligation to all taxpayers to keep the budget at a reasonable figure that we all can live with and not be subject to override votes. We must institute strong maintenance programs, look to the state for additional funding for projects and use resources that are readily available to us. If elected, I promise to work with the other committee members and administration to achieve these goals.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Name: Joe McElroy
Age: 55
Family: Wife Mary (formerly a teacher in the Boston school system and currently a computer instructor).
Children: Three: Mary-Catherine, Christopher and Rachel. Mary Catherine and Christopher are graduates of Cohasset High School and Rachel is a sixth-grader at the Deer Hill Elementary School.
Education: He holds a Bachelor of Arts from Boston University and a Master of Education from State College at Boston. He was the United States Army Security Agency's "Instructor of the Year" and he has taught as an Adjunct Professor at Bridgewater State College.
Occupation: Mr. McElroy is the North American Footwear Buying Manager for Reebok; previously he was Director of Material Management for Etonic-Tretorn-Puma. He retired from military service as a Lieutenant Colonel with citations to include the Bronze Star, five Meritorious Service Medals and two Army Commendation Medals. He is a member of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans. Joe is also a member of the National Association of Purchasing Managers and the American Production and Inventory Control Society. Mr. McElroy has certifications in purchasing and inventory control as well as software analysis and design. He is a licensed real estate salesperson and notary public.
Years in town: A 13-year resident of Cohasset.
Civic/municipal experience: He has served on the town's Capital Budget Committee, been Director of the Cohasset Historical Society, was chairperson of a South Shore Alzheimer's telethon and is past President of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation.
Reason for seeking office: Mr. McElroy says that he made the decision to run for School Committee because of his concern that all students have the best possible opportunity for a quality public education and because he wants to help heal recent rifts that have arisen within the Cohasset community. He has stated that he will give special emphasis to integrating five-year strategic and financial plans, promote better understanding of school and community priorities, and put technology on the "fast track" while emphasizing core basic studies.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Name: Kathleen Ofsthun
Age: 40
Family: Married to Rich; three sons, Ryan, 11; Chris, 9; Conor, 5
Education: B.S. with honors in accounting at University of Illinois; graduate work at University of Chicago
Occupation: Currently at home with my three boys. Fifteen years of business experience as a CPA and as a marketing consultant.
Years in Town: 3
Civic/Municipal Experience: 1996-97 president, parent school organization; little league coach since 1994; Harborfest volunteer; Meals on Wheels volunteer.
Reason for Seeking Office: I'm running for school committee because I want to further excellence in our schools. I believe in providing a challenging curriculum and setting high expectations for students and staff. I also believe the schools can do this at a fiscally responsible cost, and that my expertise as a CPA will help achieve this.

From the new school to the middle school, I would provide vigilant oversight of projects underway. Then I would contribute to an expanded vision of our schools, updating the five year strategic plan and widely publicizing it along with the maintenance and capital spending plans. The school committee can educate citizens about school issues through these and other communications. The committee should prepare reports of spending versus the budget, explaining significant variances. As a critical thinker who enjoys financial analysis and reporting, I would work for Cohasset's schools to achieve excellence at a reasonable cost.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Name: Susan Turgiss
Age: 43
Family: Married; husband, Robert; daughter, Nicole, 11.
Education: Masters of Education, Northeastern University; Bachelor of Arts, Bridgewater State College
Occupation: Speech and language pathologist in public schools
Years in Town: 6 years
Civic/Municipal Experience: Parent representative Deer Hill School Council; Member 1995 Cohasset Public School Strategic Planning Committee; P.S.O. Board Member; Cohasset Web Site Committee; Academic and enrichment volunteer.
Reason for Seeking Office: I am a candidate for school committee because I believe education is one of the most important gifts that we can give our children. We must prepare our children for the future by encouraging them to reach their potential as learners and responsible citizens. Recognizing their range of interest and talents, maintaining high standards, and keeping current with curriculum and technology is important.

My seeking a school committee position reflects both my personal and professional life. I hold a Master Degree of Education which I have enriched with post-graduate training. As a speech and language pathologist for 15 years in public schools, I have been positively and actively involved with implementing curriculum changes and testing brought about by education reform. Given my background, I chose to put my energy and community support into our schools.

My focus for Cohasset schools is academic excellence, fiscal accountability, and community involvement and support.

Tabloid Reporters Nabbed in Hingham

Victoria Kennedy Seeks Help from Landscapers

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The scene for the latest chapter of the Kennedy saga is Jerusalem Road in Cohasset where Victoria Kennedy and her sister-in-law sought assistance from local landscapers to escape from two tabloid reporters who were pursing them.

Police said the reporters from the London tabloid The Star were apparently staked out across the street from the Kennedy home at 181 Atlantic Ave. early Tuesday morning.

"They followed Mrs. Kennedy out and down Jerusalem Road. When she saw workers from Richard Kelley Landscaping, she was upset and pulled over to get assistance," investigating Officer Lawrence Ainslie said.

"They came to the rescue and tried to block the (reporters') vehicle to give Mrs. Kennedy time to get away," he said.

Ainslie, who was dispatched to investigate the incident at 7:50 a.m., said the Martin Gould, 41, who had a New York address but a U.K. drivers' license, allegedly bumped John Buckley of Hull, forcing him onto the hood of their rented car. The other landscaper Adam Ewell, also of Hull, jumped out of the way, Ainslie said.

The reporters allegedly fled the scene and proceeded to follow Kennedy's car into Hingham, he said. A few minutes later, Kennedy drove into the Hingham Police Station off Route 3A where she was assisted by Officer Kris Phillips.

"They described the car," said Phillips, who said he spotted the vehicle and apprehended the men after a short chase.

Hingham Police Sgt. Taylor Mills said the Mrs. Kennedy and Rory Kennedy remained in the police station parking lot until the reporters were apprehended and then were "safely on their way."

Cohasset police have charged Gould with assault & battery by a dangerous weapon (motor vehicle) and three counts of assault by a dangerous weapon (motor vehicle) and operating a motor vehicle negligently.

Hingham police have filed a complaint against Gould for speeding and failure to stop for a police officer. Gould's passenger was identified as Star reporter John Barrett of New York City.

A Fox TV news van camps outside French Memories. TV news crews and reporters from around the world have flocked to Cohasset to pursue the story about the latest Kennedy scandal.

Kennedy Story

Michael Kennedy of Atlantic Avenue talks to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at a meeting last year. Allegations that Kennedy had an affair with his children's baby-sitter have brought media from all over the world to Cohasset.

paying much attention to it," said Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown.

"I saw Channel 4 in town Friday night running around trying to find someone to talk to without much success."

The Boston Globe quoted unnamed sources in its report which said Kennedy, 39, of Atlantic Avenue, who is the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, was allegedly involved with the girl possibly since she was 14. If true, Kennedy could be charged with statutory rape. (The girl is now 19 and a freshman in college.)

Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke and Police Chief Brian Noonan said they would conduct a preliminary review based, at this point, solely on the Boston Globe story. According to published reports, Chief Noonan has talked with the teenager's family. However, he was refusing to comment on that.

"I'm not sure this will go as far as some people think," Noonan said Friday. "We need a victim, we need testimony. We have nothing now."

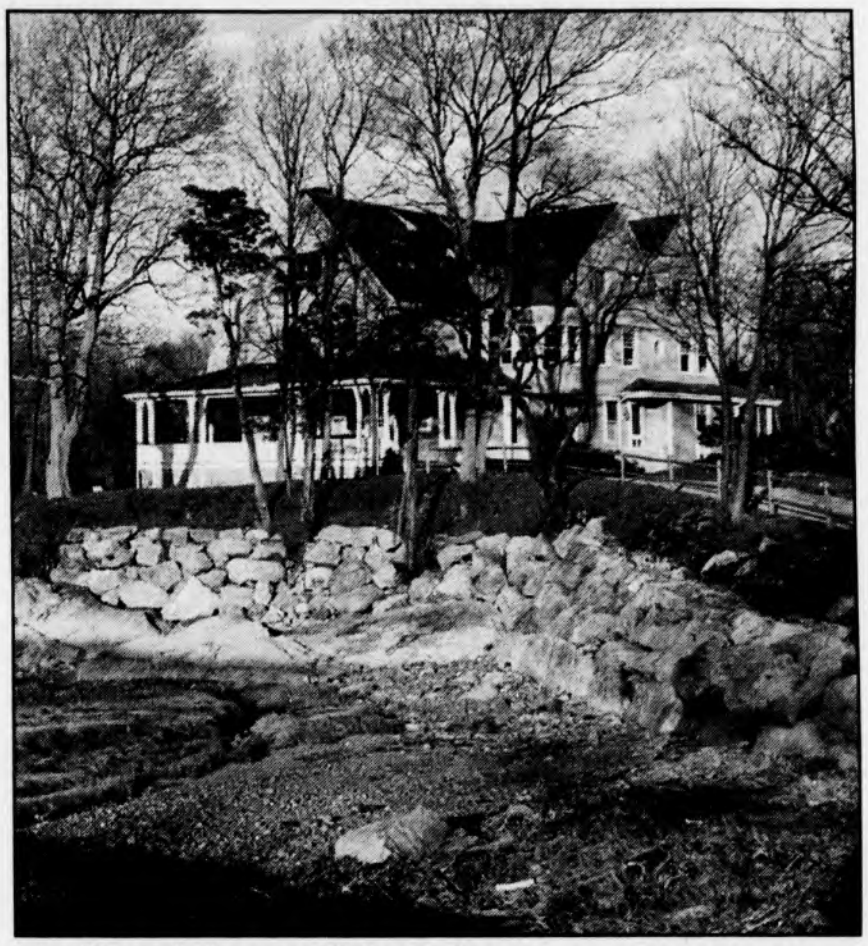
By Monday, Cohasset police were referring all calls to the district attorney's office. Locke's office confirmed a preliminary review was underway and would only say the matter was being handled just like any other investigation.

Kennedy's lawyer, Thomas Dwyer of Dwyer and Collora of Boston, has refused to comment on the situation.

Although rumors had circulated around town for weeks, reporters from other media outlets could find no solid leads and could only quote the Boston Globe.

Frustrated reporters from a Los Angeles-based supermarket tabloid, London's The Mail on Sunday and WCVB-TV Channel 5 in Boston contacted the Cohasset Mariner looking for information.

The Globe tabloid (not to be confused with the Boston Globe) even went to the Mariner's Hingham office last week and asked for the paper's file on Paul Verrochi, the father of the girl , and was told there wasn't one.



Monday night a Channel 56 cameraman and newscaster attended the selectmen's meeting looking for a new angle. The subsequent 10 p.m. televised news report said selectmen were apparently more interested in budgetary matters than Michael Kennedy.

By early this week, it was obvious the national media was not letting up on the story. The town was a beehive of activity, even the local stores were able to cash in on the sudden attention. On Monday, the French Memories bakery was selling out of its usual fare of fancy pastries and croissants.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a Cohasset native who knows both families, said the entire matter is unfortunate.

"I am particularly concerned for the children in both families," she said. "This is terrible. We all need to get on with our lives and not dwell on this."

This community is no stranger to media attention. Over the last decade or so, it has been the centerpiece of two feature films, "Witches of Eastwick" and "Housesitter," the site of several commercials, and a Viking movie. Most recently, Cohasset — dubbed "a power suburb" — was the focus of a lengthy Boston Globe story featuring some of the town's wealthiest citizens including Paul Verrochi and his wife, June.

CRUISE AROUND HAWAII

One of the challenges of planning a Hawaiian vacation can be choosing which islands to visit. If your dream includes some island-hopping, you might want to consider accommodations that will float along with you. This can avoid the hustle-bustle of arranging inter-island air transportation as well as the packing and unpacking that goes along with switching hotels. Thanks to a centuries-old maritime law, such port-to-port cruising is restricted to ships sailing under U.S. flags. Although this limits a traveler's choice to local cruse ships, it has also resulted in a unique opportunity to become immersed in authentic Hawaiian cultures. On board American Hawaiian Cruise's ships, for example, passengers can learn Hawaiian language, lore, history, dance, and music as they sail.

Travel in style among the beautiful islands of Hawaii on a cruise tailored to your dreams. You're sure to find the adventure you've been searching for through careful planning by SCITUATE HARBOR TRAVEL. We do it all for you here at 53 Cole Parkway, Scituate Harbor, from helping you choose a cruise, to sharing our experiences of places we've been, to making all the arrangements. School Years Pay Price With Love

Long-Time Teacher to Retire

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In 1971, Cohasset schools got lucky — that's when Marie Price came to town. Through her loving style of teaching, Price, who retires in June, has helped hundreds of local children along their way.

And ironically, it was the reputation of the schools that made the elementary teacher and her husband sign on the dotted line for their new home.

> 'Marie has carried tradition throughout the years which Cohasset will greatly miss.'
> — Paul Callahan, Deer Hill School principal.

The Realtor told them not to move in if they didn't want their children to be pushed and attend college.

Price replied: "Where do we sign?" she recalled.

Deer Hill Principal Paul Callahan says Price's grandmotherly image has been a source of strength for the school where she teaches Kindergarten.

"Marie has carried tradition throughout the years which Cohasset will greatly miss," he said.

Price's philosophy of teaching "everything grows with love" has not changed since the moment she decided to enter the field, she says.

The banner, a gift from a former student, that hangs on the wall next to her classroom door reads "You have touched me and I have grown" typifies her loving, supportive spirit.

The Rockaway, New York native tells parents at the beginning of the school year about the four rules of teaching:

- emphasize inner qualities rather than achievement;
- focus of strengths and talents while not expecting perfection in everything;
- accept children's differences and idiosyncrasies;
- and convey to children that they are loved unconditionally. "I strongly believe in helping build self esteem," Price says. "I try to compliment each child everyday.

Price's "Special Child of the Week" is an example of her focus on self-esteem. She designates a week for each child during which he or she receives special recognition. The pupil, who serves as a special helper, brings in pictures of himself which she hangs up. On Friday, the parents and siblings of the child of the week come into the classroom for a party.

"I once had a family come in with their dog," Price recalls fondly.

Part of Price's success comes from her enthusiasm for teaching.

Once of her favorite lessons is the study of Ancient Egypt. She and her husband went to Egypt in 1988 and when she returned, the children had so many questions for her that she ended up being an expert on the topic which led to her becoming a tour guide at the Museum of Science.

Long-time Cohasset teacher Marie Price will retire in June.

Price devised an interdisciplinary unit that included a visit to the Museum of science. She has continued to teach the unit on Ancient Egypt and has learned more with her pupils every year.

Other exciting events during the year include the Christmas and Hanukkah shows, Halloween, Valentine's Day, Letters to Santa, activities with high school students, and book writing with six-graders.

Price says none of these activities would be possible without help from parents.

"We couldn't teach without the parents," she says. "They volunteer to read, chaperone, paint, help with paperwork, and help with art projects. We work together."

While Price applauds the emphasis on early childhood education today, she is concerned about rising competitiveness among children.

"Children are focusing on who is best at this and that, therefore ignoring individuality," she says. "Maybe this is due to the lack of free time children have nowadays. They need more free time to use their imagination. With rigid schedules, children don't have the time to be creative."

Although Price won't be back at Deer Hill in the fall, she'll have plenty to keep her busy. She plans to spend time with her grandchildren, visiting her condo in Palm Beach, volunteering in a neo-natal nursery, and attending high school basketball games. Price also plans to join her husband selling real estate with Hallmark.

But she is quick to point out, she'll miss much about teaching.

She feels sad when she thinks about missing the first days of school when everything is so new and the children are in such wonderment. She says she'll miss seeing the children's joy when they do something they couldn't do; feeling for loose teeth; hearing about baby brothers and sisters; and seeing her pupils' growth when they are ready to move on.

But most of all Price says she will miss all the hugs and friendship with the children, parents and teachers.

Improving On Perfection

Ken Ekberg Sees Flaws With 8-0 Laxmen

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

They got off to a great start when Matt Belson grabbed the faceoff, raced the length of the field and whipped a shot past the Norwell goaltender in the first 10 seconds of the game.

And after a timeout with 1:52 remaining in the half and leading 3-1, the team struck again with two quick goals to put the contest away with a four-goal cushion..

But Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach Ken Ekberg was more than a bit miffed after the Skippers came away with a 9-4 victory over the Clippers on Tuesday.

Now don't get Ekberg wrong. He's delighted Cohasset is unbeaten with a perfect 8-0 record. And he know he has a fine crop of veteran players who know the game. What Ekberg fears are the mental mistakes, several of which surfaced against Norwell. Cohasset may be able to get away with the mental lapses against average teams, but when the Skippers face teams the caliber of Hingham, Duxbury, Falmouth and Barnstable, they'll be in big trouble.

They can't afford the mistakes and Ekberg knows it. The trouble is, there is only so much he can do as a coach to rectify the problem.

"We just have to get better over the second half of the season," Ekberg said. "In a seven-minute span we committed five penalties and Norwell scored two goals.

"The teams coming up are going to be tough and it's not going to make things any easier if we make penalties."

Cohasset led 7-2 at the time and wasn't worried about the Clippers getting back in the game, but the penalties were disturbing, nevertheless. In short, the win was tougher than it had to be.

The win marked the first time the Skippers had their entire team together again. Cohasset was short seven players during vacation week, but that didn't stop the the team from improving to 7-0 with three wins.

Cohasset concentrated on getting an early lead in every game and having the advantage at halftime. The Skippers accomplished their goal, managing to establish themselves early in every game and ultimately coming away with victories over Walpole (12-3), Masconomet (12-1) and Xaverian (14-8).

Despite the fact the Cohasset was shorthanded, its potent defense remained intact, giving opposing offenses very little room to move in the Skippers' end, and providing Cohasset with several fast break opportunities.

Jamie Buick had a big offensive week for the Skippers, racking up an impressive 14 goals and six assists in three

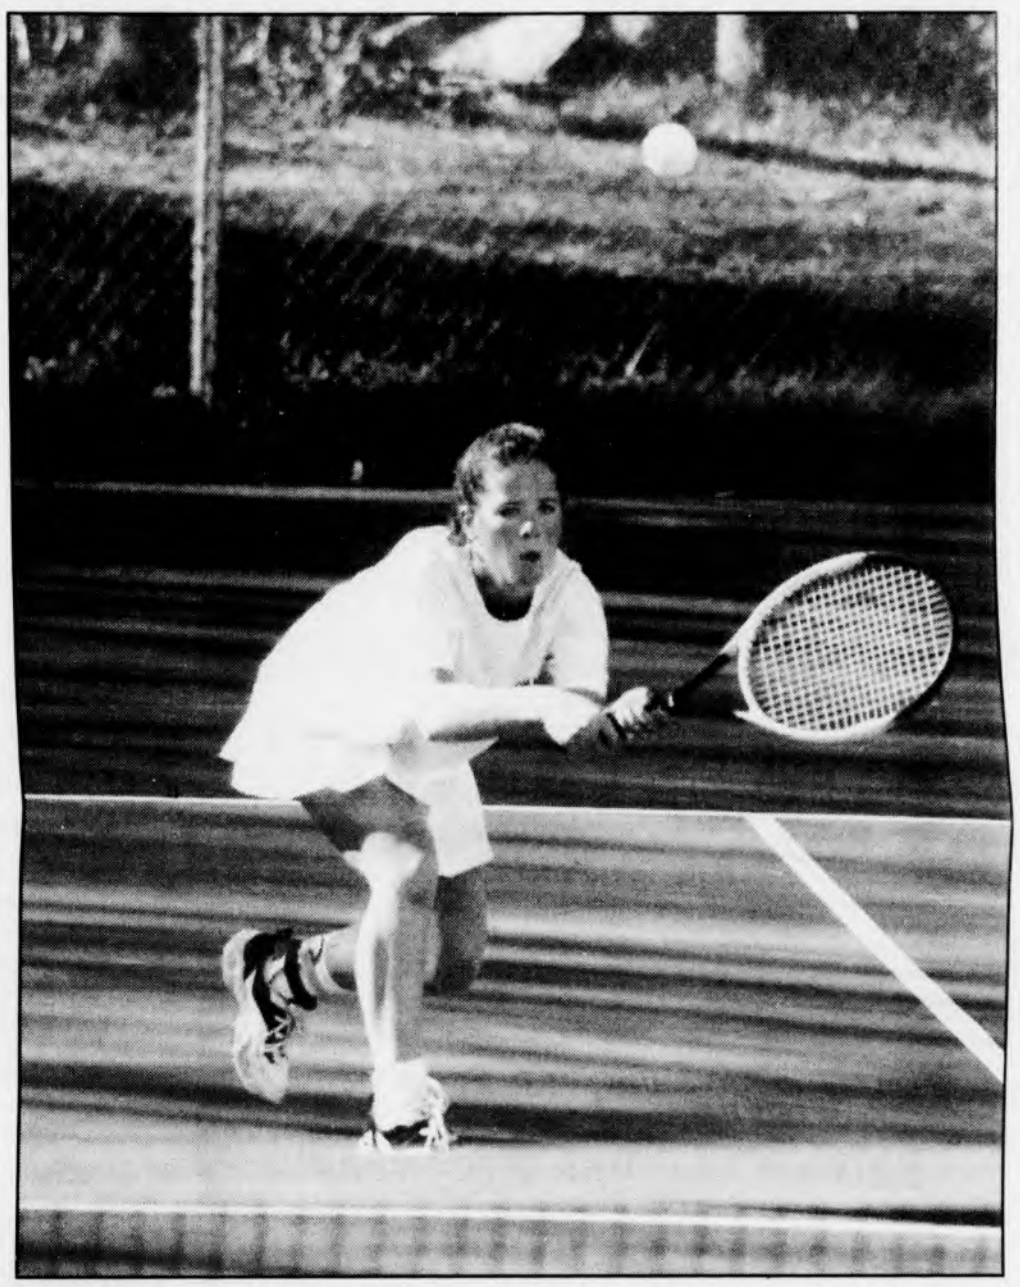
Donovan's School Record Lifts Girls

By Terry Kahn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER



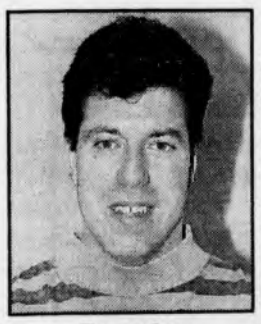
The Cohasset High girls lacrosse team opened its 1997 season with an impressive 14-2 rout of Algonquin Regional on April 14. The Lady Skippers were led by freshman Caitlin Donovan's school-record seven goals and goalie Melissa Rosano's outstanding play in net.

Also scoring for Cohasset were co-captains Ali Kinchla and Megan Connolly (two goals each) Jackie Kahn and Emily Libby.

On April 17, the girls traveled to Dover-Sherborn where, in the rain and mud, they fell 10-6. Kinchla and Connolly again led the Lady Skippers with a pair of goals each, while Donovan and freshman Jenny Chastain had single tallies. Melissa Rosano had seven saves for Cohasset.

"We're a very young team, mostly eighth and ninth graders," said head coach Rose Kahn, "and we need to develop some maturity. We had a great effort in the opener, but came out flat against Dover-Sherborn."

Cohasset was off for the spring vacation, but was scheduled to host Marshfield on April 28 at the Deer Hill School field, and Cape Cod Academy on April 30.



Cohasset High girls tennis team's No. 1 singles player Kate Stone smashes a two-handed return during a Lady Skippers' South Shore League match.

EXTRA POINTS/Joe Reardon

Finally, Spring Shows True Colors

Reardon

For the second day in a row, the sun has been shining brightly and the temperature has been...well...spring-like. And that certainly hasn't been the norm this season because this is New England...and it's spring time.

While the cold, raw weather like we had on Monday has been a nuisance to the majority of people, it has been a major thorn in the sides of local, high school athletic directors and athletes, alike.

We survived a snow-less winter with very few, if any cancellations, only to be slammed by a blizzard on the first day of April. This, of course, came after almost two weeks of the preseason. Teams were working themselves into shape and anticipating the upcoming spring schedule. Soon, they thought to themselves, they'd be able to shed the cumbersome sweats and work out in light shorts and billowy T-shirts.

And then, WHAM! It was back to shoveling out snow and practicing in the gym and parking lots, waiting for the mountains of white stuff on the fields to melt. Sure, the South Shore was a winter wonderland, but couldn't it have come, oh, let's say...in the winter?

But that's all behind us now. Spring is finally here in full bloom. We'll be seeing the track times improve as muscles loosen in the warmer weather and move more freely.

Pitchers need less time to warm up before facing batters, and they won't stiffen up as easy. Tennis players' backhands will become more fluid and they'll be able to move around the court with a spring in their steps. Being able to feel your toes will do that for you.

The spring athletes will need all the warm weather they can get. Most teams are about five games behind on the schedule and dates will soon be filled. Baseball and softball teams could be playing up to four days per week.

Baseball coaches, with even the deepest pitching staffs, now have to plan their rotations carefully. It adds a whole new dimension to the game. For some teams, it should work to their advantage. There are some high school pitchers out there who are nothing short of working mules. They can throw five or six hard innings and come back and do the same, three days later without a hint of tightness or soreness in their arms.

Hopefully, by the time the tournament rolls around, the various teams won't have burned their jets by playing so many consecutive games.

Softball teams look to be the ones to make out the best by playing a slew of games. Remember, a softball pitcher can literally pitch every game, whereas it would be inhumane to try the same with a baseball pitcher. Softball pitchers use completely different muscles. And throwing underhand is a more natural delivery than coming over the top, or three-quarters like the pitchers do in baseball.

But who can really complain now that the sun is shining and the high school fields are dotted with teams, both practicing and competing. The spring season is here in full force. It's time for teams to get down to playing some serious sports.

New Press Box Is Just What This Reporter Ordered

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

With first glance, the new Cohasset High press box on Alumni Field looks more like a structure that would be advertised in a Jack Conway catalog.

Modern, three-story home with state-of-the-art features. Heat, storage area, windows overlooking scenic view.

It's almost a shame to call the structure a press box. That is except for the reporters, cable broadcasters and assistant football coaches who keep in touch with the rest of the staff on the sidelines.

Coming in with a price tag at just about $10,000, the newest addition to Alumni Field is a virtual steal. When bids first went out for building the press box, the lowest one was $20,000 for just two floors. This beauty has a storage floor as well. Equipment, such as tackling dummies and other football and soccer equipment will be stored there.

But the absolute best part of the box, from a reporter's point of view, is glorious heat. No more will I have to stand in the bleachers on Thanksgiving Day, shivering and trying to keep my hands warm enough to write. Why, now I'll actually be able to take my coat off in the toasty confines of the second floor. Instead of a piping hot cup of hot chocolate, I'll be able to enjoy a Diet Pepsi as the Skippers do battle with arch rival Hull on the playing field.

Curse that Jim O'Sullivan. The student/athlete/sportswriter can enjoy a warm fall of football, while I bundle up like Admiral Byrd when I head off to my games.

The only thing I'm worried about is that the press box will be full of people who have no business being there. This is a problem at all the football games, forget one that better resembles Bob Kraft's private box.

There have been several occasions when I've had to squeeze past youth league coaches, students and parents of players, who are trying to get a better view of the game. Meanwhile, I'm pressed against a flimsy plywood wall, trying desperately to see who is emerging from the pile after a first-down run. Anyone trying to get into the press box should have some form of ID proving they belong there. That doesn't include a youth football jacket with the word "Coach" stitched on the sleeve.

I've already circled my calendar for Thanksgiving. I cover the game every year, but this year should be extra special. I'll be in the lap of luxury. Now all I have to figure out is whether to order the Lobster Bisque or Sirloin for a half-time snack.

I can always get a little surf and turf action going.

The brand new Cohasset High press box is as nice as they come in high school circles.

Junior Laxmen Rock Duxbury

By Terry Kahn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Junior lacrosse team opened its season with a hard-fought, 11-4 win over Duxbury.

Attackman Evan Pestone picked up a first-quarter goal and assist as Cohasset overcame a nervous start to finish the first quarter with a 3-1 lead. A balanced attack in which six different Cohasset players scored, doubled that advantage to 6-2 at halftime. It was highlighted by Greg O'Connell's thrilling length-of-the-field run for a shorthanded goal just before the half.

Curt Kahn closed out his second hat trick in as many games as Cohasset put the game away in the fourth quarter. Pestone finished with two goals and the assist. Matt Davis added two goals and the three Michaels — Rasmussen, Devine and Ernst — tallied single goals for the skippers.

Nick Murphy stopped nine Duxbury shots en route to his second win in goal. Stephen Davis, Reed Smith, John Friedman and Justin Runey anchored a defense that surrendered just four goals for the second consecutive week.

The Junior lacrosse team plays its next two games at home, May 4 against Barnstable at 1 p.m. and May 12 against Hingham at 5:30 p.m.

Little League Parade, May 3

The Cohasset Little League will hold its annual opening day parade Saturday, May 3. The parade starts at the Red Lion Inn, 71 South Main St., Cohasset, at 8:15 a.m. and progresses up Main Street to Barnes Field.

The Deer Hill School Band will lead the parade, followed by an excess of 300 players, a fire truck with last year's champions and our special guest, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. We expect more than 1,000 town residents to participate in the parade and ceremony.

games. Against Norwell, Buick didn't lose a step, putting in four goals to go along with an assist.

"Jamie is just doing so well the other teams are really starting to key on him," Ekberg said.

Tenth-grader Steve Kovach "played very well" according to Ekberg, who was pleased with what several freshmen did on the field.

Freshman Travis Moore was moved up to the varsity squad and responded with eight goals in three games.

Buick scored six of his goals in Friday's win over Xaverian to lead five Skippers who registered tallies. Buick added three assists to finish with nine points. Moore had a hat trick and assist, while Matt O'Connor and Bobby Stansell both fired home two goals and two assists, each. Dave Noble closed out Cohasset's scoring with a solo tally.

Skipper goalie Ely Kahn turned away 11 Xaverian shots and was credited by Ekberg for leading the team when it was short of players. "Given the fact we're really shorthanded he's kept us together," he said.

Because Cohasset doesn't have an especially deep team, the players do tend, through no fault of their own, to tire in the second half of games. That's a big reason the Skippers like to establish their game early.

"Part of that (fatigue) is just the quantity of personnel," Ekberg said, "and I don't mean the size of the school. We should win most games if we score 10 goals. Defense is the team's overall strength."

Ekberg's theory proved sound once again as the Skippers netted 12 tallies against Walpole and wound up easy winners. Both Moores hit for hat tricks to join Stansell. Belson had a goal and assist, while Buick fired in one tally.

Cohasset has all the physical tools to put together a strong second half. If the team can eliminate, or at least drastically reduce the mental mistakes, the Skippers should find themselves winning several more games.

Derby Students Raise $1,200 for Easter Seals

Young people from Derby Academy, Hingham, shot baskets to help expand independence for people with disabilities at a recent Boston Celtics-Easter Seal basketball shoot-out in the school gym.

Shooting baskets for three minutes, 11 students raised $1,200.14 to fund Easter Seal services. Melanie Griffiths contributed the most to the total, raising $283.55.

Basketball shoot-outs are sponsored throughout Massachusetts by T J Maxx, Business Equipment Depot, WB56 and WWLP-TV22 and the Boston Celtics. Celtics stars Dee Brown and Rick Fox are honorary chairman of the event. Students secure pledges from family and friends for baskets scored during the shoot-out. All money raised supports local Easter Seal services for men, women and children with disabilities. Programs include summer camp, home health care, physical and occupational therapy, speech therapy, equipment loan, adaptive swim programs, support groups for people recovering from strokes, technology for independence and information and referral services.

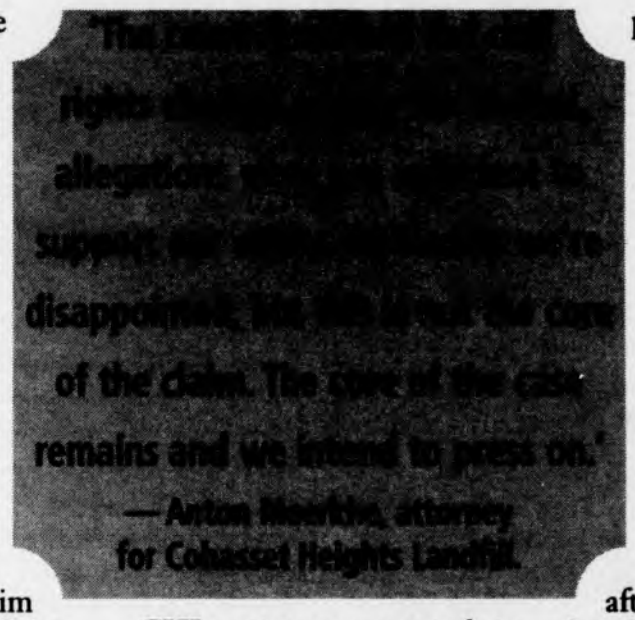
Judge Dismisses CHL Civil Rights Charges

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Superior Court Judge Thomas Connolly dismissed charges brought by the owners of the Cohasset Heights Landfill — brothers Paul and John Barry — that the board of health violated their civil rights.



Connolly's decision effectively narrowed the focus of the case to its core elements. CHL is attempting to overturn a health board ruling that rejected its request to expand its landfill by 26 acres.

CHL lawyer Anton Moehrke took the loss in stride.

"The court dismissed the civil rights charges saying the factual allegations were not sufficient to support our claims," Moehrke said. "Obviously we're disappointed, but this is not the core of the claim. The core of the case remains and we intend to press on."

Connolly also ruled that lawyers for CHL cannot introduce additional evidence or witnesses to corroborate their claims that hearings were conducted improperly.

CHL attorneys claim there were procedural deficiencies in hearings by the health board that rejected CHL's application to expand by 26 acres.

CHL attorneys wanted to question health board members Alix White and Kevin Ulmer, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, and environmental agent Bruce Haskell. CHL claimed White was biased against CHL because of her prior involvement in an anti-CHL activist group, Stop Any Further Expansion.

CHL claimed Ulmer illegally participated as a health board member in hearings on CHL's expansion because he testified as an expert witness before being elected to the board. CHL wanted Godzik to confirm that Haskell testified as an expert witness, then attended a health board meeting after the CHL hearing was closed to introduce additional evidence.

Connolly said White stated that she was not involved with SAFE while she was on the health board, and Moehrke was satisfied with her explanation.

Connolly ruled that Ulmer proved he had removed himself from all hearings on CHL's site assignment.

Finally, Connolly ruled that Haskell met with the health board after the hearing closed only to offer technical assistance, not to introduce new evidence. Because Haskell's actions were appropriate, there was no reason for Godzik to testify.

Connolly also dismissed a request by CHL to have the court overturn the health board's decision.

Connolly will now review the record of 19 hearings on CHL's expansion before ruling on its appeal.

"This decision is a devastating loss for CHL," said Cohasset attorney Kevin O'Donnell who represents a citizen's group opposed to CHL's expansion. "While this decision does not end the appeal process, it does remove CHL's frivolous civil rights claim and limits the Court's review of the decision to the record of the hearings, which is as it should be."

John McNabb, vice-president of SAFE, said CHL has little hope for a favorable ruling by Judge Connolly.

"While CHL is expected to continue to their fight for expansion, any future efforts on their part would be like rearranging deck chairs on the Titanic," McNabb said. "This decision was a near-total defeat for the landfill."

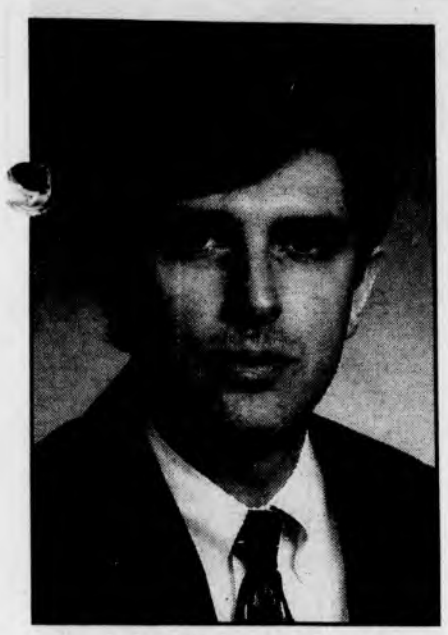
Hedlund Seeks Applicants for Internship Program



Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announced that applications are still being accepted for the seventh annual Ray Shamie Summer Internship program. The internship is open to all college students entering their sophomore, junior or senior year.

The Shamie Internship Award is an annual paid summer internship at the Republican Party headquarters, established in honor of former Republican Party Chairman Ray Shamie. The 10-week, 40 hours per week internship entails working with each member of the state committee staff on a wide array of projects.

The intern selected would begin working in June and finish in August. There is a $2,500 stipend for the program.

Anyone interested in applying for this program can call Sen. Hedlund at (617) 722-1646 or Gary Coon, executive director of the Republican State Committee at (617) 725-1966. Applications are due by May 9.

John M. Rattenbury

Rattenbury Named Department Manager

John M. Rattenbury, P.E., C.I.P.E., of Cohasset has been named manager of the Plumbing and Fire Protection Department at Erdman Anthony Consulting Engineers' Boston office.

Previously, he was a mechanical engineer in the Plumbing and Fire Protection Department at R.G. Vanderweil Engineers Inc. of Boston.

"I am pleased to welcome such an experienced professional to our staff," said Albert P. Prior, P.E., senior vice president of Erdman Anthony Consulting Engineers. "John's leadership skills will be a key factor in our continued success."

Rattenbury earned a B.S. in aeronautical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N.Y. in 1989. He is a registered professional mechanical engineer in Massachusetts and is certified in plumbing engineering by the American Society of Plumbing Engineers.

Edward Jones to Host Career Day

John Flanagan, the local investment representative for Edward Jones, said that the Cohasset office will participate in Jones' National Career Day Tuesday, May 6.

The event will feature a program to be broadcast live over the firm's satellite network. This program, which swill air twice, will examine opportunities and challenges offered by a career with Edward Jones.

Edward Jones was founded in 1871. Its investment representatives offer insured tax-free bonds, mutual funds, certificates of deposit and the common stock of companies with histories of sound management and solid performance.

If you would like more information on Edward Jones' National Career Day, call Flanagan at 383-1996.

Porter is V.P. of Account Services

Jim Porter of Cohasset has been named vice president of account services at Dickinson Direct, a full-service direct-marketing firm located in Braintree. In this capacity he will oversee the management and growth of one of Dickinson Direct's five account teams.

Porter brings 12 years of direct marketing experience to his new position. He is the former vice president of sales and marketing for The Production Company, Burlington, Mass., and the founder of the Boston-based integrated direct response agency, Briggs Porter Lewis. His background includes building account teams, servicing accounts and developing new business. Don't Miss Giant Book Sale

A giant used book sale will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

The sale offers about 15,000 books and phono-records, many of them donations. There is a good supply of children's books, and books of biography, history, business, home and garden, fiction, mystery, and science fiction.

Thousands of paperbacks are offered at 25 cents, and hardcover books are 50 cents. Sunday, everything will be offered at $1 per bag.

The annual book sale is sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library, with proceeds used to improve library services. The book sale chairman this year is John Flanagan, a member of the Friends' board of directors.

Internet Author to Speak

What do families at the Boston Computer Museum, rocket scientists in Washington, D.C., faculty at McGill University in Montreal, and Cohasset residents all have in common? All have the chance to hear Carol Baroudi, co-author of the million-plus seller "The Internet for Dummies." Baroudi has guaranteed us a "hot time" on May 8 when she comes to Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. and presents an engaging, funny, thoughtful look at how new technology affects us and what we can do to get the most out of it.

Baroudi has spoken to audiences throughout America and in Europe and Canada. She was recently featured in The Interview in "The Boston Globe" magazine. Her book has been translated into 14 languages. She has been lauded for her ability to explain, both in print and verbally, the global Information Revolution and its boundless opportunities in a manner that is both understandable and entertaining.

Mark your calendars. Save the date. Join us for this special evening, Thursday, May 8, 7:30 p.m., in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Spring Benefit For Nursery School

Usher in the warm breezes of May with an evening out to benefit the South Shore Community Center Nursery School. The sounds of the Grateful Dads will fill the Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeeper's House from 8 to 11 p.m. as the Parents' Board presents its first-ever spring fundraiser May 2. Proceeds from the evening will benefit the school's programs and scholarship fund. Tickets are $50 per couple and may be purchased by calling Janyce Brown at 383-9828 or Ann Stenbeck at 383-2753.

Pesticide Spraying Guidelines

The Tree & Park Department does not do any pesticide spraying. As in the past it is recommended that when choosing a pesticide company, you should call a certified sprayer with references.

The 1997 South Shore Insect Infestation Report predicts a light to moderate infestation of Canker Worms, Gypsy Moths and the Hemlock Woolly Adelgid. Copies of this report are available at the D.P.W. office and Cohasset Town Hall.

Cohasset Youths to Perform 'Peter Pan'

Arianna Deedes and Martha Henderson of Cohasset will appear as Indians in the Showstoppers, Inc., presentation of the musical "Peter Pan," May 1 through 11, at Scituate High School.

The cast of gifted actors, musicians and singers from throughout the South Shore make this production of the well-known magical fairy tale a special event that promises to delight children of all ages. Tickets are $10 for children, 10 years old and under, $18, $14 and $12 depending on seating. For further information and ticket reservations, call Showstoppers box office at 545-3182.

Sheri Ziccardi as Nellie Forbush and Joel Leonard as Luther Billis rehearse for the Hingham Civic Music Theatre production of "South Pacific" on stage this weekend and next at Hingham High School.

It may be time to refinance your mortgage

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Interest rates have begun to creep upward, and mortgage refinancing has inevitably begun to slow as a result. But homeowners shouldn't think of the door to refinancing as closed. Rates are still fairly low in historic terms, and many homeowners have both reasons and opportunities to take advantage of them.

Sophisticated mortgage products mean increased options. Careful consideration will reveal whether or not refinancing makes sense for you.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

"[Refinancing] used to be nice and simple. It meant lower rates and [thereby] lower monthly payments," said Keith Gumbinger, a spokesman for HSH Associates in Butler, New Jersey. "Now it's a mess. There's so many more [mortgage] instruments available."

Most homeowners refinance in order to have lower monthly payments on their mortgage loan. If you have a fixed rate mortgage with a high interest rate, an adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) might be the answer. These loans often involve a very low "teaser" rate for the first few years; the rate is then adjusted annually based on current interest rates.

If your original mortgage has an interest rate of 12 percent it would still make sense to refinance at 8.50 percent, even if the rate later climbs upward once the teaser period expires.

The first step in considering refinancing, according to Gumbinger, is to figure how many more years you'll spend in your house, apartment, etc. If your current mortgage doesn't fit with your schedule you may want to consider one that does. ARMs can benefit homeowners who expect to move in a few years. You may sell the house soon after or by the time the higher interest rate kicks in.

On the other hand, an ARM may not be right for a borrower who wants to nestle for a few decades, because interest rates could rise sharply over that period of time. You can negotiate your borrowing rates to a certain extent, but rising interest rates can increase your payments without your control.

Ideally, you want to match the length of time in the house with the terms of the mortgage or, in the case of ARMs, the period of the low set rate.

There are some instances when a higher monthly payment may be a good choice because the long-term savings will be dramatic. For instance, if your job makes it necessary for you to move every few years, there's no reason to have a 30-year mortgage. While a shorter term loan involves higher monthly payments on the principal, it will also mean a lower interest rate; lenders require higher interest rates on longer loans to compensate for their long-term risk. So you will pay less interest over the life of the loan.

If you opt to pay a point (1% of the total sum of the loan) up front you can lower the interest rate even further to try to bring your monthly cost down Even if you plan to remain in your home for a long time, a shorter term mortgage may still be a smart choice. You may now be in a financially better position to handle a larger monthly payment than you were when you first obtained the mortgage.

A refinance evaluation also provides an opportunity to take a look at other debt and needs for cash. While it is often easier and less radical to obtain a home equity loan to cover home improvements or other debt, bundling car loans, credit card debt and home equity loans into your mortgage is a possibility. Interest rates on mortgages are often lower than those for home equity loans.

If a home equity loan is 10 percent and you can get a 30-year mortgage with no points and no settlement fees due up front for 8.75 percent, why not save 1.25 percent? (If the home equity loan doesn't charge any fees, you should compare it with a mortgage that factors settlement fees into the annual rate.) Credit card interest will almost surely be higher than a given mortgage rate. And don't forget you'll get to deduct the interest on the debt from your taxes. Home equity loans are usually shorter term, however, so you'll have to calculate the total interest you will pay over the long run to see if you come out ahead.

None of these options come without new fees and expenses. The cost of refinancing should always be factored into your considerations. You will have to pay settlement fees that include recording fees, appraisal fees and quite possibly fees for new title examination and title insurance. How much you'll be charged will depend on the lender, especially if you choose a new one. Often points are required as a penalty or requirement of refinancing. Adding up all the fees and amount of interest you will pay should tell you whether or not you will be getting a better deal than you have now.

If you are increasing the size of the loan you should explore the option of a home equity loan as well, in order to make a comparison of the total costs. You can figure all this out yourself or have a mortgage broker help you.

Organizations such as the American Homeowners Foundation in Arlington Virginia and HSH Associates also offer products to help you shop for mortgages.

Public Notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 97P0967E1

Estate of ALEXANDER M. FULTON late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that DONNA FULTON of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 28, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this fourteenth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
SUPERIOR COURT
Norfolk, ss.

No. 97-745

To MARY JANE BRAZIL and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended.

GREETING:

ROCKLAND TRUST COMPANY claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in Unit A-6 120 Wheelwright Farm Cohasset, County of Norfolk, Massachusetts given by Mary Jane Brazil to Rockland Trust Company dated October 30, 1989 and recorded at Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in book 8472 page 83 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before June 2, 1997 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, ROBERT A. MULLIGAN, Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 18th day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

Nicholas Barbadoro
Clerk.

State Water Transportation Study Underway

By Alice C. Coyle
COHASSET MARINER

In an effort to determine how best to spend the $50 million earmarked for water transit in last year's Transporation Bond Bill, the state has launched the Massahchusetts Ferry Project.

In the wake of Quincy's successful new Harbor Express water shuttle and the on-going popularity of the Hingham commuter boat, it is not surprising that state transportation planners are looking to build on, and expand this piece of the tranist puzzle.

Scituate's Brian Burke and David Glancy, founders of Scituate's Commuter Express, are hoping their commuter boat venture — which ran on a trial basis during the winter of 1996 — will be included in any expansion of water transportation on the South Shore.

"We're hoping the study will conclude that Scituate is one town beyond the harbor that should have water transportation," Burke said.

Transit Director Astrid Glynn of the Executive Office of Transportation and Consturction said the study, expected to be completed by June 30, will look closely at existing water transportation and commuter boat service, ascertain where best to expand service on both the North and South shores and determine what role the state will play , if any, in building and or operating new facilities. Glynn said the project will also look at providing water transportation service to the Boston Harbor Islands, recently added to the National Park system.

"The study is trying to establish what are the feasible short-term alternatives and what is the best role for the state to play," Glynn said. "We need to determine what are the best ways to invest public dollars and get a good return for the travelling public? Should we make capital investments in docks and boats, or operating investments, or is it better left to the private sector? That's what we're looking at. We need this study to inform the long-term decisions we make."

Because water tranportation service is limited and relatively new, Glynn said the study is an essential tool for expansion.

"We haven't done as much with boats as we have with buses and trains," she said. "We need an educational process."

To better foster communiciation with local communities, Glynn said the department has set up a series of outreach meetings. The first of three meetings was held last night in Gloucester. Another meeting is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. today, May 1, at Fall River's Maritime Museum. The final meeting will take place at 9 a.m. on Friday, May 9, at the state Transporation Building at 10 Park Plaza in Boston.

Alice Boelter of Boelter Associates, the lead contractor undertaking the study, said special attention is being paid to existing ferry service and traditonal or hisoric routes.

Current operators and facilities will be assessed, she said. "By looking at them we'll see what lessons we can learn - good and bad."

Boelter said the Scituate ferry is considered part of the very recent history, and will receive close attention.

Burke and Glancy are counting on that.

After securing support, and a place to dock their boat from Mill Wharf Marina owner Stephen Warner, Burke and Glancy received the selectmen's blessing to press forward to make the experimental ferry a permenant fixture in town.

If approved by the state, Burke envisions running one boat into Boston at about 7:15 a.m.. The evening boat would arrive back in Scituate at about 6:15p.m.. The round-trip fare for the 50-minute trip would probably be $10, Burke said. With an expected ridership of 175 to 200 passengers per day, and with many of them walking to the ferry or getting dropped off, Burke said he doesn't anticipate any problem accommodating the anticipated 125 cars that would be parked in the 300-spot municipal lot on Cole Parkway. Burke acknowledges that the Scituate ferry would be just one piece of the overall transportation picture.

"The train will be a big piece, the zipper (HOV) lane is another. We're talking about taking 200 people to the financial district each day. That's a smaller piece of the picture," Burke said.

With a 70 percent success rate getting in and out of Boston during one of the worst winters on record, Burke is optimistic that year-round service out of Scituate can be brought up to 80 percent.

Burke and Glancy continue to work with Warner on a parking proposal and have been meeting with local boat builders Gladding Hearn of Somerset to discuss different designs, including the mono-hull, which was used during the trial last year, and high speed catamarans. Burke estimates the cost of designing and constructing a commuter boat at about $4 milllion.

Another important issue being evaluated in the state's study is the "worthiness" of propsed services for state subsidies, Boelter said. These subsidies, Boelter explained, don't have to come in the form of fare relief and operating costs, they can be for capital expenses including docking facilities and boats, or for advertising and promotion of service.

Whatever form these subsidies are given, state Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, says he's in favor of them.

A supporter of ferry service as a key part of the "transportation menu" available to South Shore commuters, Hynes said the state should support commuter boat services as it does other modes of public transportation. Because water transportation is a relatively new mode of transit, Hynes said state support is essential to get it afloat.

The May 1 conservation commission meeting seemed like a routine evening of public hearings and discussion. But by the time the meeting ended, several members of the commission lashed out at the MBTA for refusing to pay consultant fees to monitor work in wetlands.

'Do you really think the rail can ever come through Cohasset to our satisfaction?'

— Vee Roebuck, conservation commissioner.

The conservation commission closed a hearing on a request by the MBTA to perform geo-technical borings along the Greenbush line right of way. The commission has 21 days to issue a ruling.

The conservation commission wants the T to pay for a consultant to monitor the work. Commission members said they would draft an order of conditions ordering the T to pay for the consultant. If the T doesn't pay, commission members said they will sue the T.

"The state law clearly says that we have to allow this," said Tom Callahan. "It means

Powwow Planned for Next Week

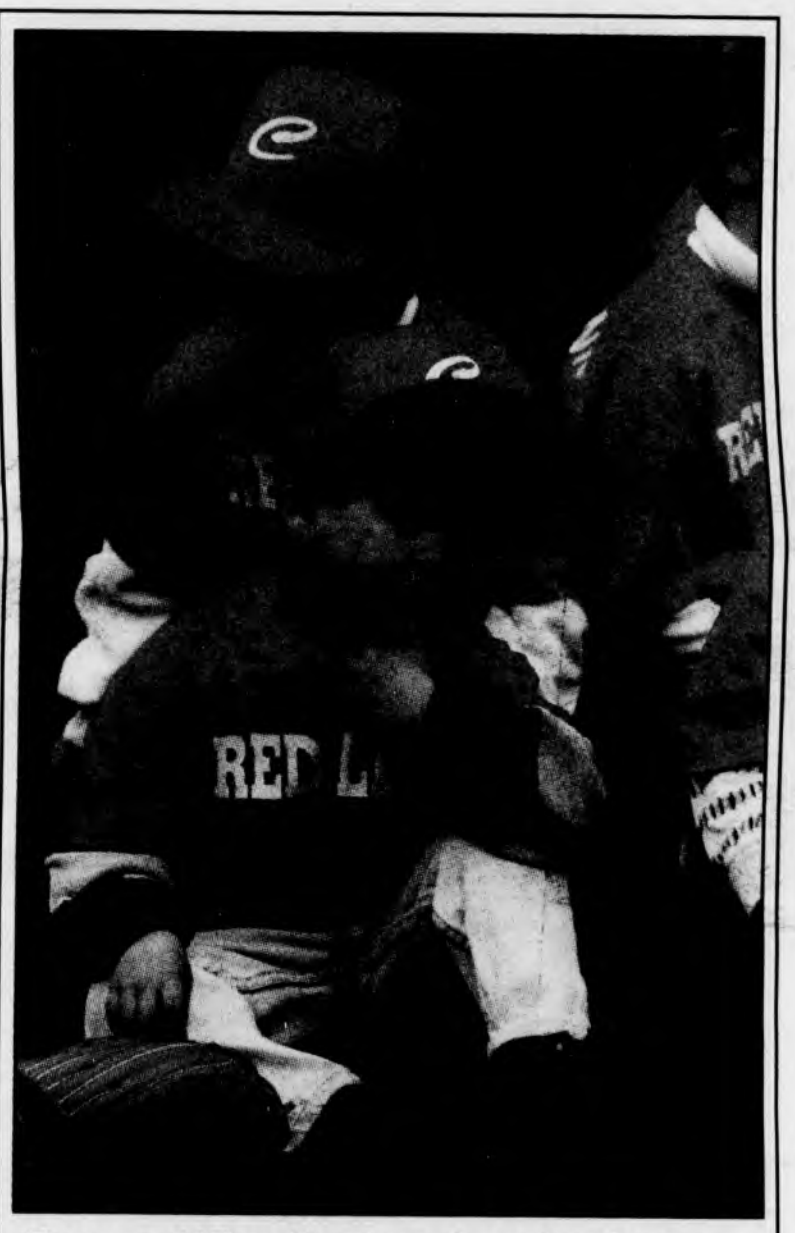
Selectmen aren't sure if they should put the gloves on with MBTA officials at a proposed meeting next week.

But it the majority of the Greenbush Mitigation Committee have its way — selectmen would come out slugging.

Threatening to disband, the mitigation committee told selectmen Monday that the MBTA is unresponsive to Cohasset's requests on a variety of mitigation issues facing the town as the train gears up to make a comeback. See related story page 14.

"We're being had," said member Michael Dick. "Look at the facts as they come in. We're not getting anything of merit. What the T is doing is blowing a lot of smoke."



He said if the town can't mitigate, it should litigate.

Mitigation member Dean Rizzo, the group's chairman, disagreed that the T is the bad guy and tried to persuade selectmen to use reason with state transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes and MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan at the proposed powwow. He said the T has moved on some points and stressed that the process was still in the early stages.

"What's the rush? Why send a bad message when the train is three to four years away?" Rizzo asked.

The main focus of the meeting with state officials — the

Diane Sullivan is Newest Selectman

51 Percent Turnout Saturday

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

There's no doubt that the name Sullivan will get twice as much ink in the coming year.

Newly elected Selectman Diane C. Sullivan took part in her first selectmen's meeting on the other side of the desk Monday night in more than a decade.

Unearthing her nameplate from her prior term in the 1980s, Diane Sullivan joins Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan and their counterparts on the board, Merle Brown, Nan Roth and Ronnie McMorris.

Diane Sullivan has been a regular in the audience at selectmen's meetings for more than a year since funding issues surrounding sewers in her neighborhood of north Cohasset surfaced.

She defeated local talk show host Wigmore Pierson, conservation commissioner Tom Callahan and Alex Koines, a member of Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers, a government watchdog group — for the seat vacated by Peter Pratt, who did not seek reelection.

"I feel pretty darn good, I can tell you that," said Diane Sullivan, a manager at a medical claims service company, after the votes were tallied Saturday night. She did not seek reelection the last time because of a possible move out of state.

Fifty-one percent of the town's 5,256 registered voters cast ballots Saturday.

Chittick, Kirk are Thanked

The school committee said good-bye to fellow board members JoAnne Chittick and Jim Kirk last week and thanked them for their hard work during their three years of service which included getting the new school project approved.

Maureen Jerz, committee vice-chairman, acknowledged the enormous amount of work that Chittick and Kirk put into their tenures of office. Schools Supt. Stephen Hart said they will be missed.

"JoAnne and Jim have been wonderful committee members, I will certainly miss them," Hart said.

Chittick and Kirk thanked committee members for the experience.

"It has been a privilege to work with such smart and committed people," Kirk said.

Chittick and Kirk did not seek reelection.

Cohasset Man Injured in Accident

Christopher W. McKenna, 20, 8 Norman Todd Rd., sustained head injuries Tuesday following a two-vehicle accident on Route 3A near the Hingham rotary.

Hingham Lt. Joseph H. McCracken said McKenna, who was heading east on Rt. 3A, was driving a 1988 Dodge pickup which apparently lost traction as it accelerated up the hill just past the rotary at 2:14 p.m. McCracken said McKenna's truck slid sideways into the westbound lane colliding with the 1992 Chevy truck driven by David Moorhead, 38, 52 Oak Hill Rd., Braintree.

McKenna was transported by MedFlight to Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston where he was listed in good condition Tuesday evening.

Moorhead, who complained of shoulder soreness, was transported by Brewster Ambulance to South Shore Hospital.

There was extensive damage to both vehicles, police said.

Trucker Cited After Accident

Police cited a Wilberto Rosario of Brockton for failure to stop for a stop sign, failure to take care at an intersection and for defective equipment (brakes) following an accident on Pond Street on Monday morning.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said the brakes failed in the truck Rosario was driving as he approached the intersection of Pond and Spring streets where a second truck had stopped.

Noonan said Rosario coul[illegible]n't stop on the sharp hill a[illegible] ended up sandwiched between the other truck and the ledge. The fuel tanks of both trucks were punctured in the mishap.

Clean Harbors was on the scene from about 11 a.m. to 1:45 p.m. cleaning up the spilled fuel, police said.

The trucks, which are not town-owned, were delivering hot top for street resurfacing which is underway.

Noonan said he would ask DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield to see that the trucking companies not to use Pond Street because of the steep hill.

"We've had numerous accidents there," he said.

Elder Affairs Appointments

Selectmen appointed Eugene Price, 85 S. Main St., and Sr. Barbara Reney, of the Villa of St. Joseph at 339 Jerusalem Rd., to the Cohasset Elder Affairs board this week.

They also accepted the resignation of Jack Conroy, 379 Atlantic Ave. from the CEA and will send Conroy a letter thanking him for his service.

Water Company Hosts Open House

Employees from Massachusetts-American Water Company are preparing the first open house for Hingham, Hull and N. Cohasset residents at the new water treatment facility. The event will be held during National Drinking Water Week on Thursday, May 8, 4 to 7 p.m., and Saturday, May 10, 3 to 6 p.m.

"We'd like to see as many of our customers as possible at our open house, including their children," said Eileen Commane, water company operations manager. "We've had a number of people express interest, so we planned this event to give local residents a chance to see where their water is treated and to see this plant they've heard so much about."

The George W. Johnstone Water Treatment Facility is located at 900 Main St. in Hingham, sharing a driveway with the House of Prayer Lutheran Church. Watch for the sign.

'Stamp Out Hunger' Food Drive

The Cohasset Post Office will help "Stamp Out Hunger" this Saturday, May 10, by participating in a food drive which will benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The National Association of Letter Carriers is sponsoring the drive in conjunction with the United States Postal Service.

Along with delivering mail that day, letter carriers will also collect non-perishable food items left for pick-up at residents' mailboxes.

Donations will be brought to the post office and then delivered to the food pantry. Residents are asked not to include any glass or perishable items.

"We're delighted and proud to be associated with the drive and are happy to help out in any way we can," said postal officer in charge Joe Polito.

In advance of the town-wide food collection, the Cohasset Food Pantry has issued a "wish list" of most needed and popular items as guidance for townspeople responding to the postal workers drive.

"We're indebted to the people of the post office for this wonderful effort, and to the people who contribute," Marjorie Steele, chair of the pantry's steering committee, said, "and we thought it would be helpful if they knew what was needed."

Items needed are canned fruits, vegetables and basic soups, spaghetti sauce, peanut butter, jellies, fruit juices both bottled for home use and packs for school lunches, cereals, healthy snacks, canned tuna, laundry detergents, household cleaners and personal products.

The pantry has also announced a change in its operating schedule. Beginning Tuesday, May 13, the pantry will no longer be open during the evening, but has expanded Tuesday morning hours to 9 to 11 a.m.

$3.9 Billion Transportation Bill is Boon for Area

By Alice C. Coyle
COHASSET MARINER

Of the $400 million slated for state road and bridge projects in the 1997 Transportation Bond Bill, nearly $19 million has been earmarked for the South Shore.

After passing in both the House and the Senate, the $3.9 billion bill is currently in conference, said Senator Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth. One of the six members of the conference committee reviewing the legislation, Hedlund said there should be no snags getting the bill through.

While the bulk of the Transportation Bond Bill supports continuing Central Artery commitments, Hedlund named several local projects to be initiated through this authorization including $1.5 million for safety improvements on Elm Street in Braintree, and a $250,000 study of five Route 18 intersections in Weymouth which rank high on the state's 100 most dangerous list. The bill also includes an additional $10 million for an access road to the former Naval Air Station in South Weymouth ($15 million was authorized for this project in last year's Transportation Bond Bill.)

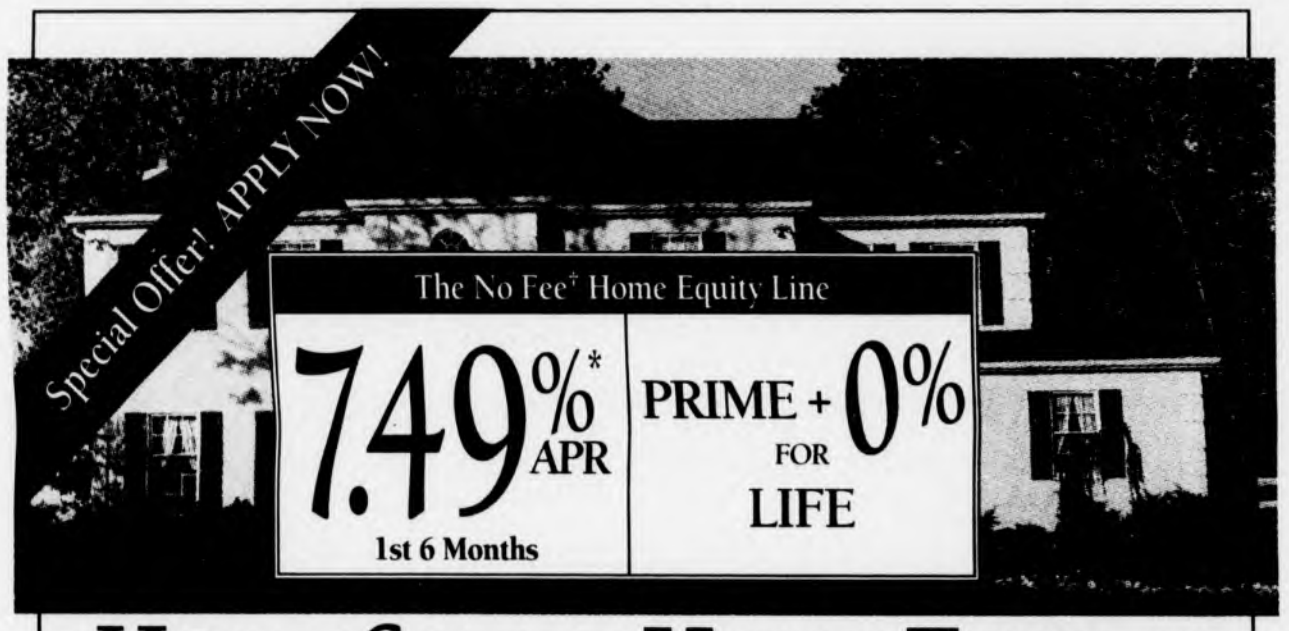
In Hingham, two major road projects will receive state help through the bill. The long planned resurfacing of Route 228 through Hingham into Cohasset has been allotted $2.6 million and another $2.5 million will go toward safety improvements, reconstruction and resurfacing on Route 53 and Route 228 at the Hingham/Norwell line. Hedlund points out that $2 million of the latter project's aid is coming in the form of federal funds.

Another $600,000 in the bill has been earmarked for improvements to Atlantic Avenue from Nantasket Avenue in Hull to the Cohasset town line.

In addition to working toward road and bridge improvements in his district, state Sen. Robert Hedlund has sponsored an amendment to open up additional state funding for local dredging projects.

A $7.5 million revamp of the Route 3A bridge at the Scituate/Marshfield town line is also included in the authorization, Hedlund said. Nearly $2.5 million was authorized for engineering studies and construction of the temporary bridge last year, he noted.

The bill also includes $4 million for Route 3 construction through Duxbury and Kingston.



Communities throughout the South Shore will also get state assistance for improvements to town roadways through chapter 90 reimbursements; Abington–$282,000, Braintree–$813,000, Cohasset $165,000, Duxbury –$370,000, Hanover –$351,000, Hingham –$537,000, Kingston – $291,000, Marshfield –$465,000, Norwell – $334,000, Rockland – $322,000, Scituate – $430,000, and Weymouth –$893,000

In addition to working toward road and bridge improvements in his district, Hedlund has sponsored an amendment to open up additional state funding for local dredging projects.

"We've had problems securing money for harbor dredging," said Hedlund, who noted Hingham's $1.8 million dredging work which began late last fall and will continue after the 1997 boating season wraps up, was the only project funded through the state's capital spending plan this year.

In order to loosen up state funds, Hedlund said he's looking to reapportion the state's gas taxes to go toward dredging projects. Another funding vehicle Hedlund is seeking comes through the state's Public Works Economic Development Program (PWED). In 1996, State Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes gave out $17 million in grants for PWED eligible projects. Hedlund said he is looking to secure some of these grant monies for dredging work in 1997.

"Having dredging on my mind, I asked Secretary Kerasiotes if marine transportation infrastructure programs would qualify under PWED," he said. After getting no quick answer, Hedlund pushed an amendment to change the language in the PWED grant program to include such projects.

And while no money in this year's transportation bond bill has been specifically earmarked for water transportation improvements, Hedlund said he will continue to push for the best use of the $50 million authorized last year for the improvement and expansion of ferry service in his district.

Hedlund said long term goals for the state should be to replicate successful ferry service and water transit in other areas of the country, particularly New York and New Jersey.

In the short term, Hedlund said improvements such as a better commuter waiting and boat docking areas and parking upgrades would enhance the popular commuter boat service out of Hingham. The Massachusetts Ferry Project, a study initiated by the state last month is looking at existing service as well as expanding it in communities like Scituate.

Also relevant to South Shore commuters, the Transportation Bond Bill includes increases by 500 the number of two person vehicles that can use the Expressway's High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV). Currently, motorcycles, buses, vans and vehicles with three or more occupants can use the six-mile zipper lane daily, and 2,000 two-person vehicles with stickers are permitted to use it every other day, Hedlund said. Hedlund maintains that even with the increase the lane will not be used to capacity, and he will continue to push to open the lane to all two-person vehicles daily.

Projects on South Shore to be included In '97 Transportation Bond Bill

- Duxbury and Kingston: $4 million for Route 3 work.
- Braintree: $1.5 million for safety improvements on Elm Street.
- Hingham and Weymouth: $10 million for Route 3 Naval Air Station access road. ($15 million was authorized last year for the project)
- Weymouth: $250,000 to study safety improvements at 5 dangerous intersections on Route 18.
- Marshfield and Scituate: $7.5 million for bridge work on Route 3A at town line.
- Hull $600,000 for reconstruction of Atlantic Avenue from Nantasket Avenue to Cohasset town line.
- Hingham and Cohasset: $2.6 million for resurfacing Route 228.
- Hingham and Norwell: $2.5 million ($2 million from federal government) for work on Route 53 and 228.

Total approved in budget for state is $3.9 billion as compared to 3.2 billion last year. The budget has been approved by the House and Senate and now is in conference.

accountant, were the two top vote-getters in the four-way race for two seats on the school committee. They defeated school bus driver Hugh Morgan and Susan Turgiss, a speech pathologist.

Alluding to last year's divisive battle over the proposed new school, McElroy preached unity Saturday night.

"I look forward to working with all members of the school committee. The priority is to move forward together. Both the school committee and the town as a whole," he said.

Ofsthun echoed McElroy's remarks and reached out to the losers.

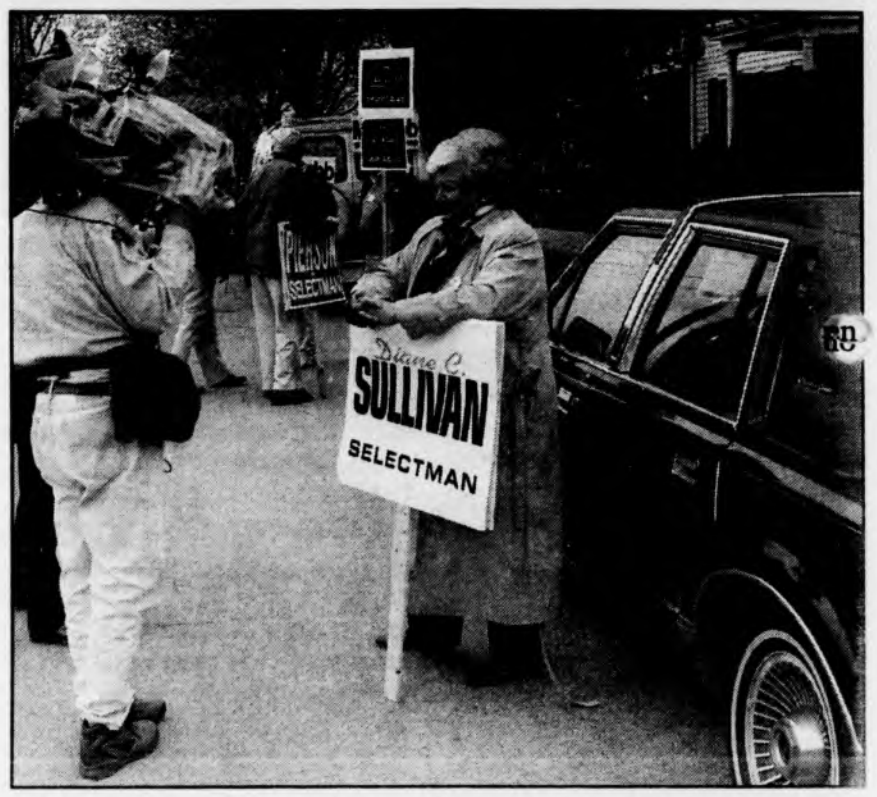
"I hope Susan and Hugh continue their involvement," she said.

John K. McNabb Jr. fended off a challenge from John C. Pereira for an open seat on the water commission. Fred Koed did not seek reelection.

McNabb, an environmental activist who is a former member of the library trustees, said he will stress communication with Cohasset citizens and said he will be responsive to "customer complaints."

David Marks, who received 25 write-in votes, joins Lillian M. Curley and Mary K. Muncey, who ran for seats on the Recreation Commission which had three seats up for grabs. Marks had taken out nomination papers but did not return them. He could not be reached for comment but, according to published reports, is happy to accept the post.

Pierson provided live commentary which was telecast on Channel 3 by Continental Cablevision from 6 p.m. until about 7:30 p.m. when the results were announced. A crowd of about 50 people, including candidates, families and supporters jammed the front of the town hall auditorium anxiously awaiting the results.



With the new optical scanning voting machines used for the first time in Cohasset, officials expected votes to be counted earlier but the write-ins for the recreation commission slowed things down. The wait added to the anticipation.

Pierson, who lost his bid for selectman by 94 votes to Diane Sullivan, had taken a leave of absence from his popular Thursday night talk show "Pierson to Person" to conduct his campaign.

Pierson, who ran unsuccessfully for town treasurer last year against Joe Buckley, said Saturday night he'll be back in front of the cameras in two weeks. He said any thoughts of a future candidacy would have to wait for another day.

"The people have made a collective judgment they want me in the background of local government rather than the foreground. I respect that opinion and decision," he said.

For complete election results, see page 11.

Diane C. Sullivan is interviewed Channel 7 as she campaigns outside the polls on Saturday.

Ten Minutes for Walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes at 8 p.m. on their meeting nights to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda, selectmen said.

Class of '70 Issues a 'Brick' Challenge!

The Class of 1970, CHS, purchased a brick paver for Alumni Field, and hope that other classes and individuals will do the same before the mid-May deadline. How about it, people, accept Marilyn Pratt Morrison's challenge! Let's see how many classes will follow suit! It seems all we have been writing and talking about is reunions lately, tack a few more dollars on to the cost and there you will have it — the money for a paver! Remind everyone that the bricks will last forever, another plus!

Melissa Anne van der Werf-Porter, daughter of Raymond and Karen van der Werf (former residents of Cohasset), has graduated from Brigham Young University with a B.S. in Health Science. Melissa graduated from Cohasset High School in 1994, and she will be teaching in Arizona this fall. Congratulations Melissa, hopefully you will let us know all about life as a teacher in Arizona after you get settled in!

The South Shore Art Center is certainly a busy place now; preparing for the Art Festival on the common is lots of work and preparation! It all begins May 15, that's when they receive entries for juried show and juried photo exhibitions; Friday is also receipt of entries, May 17 is the judging. All work must be original, recent and not previously exhibited at the SSAC or its art festival. All work must be delivered to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd. No work will be accepted for Juried Exhibitions after 4 p.m. May 16; no work will be accepted for members or young artists after 4 p.m. May 31. Paintings must be securely framed and wired, ready for hanging. No clamped glass frames will be accepted. Sculptured and 3D entries must be accompanied by their own pedestal. Young artists' work must be matted and no larger than 18" x 24." To find out more information, call the Art Center at (617) 383-ARTS.

Speaking of great events, another reminder via Maura Ditmar — the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's "Not Your Ordinary" plant sale will be held this Saturday (May 10) at 9 a.m., rain or shine. In case you missed it, it will be held at the Lighthouse Keepers' House (on Border Street, Cohasset Harbor). What a wonderful idea it would be to get your mom a unique plant for Mothers Day, which is the day after the sale! If you are really a "good kid," you can even plant it for her! In any case, don't miss the sale!

Cohasset lost one of its finest men last week, Herm Fichtner passed away Wednesday. Herm was such a gentle person, the nicest man you would want to meet — we can still see the marvelous way he and Jo used to dance together, a sight to behold! A super husband, brother, dad, granddad and friend, Herm will be missed by many and forgotten by few — we loved you Herm, and our hearts go out to Jo and all of Herm's family! God Bless!

Are you doing your spring cleaning yet? With the weather that we have been having, it has probably been delayed due to inclement weather — well, the spring weather is finally here, and we know just the spot for your "used goods!" The Cohasset/Appalachia service project is having their annual yard sale May 17, and they would like your items! Any treasure that you have may be dropped off at the Second Congregational Church any day of the week prior to the sale, May 12 to 16. If anything is too big for you to "lug" yourself, call the church and they will arrange to pick it up. We'll let you know more about the sale next week, but circle the 17th in the meantime!

One more important date to re-remind you of — May 10 is Leo's 75th birthday, and if you haven't already wished him a happy day, be sure to do so!! Happy birthday Leo Fiori, may your day be an awesome one!

Congrats go to Caitlin Stansell of Cohasset fame! Caitlin won the Gold Medal in ski racing — her category was female, age 13-14. The event was the Mountain Dew Vertical Challenge, held at King Pine Ski Area in East Madison, N.H. Keep it up, Caitlin, we see an Olympic future for you!

Thursday, May 15, the Col. Thos. Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) are cordially inviting all interested and potential members of the D.A.R. to a luncheon at Hatherly Country Club. To be a member, one only needs to be related to a person who in any way was involved in the American Revolution. For reservations please call 383-1547 or 383-0025.

Lots of folks are excited about the "new" Buttonwood Books & Toys — it will be the same high-quality unique stock, just in a new local. They are in the new Shaw's Supermarket complex now, with more stores soon to follow. Be sure to pay them a visit, you'll be glad — it is Cohasset's own treasure chest!

That's the news, at least the news that we can talk about, right? Please call me with your event, plans, happenings, whatever …

Health and Healing Fair

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Wednesday, May 21, at 7 p.m., the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset is spearheading a health and healing fair in response to the growing national grassroots movement of self- and natural healing.

The goal of this event is to experience, first-hand, the effect and power of the unique 'alternative' approaches being offered that evening to health and healing. Opportunities will be provided to actually receive a hands-on, personal 'sampling' of each of four therapies.

The therapies and presenters include Debbie Barrett, a Reiki master, who will demonstrate the 'Dream Weaver,' a new technology for stress reduction and transformational healing through a 'vibro-acoustic' mat within a copper 'dodecahedron' frame where special music is heard as well as felt, creating a unified energy field.

Jim and Patricia Berkeley-Watson, essence therapists, involve ancient techniques for focusing spiritual energies. This is commonly referred to as 'mental acupuncture' and 'spiritual chiropractic.'

Dr. Bruce Indek, a Hingham chiropractor, will use chiropractic techniques and manipulation to balance and restore, through universal innate healing energies. Using a specialized computer program, Dr. Indek will also provide a health profile for each participant.

Nancy Dunn, R.N., Cohasset, is a certified nutritional counselor in wholistic health, who will share what's involved in a natural, organic approach to food in support of the immune system and optimum health.

This first annual health fair is free of charge and pre-registration is strongly recommended as space is limited in order to accommodate everyone comfortably between 7 and 9 p.m. Registration should be completed by May 16.

For more information and registration forms, call the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset at 383-0345.

A Thank You Note From Diane Sullivan

I want to express my sincere thanks to everyone who assisted me in my campaign for election to your board of selectmen, and, most especially, to the voters. I feel honored to represent Cohasset and will strive always to be fair, open and honest and to work in the best interests of the whole Town.

Sincerely,
Diane Sullivan

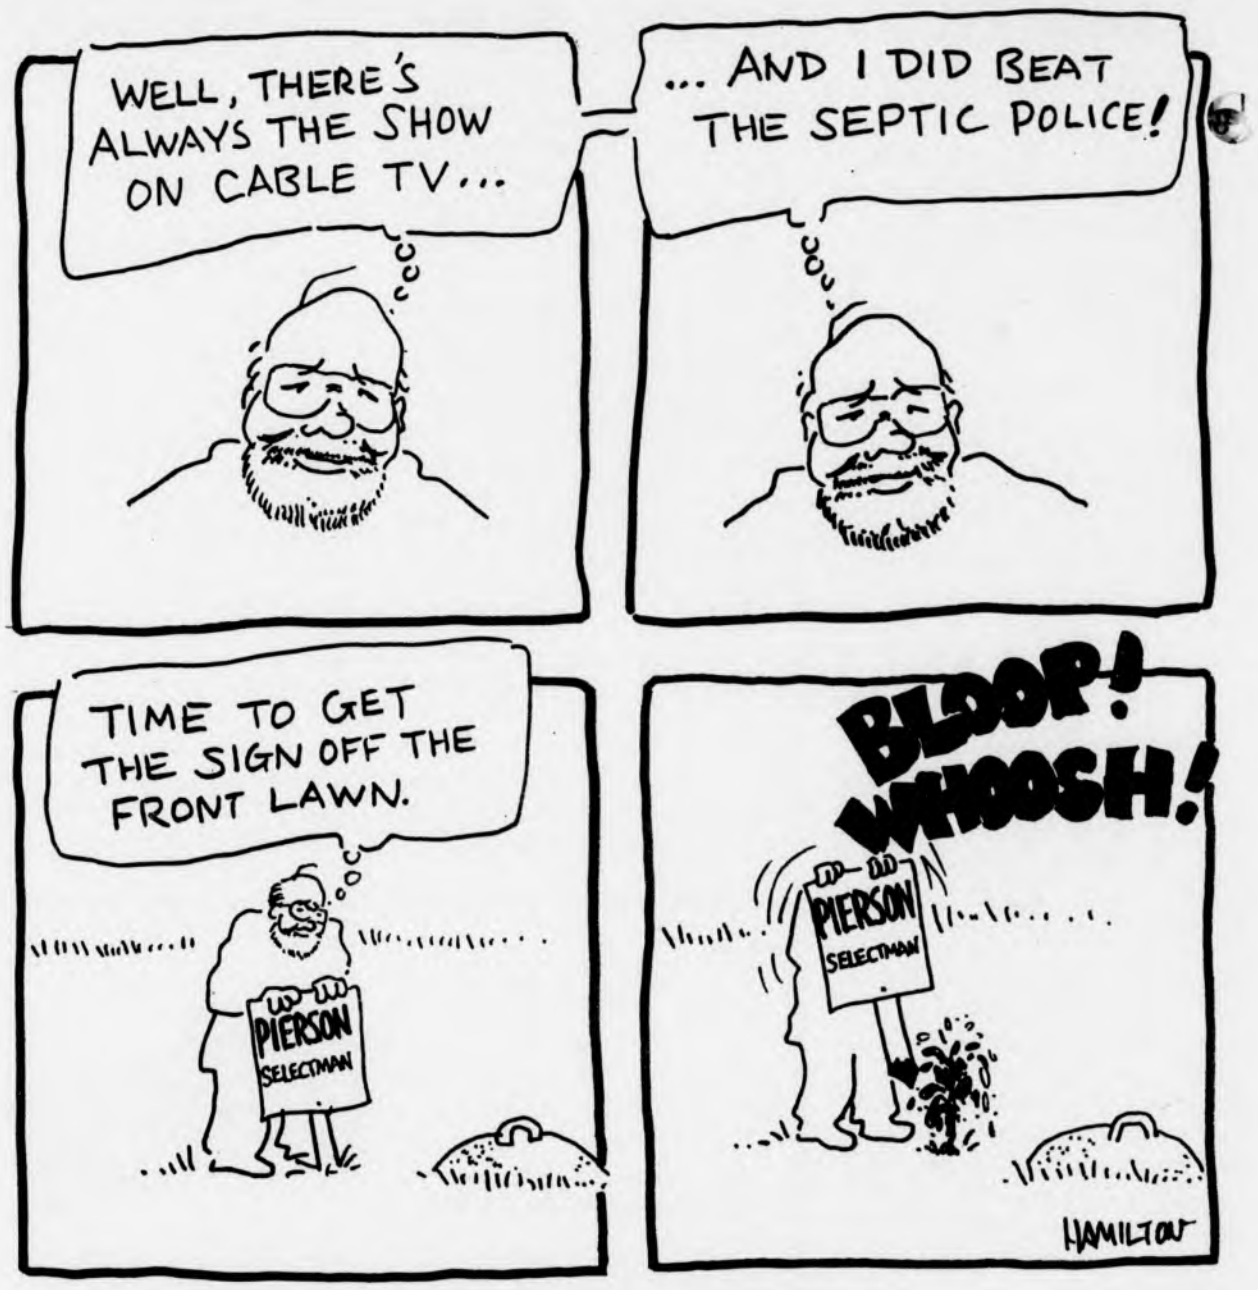
EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Making a Difference

Much has been written in recent days about volunteers. That's all thanks to last month's summit in Philadelphia promoting volunteerism and its ability to move our country forward.

High-powered leaders, such as President Clinton, General Colin Powell and former presidents Carter and Bush, are extolling the virtues of volunteering and how those who serve their communities and country can fill voids where government has been unable to help.

Here in Massachusetts and on the South Shore, we have seen firsthand where that call to action has been answered. Volunteers are being relied on more and more to fill a gap where government falls short. We see it in the jails where people are working to educate prisoners and develop skills to make them better and more productive citizens. We see it at area soup kitchens and homeless shelters where volunteers are busy tending to the needs of those down and out and who feel the government has abandoned them.



Funds are being cut at nearly every level of human service and volunteers are being looked to as a source to meet the need which hasn't gone away, and, in many cases, has only grown. As is tradition in these parts, volunteers are being used as a solution to many of the problems plaguing our society.

Volunteers add a special touch at area hospitals and are often there to lend a hand or shoulder to cry on when people feel lost in the red tape and bureaucracy of the medical profession.

The President's call to serve has been heard and answered here on the South Shore. Those who give unselfishly of their time need to be commended and applauded. They do what they do not because President Clinton hails the need for volunteers. They do it because they see where they can make a small difference in the lives of their families, friends and neighbors.

From this summit and attention cast on it, we hope our communities and corporations recognize their obligation to do more to encourage people to get involved. They need to take the lead from those already volunteering their time and urge leaders and executives to spare an hour or so a week to make a difference. We are fortunate here on the South Shore where people are willing to go the extra mile and do more for their community. But there is more to be accomplished and we need our corporations and businesses to follow suit.

It may seem old fashioned, but as a community we can do more together. We can solve our problems if we can come together and lift each other up.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time to Forge Ahead

To the Editor:

The past town meeting completed favorably business on four notable issues as follows:

• The town manager will save his salary or more in efficiencies. There will be better communication between departments and with officials themselves.

• The Learning Laboratory for biological research on lobsters offers an exciting opportunity for budding biologists.

• The sewer plan satisfies the needs of the town and spreads some of the costs to all, since the state has ordered the town's compliance with the waste water laws.

• The third phase of water service improvement was approved, continuing the program started a few years ago and long overdue.

All these decisions were not without vigorous debate and were not supported by all who voted. However, we should now circle the wagons and abide by town meeting, our legislative branch and the subsequent town election. Cohasset needs to implement these decisions and forge ahead on new issues.

Mixed Feelings About College List

To the Editor:

I read the list of college acceptances for Cohasset High School students with mixed feelings that others may share: pride in the preparation that made them possible, and dismay at multiple options that suggest indecision and "scalp hunting" ... both of which must be trying for guidance counselors and college admission offices.

It is understandable that students want to have a back-up in case their first choice fails them, but it is difficult for me to understand acceptances at six and seven colleges, some quite different and some quite similar. And there is the likelihood that applications had been made at several more.

For a period in the past, I interviewed applicants and was a little annoyed by an instance when a multiple application ruled out the possible selection of another good candidate ... considering the practical factor that a college would not likely admit several from a small high school. I thought then, and still believe, that parents' and students' goal of showing off a lot of acceptances plays into the picture.

McElroy Says Thanks

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly thank my hard-working Campaign Committee and the many voters who helped elect me, but I also want to reassure every single resident of Cohasset that I will do my best to capably and fairly represent the best interests of all Cohasset residents and particularly our youth. I will need your help, suggestions and constructive criticism as I work with my fellow committee members to represent you. Inspiring Speech Highlights Little League Opening Day

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Saturday, May 3, a day shared with town elections and voters, the opening day of Little League was held in Cohasset.

Beneath gray skies and cool temperatures, early morning voices were loud with excitement as officials and participants organized baseball teams that were dressed in brightly-colored new uniforms into parade formation behind the town's firetruck and the Deer Hill School marching band, led by Mr. Biaggini, the band leader.

The parade began at the Red Lion Inn and proceeded to Barnes Field on North Main Street. Perched atop the immaculately-kept firetruck, the 1996 Little League championship team, the Dodgers, waved to the cheering baseball fans that lined the parade route.

At Barnes Field, the opening day ceremonies commenced, beginning with the Star Spangled Banner performed competently by the Deer Hill School band.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was on hand to throw the ceremonial first pitch.

The Dodgers team players were called up one by one to receive their championship trophies from their coaches.

The highlight of the morning's ceremony, however, was the remarkably inspiring speech delivered by Mark DeGiacomo, a member of the Little League's board of directors and player agent. Despite a faulty public address system, DeGiacomo was able to transcend the listening crowd that day with a speech that reminded us, not only as Little League players, participants, and parents, but also as citizens of Cohasset and the world, what we are truly capable of and what is important to teach our children: loyalty, courage and character.

For those who were straining their ears that morning to hear DeGiacomo and for those who were not there, but manning the polls, the speech was as follows:

'I would like to welcome everyone to Barnes Field for our celebration of the arrival of spring, the great game of baseball, and most of all, a celebration of our children.

I especially want to welcome the parents and guests who live in our town. I know it is difficult to take time out of your busy schedule, given the fact that you live in a town that was described in one recent newspaper article as an 'affluent seaside community of million dollar homes that have perfectly manicured lawns in front, tennis courts and swimming pools in the back and are occupied by high-powered executives who wear $1,000 suits.

I'm starting my second season as a member of the Little League board of directors. I can tell you that I am very proud of our program and what we have accomplished for the children of Cohasset. Although nothing is perfect and you can't make everyone happy all of the time, I believe that all the people involved with the program in this town work very hard to achieve the true purpose of Little League.

When I first started with the board, I had a problem. I didn't know what the true purpose of Little League was. I had some ideas, but I didn't know for sure. But, it seemed important to figure it out, because I knew I'd be dealing with some difficult questions which involved children, and if I understood the underlying purpose of Little League, then perhaps the answers to these questions might be clearer.

I started by considering stories I had read in the newspapers or saw on television about Little League organizations around the country. This was disheartening. For instance:

The way Little League is run in some towns makes one think that one of its purposes is to teach children that winning is the only thing, and that having fun and learning about a great game that has spanned generations doesn't matter. If you're on the losing team, you are a loser.

I checked the Little League book to see if that purpose was there. It wasn't.

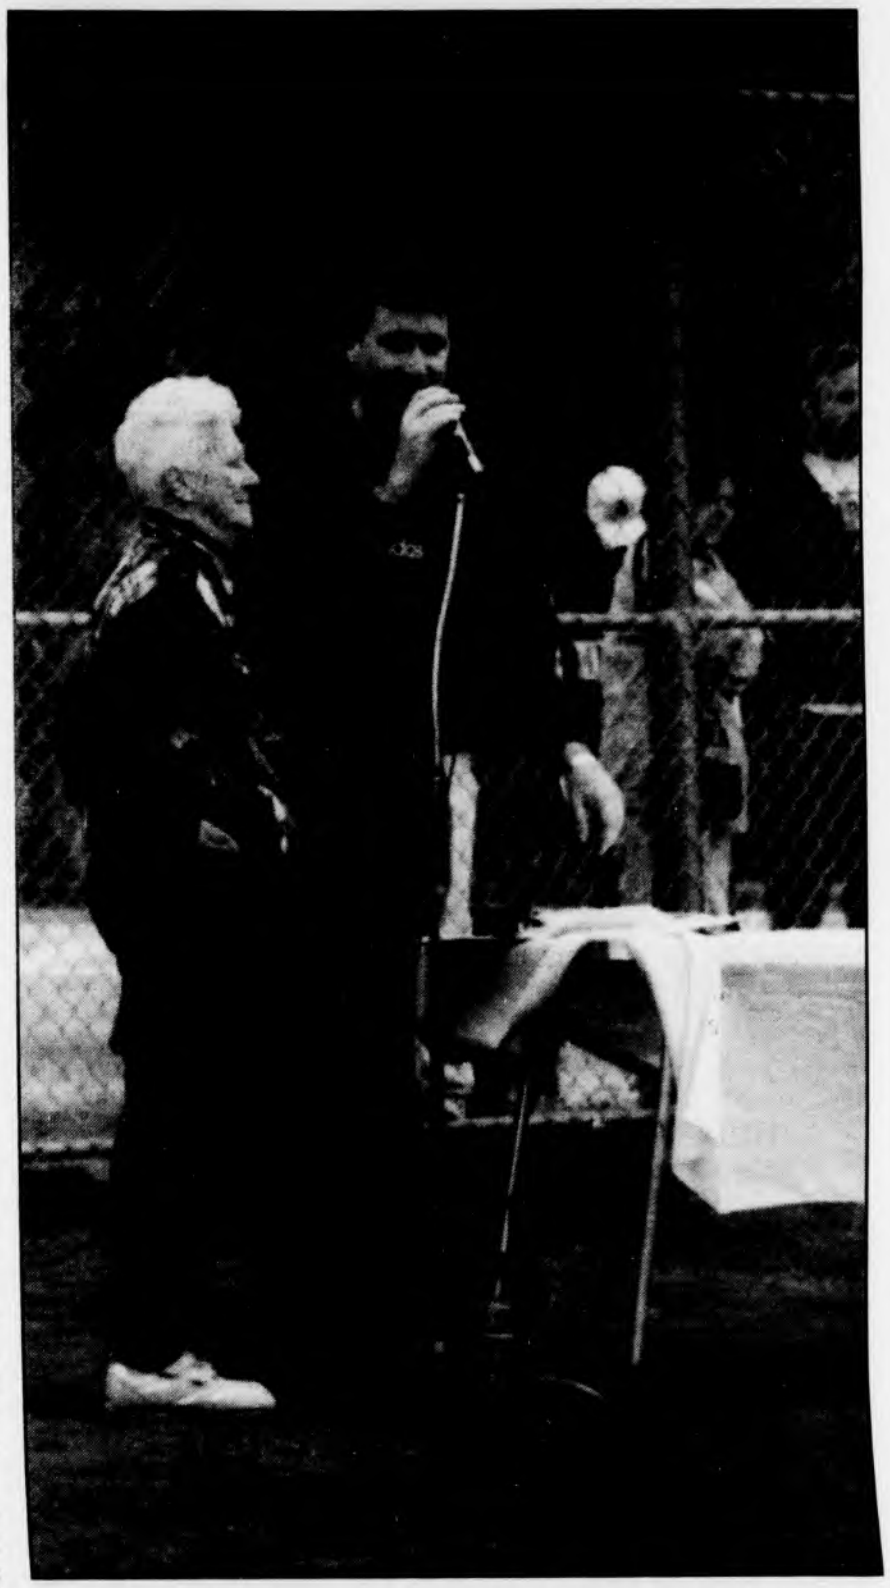
Another false purpose of Little League, as practiced in some towns, is to give middle-aged men with little pot bellies an opportunity to relive their glory days, real or imagined, through their children's games. Well, I looked that one up too, and you know what? It wasn't there.

It is sad, again in some towns, that Little League baseball is mistakenly taught to 10-year-old children that if they do not make it to a major league team, then they are not as good a person as their friends who do, that, somehow, that 10-year-old is a failure. Well, I didn't have to look that one up. I know that's not in the Little League book.

What is in there is very simple. The purpose of Little League is spelled out right on our emblem. It is to teach loyalty, courage and character. While all three are lofty goals, I will submit to you that there is a first among equals, and that is character.

It was in 1963 that Martin Luther King taught that the true measure of a person is 'the content of their character.' I believe that 20 years from now, what we will really admire about our children won't be the size of their home, the kind of car they drive, or which country club they belong to. What we will admire is the kind of person they have become — the content of their character.

Little League can help build character by teaching children things such as not arguing with the umpire every time a call doesn't go their way. Everyone makes mistakes and no matter how positive you are that you are right, you may be wrong.



Don't gloat over a victory with the players on the other team because making other people feel bad should never make you feel good.

Every dog has its day. No one wins all the time. Don't walk away from a friend because he or she has had a bad game. Friends stick together through good times and bad.

Twenty years from now, we, as parents, can rightly take a great deal of credit for the character of our children. We, as parents, should also acknowledge the contributions of others along the way, be it a relative, a family friend, a priest, minister or rabbi, or special teachers.

If we, as directors and coaches, continue to guide ourselves by the true purposes of Little League, then 20 years from now, as we admire the character of the child who has grown to become an adult, we may reflect back to a day like today, on this field, and think that maybe, in some small way, Little League helped.'

As the crowd dispersed that morning and preparations were underway to begin the first ballgame of the day, a thought that prevailed throughout and expressed in quiet murmurs to each other was, 'So where is Fox cable now?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pierson Grateful for Support

To the Editor:

To the 691 citizens who expressed their confidence in me with their votes last Saturday, my heartfelt thanks.

To the many persons who chose to publicly endorse my candidacy, you have my very special thanks for your courageous support.

And a very special thanks to the following dear friends who worked so hard and put in so many hours on my behalf: Doris and Jack Golden, Rich Silvia, Rhonda Myers, Ken Jason, Jill O'Donnell, Herb Jason, Bob Julien and John Small.

To quote Abraham Lincoln on a boy who stubbed his toe, I'm "too big to cry and far too badly hurt to laugh."

I extend my sincerest congratulations and best wishes to Diane Sullivan as she begins her tenure on the board of selectmen.

Wigmore A. Pierson
Atlantic Avenue

Candidate Turgiss Praised

To the Editor:

It was my distinct pleasure to work with Susan Turgiss and the many people who helped with her campaign for school committee. My congratulations to Kathy Ofsthun and Joe McElroy.

I want to thank Susan for conducting her campaign with integrity and commitment. She handled a major part of her campaign, while working full-time. Her knowledge about education as well as her common sense assessments enhanced our understanding in many ways. Her sense of humor as well as her respectful attitude also went a long way in making the process enjoyable.

Susan's thorough, honest and clear way of answering questions and defining the issues made it easy for all of us who worked with her to encourage support on her behalf. We would do so again.

I hope that at some point the town as a whole will experience and benefit from her expertise and concern for education.

McNabb Appreciates Support

To the Editor:

I want to sincerely thank all of the people who helped me in my successful campaign for Water Commissioner. Thanks go to all those who made phone calls on Election Day, put up lawn signs, helped with mailings, held coffees and contributed to the campaign.

I also want to thank the people of the town of Cohasset for this opportunity to serve them as Water Commissioner. I intent to work hard to continue the work of the commission to rebuilt our water distribution system, to improve water pressure and water quality, to protect the watershed of our water supplies, to study the feasibility of taking the North Cohasset water service area by eminent domain, and to serve the entire town responsibly as a Water Commissioner for the next three years.

Committee Split on MBTA's Mitigation Plan

Group Threatens to Disband

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset's mitigation committee is split over the MBTA's response to requests to mitigate specific impacts of the Greenbush Line on the town. The mitigation committee voted 3-1 on Thursday, May 1 to disband with Chairman Dean Rizzo casting the dissenting vote.

Selectmen rejected the request on Monday, May 5 with a promise to help the committee find a new focus.

Mitigation committee members Marty Corry, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and conservation commission member Michael Dick felt the MBTA was not serious about mitigation measures.

"We voted to let selectmen know that the mitigation process is over," Dick told conservation commission members on Thursday. "There is nothing more we can do. The MBTA has rejected all of our points out of hand. They give you a rosy picture, but when push comes to shove, it's all smoke."

Dick was referring to discussions with the MBTA and a letter from Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for the "T", which rejected many of the town's mitigation requests.

But Rizzo said the T did agree to some of the town's requests, even though it didn't agree to mitigate everything. Rizzo said many of the points rejected in Brennan's letter also contain offers to work with the town on alternative measures.

"There is a difference of opinion on the committee," Rizzo said. "I feel that they've responded to most items even though they haven't given us everything we wanted."

Rizzo pointed to a scheduled meeting between the town, MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan, and Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes to discuss the impact to the James Brook Basin, and other environmental issues.

"I think this is premature and we should reserve all judgments until we meet with them," Rizzo said.

In his letter, Brennan rejected many major points, beginning with a traffic light at the entrance to the station on Route 3A. Brennan said the driveway out of the station did not meet the Massachusetts Highway Department's minimum traffic standards for a signal. Brennan said he would make a formal request to Mass, Highway on the town's behalf, but felt it had little chance of being approved.

Brennan rejected requests for traffic lights at three additional intersections on Route 3A because the MBTA expects the Greenbush line to decrease traffic on the road.

Brennan said the T will build a drop-off ramp at North Main Street because it has a directive from Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe to maximize station access for pedestrians and bicycles. Town officials wanted to eliminate the drop-off so one main street in town would remain clear during peak travel hours.

Brennan said the drop-off would be modified to preserve a newly discovered vernal pool in an adjacent area. He also offered to eliminate a street modification plan at the town's request.

The MBTA will realign the entrance on Route 3A to make drop-offs and pick-ups easier. The T also agreed to plant evergreen trees, which grow to a mature height of 15-25 feet, between the station and the cemetery.

Brennan said the T would not provide a second road for emergency access at Rocky Lane in the "unlikely event" that a train stalled on the grade crossing during a fire, police or medical emergency. He said the T was interested in a plan to provide alternate access through t he proposed Rose Hill subdivision, but the proponent of that project would have to pay for most of the road improvements.

Brennan offered to continue discussions on the MBTA's desire to close grade crossings at three private streets off South Main and provide alternate access. The T wants to close the crossings to prevent the train engineer from blowing the whistle, but the town wants the lanes open.

The T will meet with town officials this week to discuss cost-sharing the $1.5 million flood-control project for the James Brook basin. Town officials believe the Greenbush line will exacerbate flooding, but Brennan said the existing rail bed is not the source of flooding and restored service will not add to the problem.

In the Village, the T has agreed to keep train service on the existing right of way.

The T will replace only 20 spaces lost at Target Industries' parking lot, and will re-stripe the municipal lot to preserve the current number of spots. The T will not tear down the old public works building for more parking now that the Village Station is no longer an option.

Brennan said the T's vibration studies show that the train will not affect fragile or older buildings in the Village.

The T has refused to relocate the Strawberry Parfait restaurant. Brennan said the business would still have access to Pleasant Street and the trains would not affect the building's use as a restaurant. Brennan said the issue was legal as well as environmental and should be referred to the T's real estate division.

Brennan said it is the T's position that there are no extraordinary wetlands impacts in Cohasset. he said the T would work closely with the conservation commission. The T is exempt from local bylaws, although it must abide by the Wetlands Protection Act, Brennan added.

The T will also offered to provide information about rail bed pollutants, and to leave in town possession a strip of land on one side of the right of way for a walking or bicycle path.

Brennan said he would examine the impact the train would have on well fields, and would also discuss the issue with the Department of Environmental Protection.

Train

details of which had not been finalized Monday night — is to ask the T to pay for a substantial amount of the $1.5 M James Brook flood control project. The train right-of-way runs through the James Brook basin.

Problems with the T range from the town being told that the North Main Street drop off must stay when the town wants it to go — to no commitment for a Route 3A station traffic light, which the town wants.

After considerable discussion, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan recommended a less confrontational approach at the upcoming meeting. He said a "contentious situation" with T officials would not be in the best interest of the town at this point.

The board did not accept the mitigation committee's vote to disband but agreed the committee needs a new charge to take it beyond mitigation issues. They will decide on the new direction at a later date.

The mitigation committee and selectmen agreed that a professional "point person" to deal with the T might be needed. It's not clear at this point how much hiring a consultant would cost.

Mitigation member Marty Corry said the town needs someone to take the work the mitigation committee has done and use political and legal means to get some satisfaction from the T.

The mitigation committee will talk to officials in other Old Colony Railroad towns, such as Abington, to find out what kind of problems they faced.

Boring Not a Dull Topic

we will issue the permit, draft our conditions, let them do the work, bill them for our consultant, and sue them when they don't pay."

Robert Egan, project manager for the T, said it was the MBTA's policy not to pay for consultants.

"We just don't have the funds to pay for everything," Egan said.

Egan advised the town to send a letter to MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan asking for special consideration.

Egan also urged the commission to approve the permit so boring work could begin immediately. He reminded commission members that the T was not bound by local bylaws.

"We have contacted individuals on whose property we will be working and we have legislation in place permitting the work," Egan said. "We are just telling you where we are going to work."

Meredith L. Avery, an environmental scientist for the T's engineer, Sverdrup Civil, Inc., said 42 holes must be drilled along the right of way to analyze ground conditions and stability for the track.

Conservation commission members were also angry that a boring drill turned out to be much larger than Avery had previously indicated.

At a previous conservation commission meeting, Avery told members that the drill would be a small, detachable unit transported to the site on a pick-up truck.

Last week, Avery produced a photo of the actual vehicle that will be used: a 10-foot wide, over-sized pick-up truck with a drill permanently mounted on the bed.

Michael Dick pointed out that a 10-foot-wide truck was a significant departure from a small, detachable drill.

But Avery countered that the truck was consistent with Sverdrup's report on how the work would be done.

"You've also given testimony here in which you described a smaller rig," Dick said. "That testimony is also part of the official record."

Avery said the truck would require a 10-foot-wide path through environmentally sensitive areas. She pledged to perform all required mitigation work in sensitive areas.

Avery said Sverdrup would hold off on boring work until a biologist finished a vernal pool survey along the right of way.

Dick said the conservation commission's position on the consultant would send a strong message to the T.

"Now is the time to lay the groundwork to preserve the rights of the town wherever we can," Dick said. "We're here to preserve the towns bylaws and I want to do that."

Conservation commission chairman Vee Roebuck felt the town should save its resources for major battles in the future.

"We are talking as if we can stop the Greenbush line in our small town," Roebuck said. "Do you really think the rail can ever come through Cohasset to our satisfaction?"

Dick said he felt the town's position was strong because the T was clearly ignoring Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe's directive in the draft EIR that it compromise with towns wherever reasonable and possible.

$10M Override for Sewers Okayed

If it could have passed by "willing" it alone, Maria Plante of Jerusalem Road did her share Saturday for the 50/50 shared sewer funding plan.

Plante — watching, lobbying and persuading whenever she could — "worked" the election from 8 a.m. until nearly 7:30 p.m. when the good news was announced to boisterous cheers and gasps of relief from proponents.

The $10 million sewer override by the narrow margin of 56 votes. Half of the $20 million project, which will install sewers in north and central Cohasset, will be subsidized through the tax base. Property owners will pay 55cents more annually per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Through the debt exclusion override, taxes to pay for the sewer will increase during the life of the bond issue. An override was necessary because the cost of the project could not be absorbed within the 2-1/2 percent mandatory tax cap.

Last year, an override for 50/50 shared funding for the north Cohasset project failed by 67 votes. Proponents hoped that joining north and central Cohasset into one override would provide enough votes to pass the override.

Plante was back as usual in the audience at the selectmen's meeting Monday night to thank the board and townspeople for their support of the shared funding through the override. Her north Cohasset neighbor and fellow activist, Diane C. Sullivan, as the town's newest selectman was on the other side of the desk. For complete election results, see page 11.

CHL Will Clean Swale, Owner Paul Barry Says

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Paul Barry, owner of Cohasset Heights Landfill, has agreed to clean siltation from a swale located on Trustees of Reservations property.

Conservation consultant Paul Shea said the work wouldn't begin before June 15 because the ground is too wet in the spring. Barry also agreed to extend clean up work farther into the area around the swale to remove phragmites — large, invasive weeds that are frequently evidence of environmental distress — only if it was a viable option.

The Department of Environmental Protection has directed CHL to remove siltation from the swale. The siltation has altered the depth of the swale, producing a shallower body of water.

Barry said the asphalt run-off came from an access road located on his landfill. The edge of the road deteriorated and migrated into the swale, filling it with siltation.

Conservation commission member Tom Callahan was pleased to have an agreement to clean up the swale, but he complained that there was much more to be done.

"I would like to see you expand this work to include all of area C in the surrounding area," Callahan said. "If cleaning the stream bed is something you can do in the short run, by all means, do it. It satisfies the state issue but we have other issues. My recollection is we were going to revisit all area C as part of the consent order"

Callahan was annoyed that CHL had not yet produced an agreement for judgment that would end a wetlands dispute in court for area D, although he said he heard the agreement had been signed.

Barry said he was reviewing the agreement for judgment with his lawyer, Anton Moehrke, to make sure all points in the document were acceptable.

Callahan said CHL agreed last year under the terms of an administrative consent order to repair area D. CHL never did the work and the town had to sue Barry in Norfolk District Court to enforce the order.

Now CHL is prepared to sign an agreement for judgment in the town's favor that would order the clean up of area D

Callahan said the agreement for judgment would have to be modified to include the clean-up work in the swale. He also felt the agreement should be modified to remove phragmites in area C.

Barry said he would remove the phragmites only if the conditions were right.

"We want to remove the sedimentation and contamination as DEP has requested," Barry said. "But if we have to go 100 yards into the wetlands to clean the swale and the phragmites are 300 yards in, do we want to disturb 200 yards of untouched land?"

Barry said he also has a consultant's report that shows the phragmites are shrinking.

"Why disturb 200 yards of land if the phragmites are shrinking?" Barry asked.

Callahan scoffed at the assertion that the phragmites were shrinking.

"Shrinking phragmites is highly implausible," Callahan said. "But we're going to have to go in there at some point and we might as well take care of this."

Barry said he would use a Bobcat to cut a path from his property into the wooded area around the swale. Workers would remove the siltation with hand tools, and remove it from the wetlands with a conveyor belt.

Shea said the work was a good idea and would probably restore the swale to its original depth.

Barry complained that the state was singling him out for polluting the swale with a common construction material, asphalt.

"I wonder, if you examined all the storm drains on Route 3A, a state road, I bet you would find this same type of asphalt runoff," Barry said.

Cohasset Pre-Schoolers Trike for Safety

Event Raised Money to Fight Childhood Cancer

Preschoolers from the South Shore Community Center Nursery School (SSCCNS) in Cohasset donned their tricycle helmets recently and set off to raise money for Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital. The Trike-A-Thon culminated a week-long educational program conducted by pre-school teacher Marianne Smith to encourage safe riding behavior among children and to raise money to fight childhood cancer.

Accidents on bicycles, tricycles and other riding toys are a leading cause of death and injury of young children, according to Smith, who conducted safety lessons through storytelling and coloring projects. Some of the assignments were done by students at home, where parents were also reminded of the importance of safe bicycle instruction. Students then relayed this important information to other students in the nursery school through special presentations.

'We thought this was a timely project for students, who would learn the safety rules of the road while helping those less fortunate.'
— Lynne Sheridan, nursery school director.

A final exam included a morning Trike-A-Thon, where children put into practice the lessons they learned while riding along a supervised course set up by school officials and parents. The simulated course included road signs as well as common hazards children encounter, from curbs and driveways to loose pets and bouncing balls.

"As summer approaches more children will begin to learn or continue to perfect their riding skills," said SSCCNS director Lynne Sheridan.

"We thought this was a timely project for students, who would learn the safety rules of the road while helping those less fortunate," she said.

St. Jude Hospital is a leading center for the study of childhood cancer which, next to accidents, is the leading killer of children. Patients are treated regardless of the family's ability to pay.

For more information about bike safety or to learn more about the SSCCNS, call Lynne Sheridan at (617) 383-0036.

'Let's Play Ball'

Opening Day Kicks Off Little League Season

COHASSET MARINER

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was scheduled to be out of town last weekend, but there was one annual event she just couldn't miss. She had to be on the pitcher's mound of Harold F. Barnes Field to throw out the first ball, kicking off the Cohasset Little League season.

"I couldn't go," she said of her scheduled trip. "This is where I belong.

"We're here to have fun and learn the fundamentals of baseball."

Jeanette Murray wound up and threw a strike to catcher Brian Lewis. "If it's okay with you," she asked the crowd of players, parents and relatives, "let's play ball."

With those words, a cheer rose from the more than 200 budding baseball players at Harold F. Barnes Field on Saturday morning.

Despite the windy, chilly conditions, there was an excitement in the air as the players, dressed in clean, slick uniforms, gathered on and around the neatly cropped infield grass. Members of 1996 champion Dodgers squad were awarded trophies for their sterling season and drew a huge applause from the crowd.

The American and Cohasset Little League flags rippled fiercely in the wind, which was blowing in from center field. The long ball would not be a factor on this day. Banners draped the outfield and first-base line fences.

Opening day got off without a hitch at 8:30 a.m. as the annual parade made its way from Cohasset Village down Main Street to the field.

Mark DeGiacomo, a member of the league's board of directors, gave a refreshing speech, explaining the philosophy and purpose of Little League baseball in Cohasset.

"The purpose of Little League is spelled right out in our emblem," he said. "It is to teach loyalty, courage and character. While all three are lofty goals, I will submit to you that there is a first among equals, and that is character."

As the rematch of last year's championship game between the Dodgers and A's grew close, the electronic scoreboard in right field was turned on.

Considering it was the first time this year the scoreboard was lit up, one may think it would draw notice. But it didn't. The players were too busy taking infield practice and trying to loosen their arms in the chilly, opening day air. There was a game to be played, the first of the season.

Batmen Falling Short of Tourney

By Jim O'Sullivan
COHASSET MARINER

The Cohasset High baseball team limped to the halfway mark of their season with a 4-6 record after two tough losses to Norwell and East Bridgewater. With a patchwork pitching staff and a lineup that has yet to catch fire at the plate, the squad needs to win six of its next 10 to earn a berth in the tourney, to say nothing of winning a higher seed and, possibly, home-field advantage.

Over April vacation, Cohasset squared off against South Shore Vo-Tech, winning both games handily behind the strong pitching of Joe Pergola and Joe Magner. The two Vo-Tech victories brought the Skippers to the .500 mark at 4-4 and left them with 12 games left and six wins needed to make the tourney. A week and a half later and Cohasset still needs those six victories.

Last Monday afternoon, the team traveled to Norwell to face the Clippers. The teams had met earlier in the season, with the Skippers winning. This time, however, they wouldn't be so lucky, despite a pair of RBI doubles by sophomore third baseman Al Schwerin. Pergola again took the hill, and pitched well enough to win. He took a perfect game into the fourth inning and a no-hitter into the fifth. But suspect fielding and scratch hits allowed Norwell to scrape two runs together and tie the game in the seventh. Two innings later, with the Skippers' bats dozing peacefully, the Clippers pushed across the winning run.

Also last week, Cohasset fell to East Bridgewater, 7-4, in another game which they could have won. Again, the boys in blue could not string together seven solid innings and folded under the pressure. With 10 games remaining, they need six wins.

Things would go from bad to worse on Sunday afternoon. The Carver Crusaders paid a visit to the South Shore and emerged with a victory, triumphing 8-3 over a lifeless Skipper squad. Cohasset had several defensive lapses early and their bats didn't get cracking until the sixth inning. Greg Taylor racked up an RBI, as did Bob Buckley, but Cohasset couldn't muster enough offense and dropped its third game in a row.

Monday's contest against Norton was no better. The Skippers were thrashed by an unprintably obscene score and embarrassed by the Lancers. Despite two hits apiece from Pat Hurley and Kevin McKenna, the visiting team was only able to collect three runs in a losing cause.

Now, the Cohasset Skippers find themselves in dire straits. With eight games to go, six games are needed to earn them a tourney berth. If they aspire to winning a higher seed, then all eight of those games would certainly help.

Soccer Jamboree to Feature Revolution Star

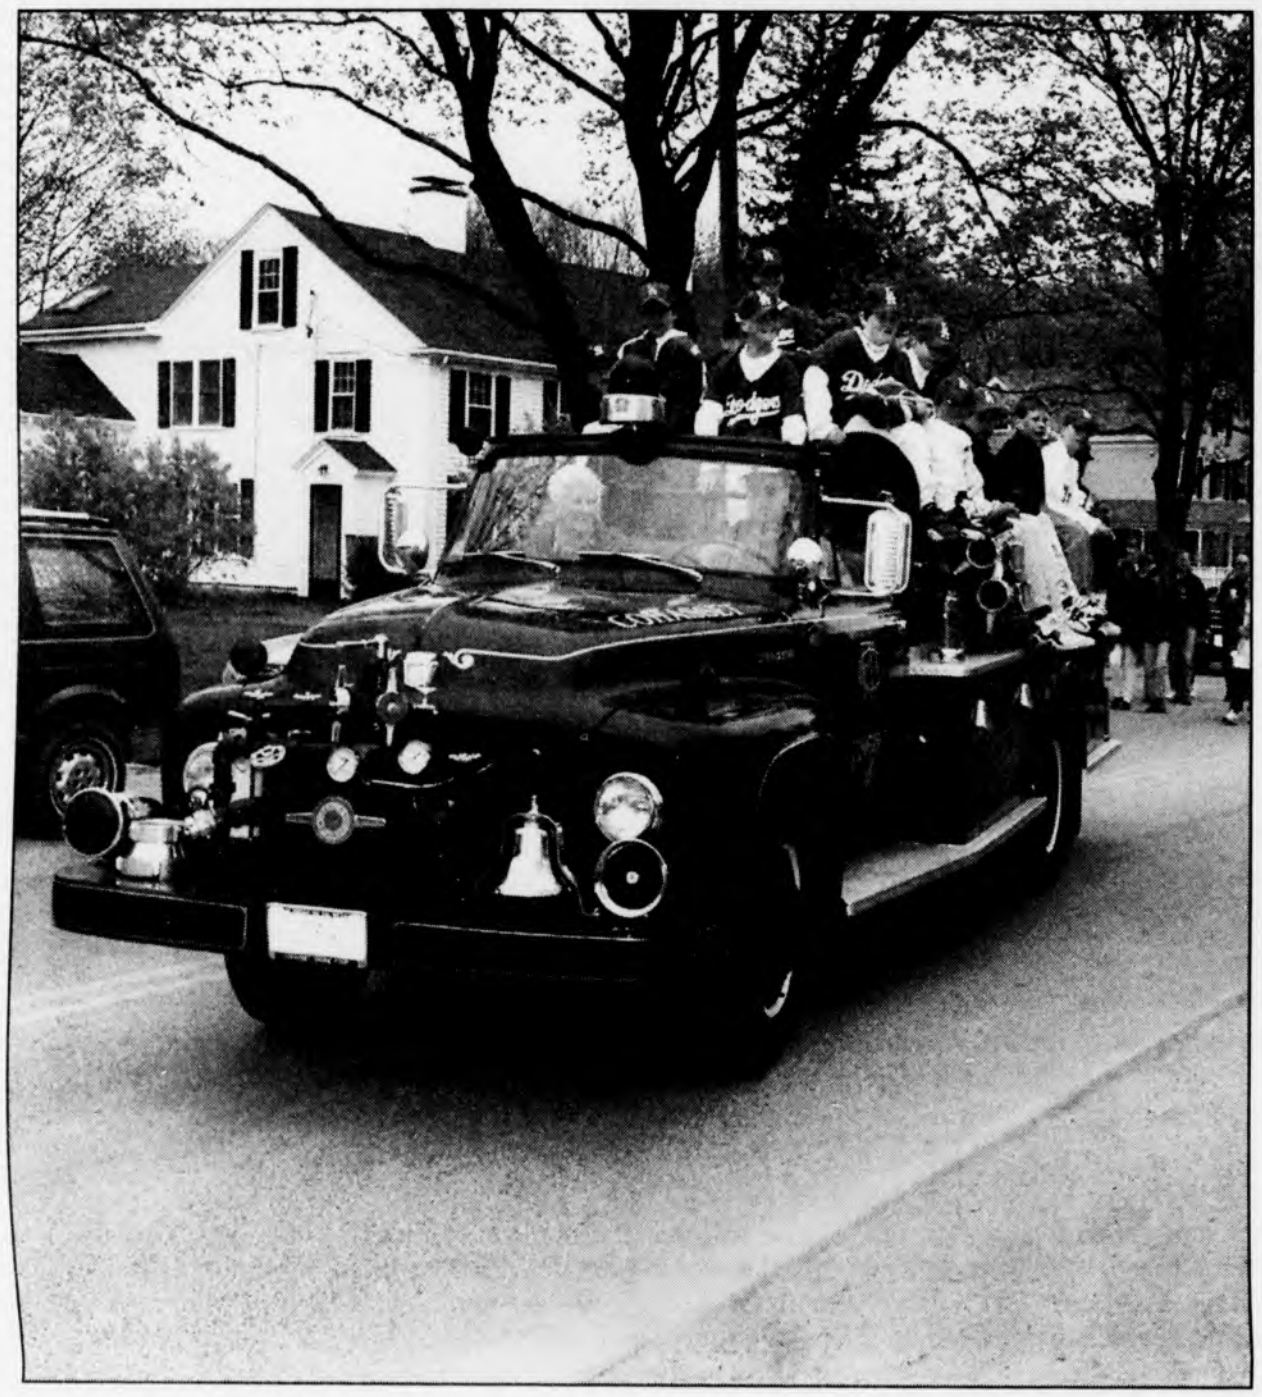
By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

The sport is still struggling to find its niche with the American television audience, but among the kids who spend their weekends playing soccer, it can't be beat.

Need proof? Head up to Milliken Field on Saturday morning for the fifth annual Scituate/Cohasset Spring Soccer Jamboree. Organized by the Cohasset Soccer Club, the event includes more than 200 boys and girls under-10 teams from both towns.

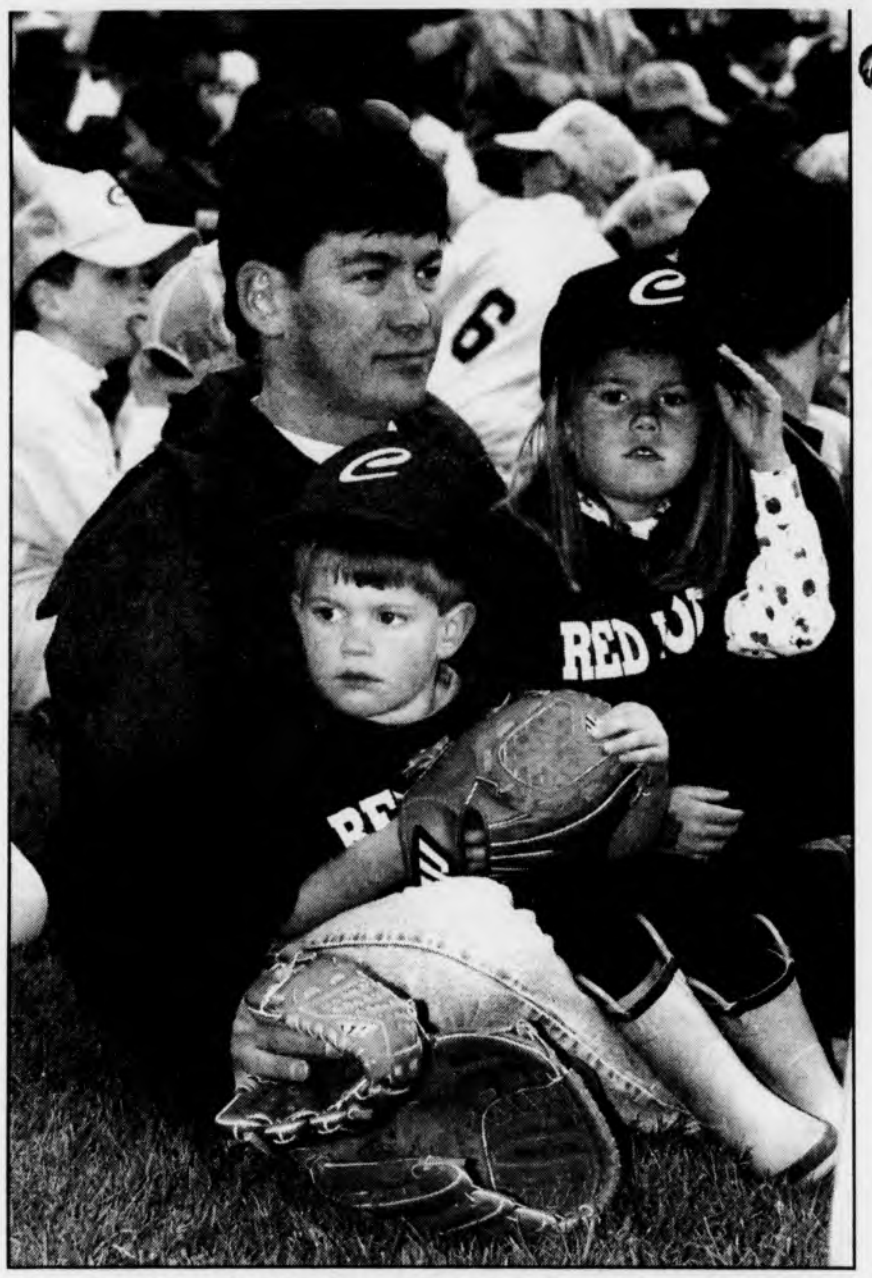
The jamboree will feature New England Revolution player Sam George, who will be on hand from 1:30 to 3 p.m. to sign autographs and have his picture taken with local players in front of a Revolution banner.

John Magruder, director of Cohasset's under-10 program, said the jamboree gives the younger soccer players the chance to compete on different fields than they are used to. Traveling teams in Cohasset are limited to older players.



"It was exceptionally well received last year," Magruder said. "Under-10 kids don't travel a lot. This gives them the chance to play another town."

The Cohasset Soccer Club includes Kindergarten-age kids through the under-12 players. In all, more than 400 kids participate in the spring program in Cohasset alone.



As competitive as the kids get on the field, the league's philosophy is to promote exercise and an appreciation of the game for the kids. To do that, coaches do very little fundamental work at an early age.

"It's running around and having fun for the kids," Magruder said. "We try to teach the kids to have fun so they go away with a good experience from playing soccer."

Greenbush Adds Bait Shop

Belsan Bait & Tackle, located at 38 Country Way in Scituate, is now open for business. The shop, owned by Jerry and Nina Belsan of Scituate, is managed by son Peter Belsan, also of Scituate.

Situated across from the picturesque Old Oaken Bucket Pond in the Greenbush area, Belsan Bait & Tackle, carries fresh live and frozen bait, as well as a full line of salt and fresh water tackle, featuring names like Penn, Shimano and Daiwa.

According to owner Jerry Belsan, the shop's proximity to the North River and location near the intersections of Routes 123 and 53 make it an easy access for anglers who live south and west of the North River. "Our shop is really ideal for people coming from Marshfield, Norwell and Hanover who fish out of Scituate Harbor and the (North) river. We're so close, we say we're 'a cast from the North River.'"

Belsan Bait & Tackle offers professional rod and reel repair and plans to run fishing clinics for children and adults. "Kids' clinics" for young fishers ages 6 to 12 will be held May 17 and 18. In addition, the fisherman to weigh in the first 25-pound striped bass keeper at Belsan Bait & Tackle will receive a gift certificate for $35.

Dodgers Meet A's on Opening Day

By Kevin Lewis
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last year's series featured some of the greatest baseball played on Barnes Field in many years. With the series tied at one game each, it all came down to one game. The Dodgers, behind the pitching of Andrew Walsh, Will Prendergast and Liam Martin, defeated the A's. The game ended when Brendan Byrne caught a fly ball with the bases loaded to preserve the victory.

The A's coaching staff of Ray Hanian, Jim French and Dave Curry developed a sound team during the course of the season and battled the Dodgers to the final out. Team members included Jimmy French, Kevin Hanian, Trey Curry, Scott Faber, Alex Berg, D.J. Lanzillotti, Tim Anton, Mark Chapman, Robbie Lehr, Nick Cavanaugh, Trevor Hardie and Willy MacArthur.

Members of the champion Dodgers included three-year team members Liam and Yari Martin, Kyle Webber, Brian Lewis, Andrew Walsh and Jeff Scribner. Two-year members included Brendan Byrne, William Prendergast, Curt Kahn and John Dwyer. The rookies were Mark Lewis and Andrew Lovalo.

The Dodgers were coached by Steve Webber, Don Roines and Kevin Lewis.

Discover how to live well over 50 at Eldercorps' Valued Aging Conference and Exposition

People over 50, and those responsible for older adults, now can gather information on resources, services and products designed specifically to meet their needs all under one roof at Eldercorps' first Valued Aging Conference and Exposition at Boston's Bayside Expo Center May 16-17.

Eldercorps, a non-profit, membership organization that supports productive and valued aging, is producing the event, which will feature more than 90 educational conference sessions, presentations, workshops and nearly 100 exhibits.

The Valued Aging Conference and Exposition grew out of Eldercorps' Annual Conference on Productive and Valued Aging at Harvard University. "We've created an event unlike others for mature individuals by listening to what they need and want," said Rad Romeyn, Eldercorps executive director. "As a 65-year-old woman told me, 'I want to come to one event where I can learn what resources are available to me and where I can meet like-minded older adults so we can explore what we can do to give our lives purpose'."

Conference topics range from finding personal meaning in older years, to how and where to keep learning, how to take control of finances, strategies for community involvement, elderpreneurship and more. The exposition features products, services and resources for mature individuals in categories like estate planning, financial security, healthcare, housing, family caregiving, health, fitness and well-being and lifelong learning.

Registration for conference sessions begins at 9 a.m. and continues throughout the day both days. The exposition is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

The Valued Aging Conference and Exposition will also generate new initiatives and elder recognition progr ams. The event will introduce programs like the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans Learning Center at the Boston Renaissance Charter School, where older adults can join the computer world, and Eldercorps' successful Elderpreneur of the Year Awards, which recognizes dynamic older adults who have recently initiated a new business or local community service or other enterprise.

Major sponsors of the Valued Aging Conference and Exposition include John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, Vencor and Community Newspaper Company.

More than 90 workshops and activities geared to those age 50 and older

The Valued Aging Conference and Exposition comprises more than 90 keynote addresses, workshops and presentations covering topics from finding personal meaning in older years to taking control of finances.

The conference was co-developed by event producer Eldercorps and the Cambridge Center for Adult Education, in conjunction with a committee of experts in older adult issues. The conference literally is too expansive to cover all at once, says Rad Romeyn, Eldercorps executive director, but some aspects stand out.

Keynote speakers will discuss varied topics including: "Timeless Healing", "Valued Aging", "Lifelong Learning", "Long Term Care Myths" and an "Introduction to Investments."

The workshops and roundtable sessions will encompass a wide range of topics of interest to older adults. They will include, for example, "Sexuality in the 2nd Half of Life," "Older Men's Issues," "Tai Chi & Meditation," "Avoiding the Estate Tax Trap," "Navigating the Eldercare Maze," "Computers Connect You to the World," "Political Action," Choosing an Independent Living Community," "Aging with Beauty," "Travel for Adventure" and many more.

Special activities run the gamut from fashion shows, to massage sessions to computer training.

New initiatives will be introduced at the conference and spin off a life of their own after the event. One of these actually will expand on its previous success, that is, the Educational Conference at First Valued Aging Conference and Exposition Elderpreneur of the Year Awards. Developed by Eldercorps, these awards recognize men and women over 55 who have applied a lifetime of experience and expertise to new challenges.

The event combines this expansive educational conference with an exposition of about 100 exhibits featuring products, services and resources for mature individuals in categories like estate planning, health care and housing.

CHARITABLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust is accepting applications from charitable organizations which provide nursing care, day care, respite care or home care for low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm. To be eligible for the grant award, the charitable organization must be exempt from taxation and must be able to use the funds in Plymouth County and contiguous towns. Priority will be given to those programs which offer direct aid to eligible individuals in their homes by maintaining such individuals in his or her home so as to improve the quality of home life.

Funds are also available to assist in the design, construction and equipment of facilities for use by low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm so as to improve the quality of their living arrangements. Individuals are not eligible for funding. The deadline for submitting a completed application is July 1, 1997.

Applications are available by sending a written request to:

Gala Art Opening Planned

Deer Hill School will be hosting a Gala Art opening, Tuesday, May 13, at 7 p.m. This art show entitled "Favorites 1997" represents the art work of all Deer Hill students. Each student has chosen his/her favorite art work of the year to be included in this exhibit. There will be refreshments and music. All are invited to attend. Admission is free.

In addition to this year's annual art show, Deer Hill will be celebrating the grand unveiling of a permanent clay installation created by Deer Hill sixth grade students.

For additional information on this event, call Ann Berman, art teacher, (617) 383-6115.

Post Prom Committee Seeks Support

The Post Prom Breakfast Committee for the graduating seniors has come up with some ideas to make this year's event the best ever.

The breakfast will be held this year at the Second Congregational Church and has traditionally been well attended by the seniors in past years. This year, along with the delicious food which is provided by the parents of the attendees, the committee would like to offer a little more to keep the prom-goers entertained.

"We were thrilled with the number of parents who are willing to help out this year and the support from the school has been great, too" reports co-chair Donna O'Donnell. "However, some of the ideas would require more money than we presently have available for this event."

Community support for this breakfast would be very much appreciated to help fund the surprise entertainment. The committee is looking for cash donations in the range of $15.

"The main focus is to keep the students safe and away from danger. Prom night is always a worry for parents and post prom activities have become a big part of the prom night festivities in order to keep the teens out of their cars and away from drugs and alcohol," said co-chair Debbie Niessink.

If you would like to help the committee provide a safe, fun night for the prom-goers, please consider sending a donation to the Post-Prom Breakfast Committee. Checks may be made payable to Donna O'Donnell and mailed to her at 196 Fairoaks Lane.

Summer Arts at Derby

Registration is now open for "Summer Arts at Derby 1997" at Derby Academy in Hingham. "Summer Arts at Derby" is a comprehensive arts program for ages eight to 15, that offers classes in drama, music, visual arts, dance, writing, gymnastics, martial arts, photography, and sports. Students choose their own schedules for the five-week program. Dates are June 30 to Aug. 1; hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The program culminates in an arts festival Friday, Aug. 1. For more information, call Thalia McMillion, director, at (617) 740-4766.

Derby Has Role in Environmental Study

Derby Academy sixth-graders will have an opportunity to participate in an Environmental Impact Study conducted by engineers from Color and Colantonio. The school will utilize the findings in long range campus planning and renewal. The students will be able to see the importance of their work now and in the years to come.

This study of the Derby campus and the surrounding area, including Broad Cove, will give students a chance to put their math and science skills to work in a real life situation. They will participate in observations, measurements, and data gathering with the engineers. The fieldwork will be the basis for computer analysis and completion of DEP (Department of Environmental Protection) forms that will be submitted to the town's Conservation Commission. With the engineers, the students will review the findings and help prepare the report. They will accompany the engineers and school officials to an informal presentation before the Hingham Conservation Commission at the end of May.

DRUG FACT

Dr. Donald Macdonald of the Florida Pediatric Society conducted a survey of 100 youngsters in Straight, a drug-free rehabilitation center in St. Petersburg, Fla. The boys and girls, ages 12 to 18, were from middle- and upper-income families. All had been heavy marijuana and hashish users. Prior to entering the program 85 percent had coughs; 75 percent had chest pains, and 40 percent had been taken to doctors for those and other symptoms including headaches, sinus trouble, sore throat, laryngitis and chronic fatigue. The physicians had done a variety of tests including EEG's, x-rays, nasal smears, TB skin tests, sputum cultures, urine tests and complete blood tests. Only eight of the doctors had asked about drugs. All eight youngsters denied drug use. And all eight doctors dropped the subject. When Dr. Macdonald made his survey, the 100 boys and girls had been drug-free for four to 12 months. They had received virtually no medication at Straight. Aside from the cough, all symptoms for which they'd been taken to the doctor, had disappeared — and 94 percent said they felt much better physically.

Investing in annuities requires research

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Investors looking for a tax break are often tempted by annuities. Who wouldn't want to watch their money grow tax-deferred? And with a variable annuity you can do just that; but the tax break comes at a price.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Like other retirement accounts, annuities lock up your investment for a long period of time, and some penalize you for tapping into your money before you reach retirement age. Most importantly, annuities are on the whole more expensive than the average no-load mutual fund. Higher investment gains may be eaten up by fees and expenses, leaving the investor marginally better off with this choice of investment.

What's an annuity? Insurance and money management companies sell many different kinds. Simply put they are an investment product combined with an insurance policy that allows money to grow tax-free until withdrawn in retirement, at which time it is taxed as income. The insurance policy consists of a death benefit which ensures that an investor's heirs will receive at least the original investment even if the market crashes around the time the investor dies. Some annuities may promise more than that, such as minimum annual interest on the principal or other benefits to protect the principal investment.

Variable annuities are one of the most popular annuities right now. They seem attractive at first glance because they allow investors to choose their investments from a family of mutual funds. Usually the annuity funds are similar in investment focus to the non-annuity funds in the mutual fund family, but the funds are kept separate for tax purposes. In many ways buying a variable annuity resembles buying mutual funds in your IRA or in a company 401(k) plan. But these annuities are costly. They almost always charge more per year than their mutual fund counterparts.

"There are more cost-effective ways to invest," said J. Michael Martin, president of Financial Advantage in Columbia, Maryland. "[Annuities] are overused because they are pushed so hard by sales people -- they are usually a high commission product."

Martin says some investors even make the mistake of buying annuities for their IRA accounts, which means they are paying extra for the tax-deferral component when they don't have to.

Many companies charge one percent of the principal each year -- on top of the other expenses involved in running the annuity mutual fund, such as fees for prospectuses and the money manager's salary -- to compensate themselves for the risk of paying a death benefit and to cover the commission of the broker or insurance agent who sold the annuity.

That explains why the average expense ratio for variable annuities is 2.08 percent, significantly more than the 1.42 percent average for U.S. diversified equity mutual funds, according to Morningstar in Chicago.

Some financial planners say the death benefit isn't necessarily worth the added cost. "You shouldn't buy an annuity for the death benefit," said Scott Dunn, assistant scientist market research, LIMRA International. There are other ways to ensure your family will be provided for when you die, he said, that may be more cost-effective, such as life insurance. After all, under the worse possible conditions your heirs simply get back the money you invested with no interest -- not too impressive.

To be fair, an annuity might be the right product for someone who wants to supplement his 401(k) and his IRA contributions. Because of the added costs for annuities, many conscientious financial planners will make sure you've put as much money as you are allowed into an IRA and 401(k) before starting an annuity.

But you should be aware of repercussions associated with early withdrawal. Many annuity companies charge a surrender fee somewhere south of 10 percent if you withdraw the money early.

In addition, all earnings on the withdrawn money will be taxed as ordinary income, even if those earnings are capital gains and could be otherwise taxed at a lower tax percentage.

If an investor can live with the inflexibility and not touch his money, eventually his funds will appreciate more in an annuity than in a comparable mutual fund; but the gains aren't all that impressive. The high costs of annuities usually make the tax-deferred gains marginal.

Those investors who have decided that the benefits of annuities outweigh the costs should take note; there are new variable annuities that have low fees and no surrender charges, making them better investment products.

Yard Sale to Benefit 10th Appalachia Trip

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is sponsoring their annual yard sale, Saturday, May 17, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset (next to town hall). Items can be donated any morning from Monday through Friday. For other times or for pickup of large items by appointment, please call 383-0345. Proceeds will be used to support our 10th trip, this year to Campbell County, Tennessee, where 84 Cohasset volunteers will work to help repair and upgrade homes of needy families. Bright and early, the morning of Saturday, June 28, 48 teenagers, 12 college-age youth and 24 adults will board buses to head for Tennessee and spend the following week working on 12 homes. We will then return to Cohasset, "good-tired" and inspired, Sunday evening, July 6. To help us get there, we would appreciate your support of "treasures" and "treasure" in our up-coming yard sale. Also, please mark your calendars for our car washes as well, May 31 and June 14, also in front of Second Congregational Church.

'Internet for Dummies' Author Speaks May 8

What do families at the Boston Computer Museum, rocket scientists in Washington, D.C., faculty at McGill University in Montreal, and Cohasset residents all have in common? All have the chance to hear Carol Baroudi, co-author of the million-plus seller "The Internet for Dummies." Baroudi has guaranteed us a "hot time" on May 8 when she comes to Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. and presents an engaging, funny, thoughtful look at how new technology affects us and what we can do to get the most out of it.

Baroudi has spoken to audiences throughout America and in Europe and Canada. She was recently featured in The Interview in "The Boston Globe" magazine. Her book has been translated into 14 languages. She has been lauded for her ability to explain, both in print and verbally, the global Information Revolution and its boundless opportunities in a manner that is both understandable and entertaining.

Mark your calendars. Save the date. Join us for this special evening, Thursday, May 8, 7:30 p.m., in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Not Your Ordinary Plant Sale

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host a "Not Your Ordinary" plant sale, Saturday, May 10 at 9 a.m. in the Lighthouse Keepers Cottage, Border Street, Cohasset. Rain or shine!

Many choice, uncommon and "hard to find" items will be featured, including perennials, small trees, ground covers, herbs and ornamental grasses.

Proceeds will benefit the club's many civic projects and the scholarship fund. Complimentary coffee will be served. Come early for best selection.

Pops Concert May 14

The annual Pops Concert will take place in the Cohasset High School cafeteria Wednesday, May 14, at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to come and enjoy an evening of fine vocal and instrumental music presented by the students of Cohasset High. Refreshments are included in the $5 cost of admission.

This event is sponsored by the Arts Boosters Club and all the proceeds are used to support the arts at Cohasset High School.

Glastonbury Abbey Plant Sale

Saturday, May 10, 8:30 a.m. to noon, a large selection of plants will be found for sale on the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St. (Route 228) in Hingham. Perennials, ground cover, herbs, annuals, fruit and vegetable plants, house plants and bushes will be on sale. Plants are all being donated from local private gardens in the Hingham-Cohasset area. Many plants will be divisions of specimens grown in the Abbey gardens. Seedlings to mature plants will be available to tempt local gardeners who join us at our fifth annual plant sale. Proceeds will be donated to the Benedictine Monks of Glastonbury Abbey.

Derby Academy Spring Fair

The Derby Academy Spring Fair will be held Saturday, May 10, from noon to 4 p.m. at the school on Burditt Avenue in Hingham, rain or shine.

Celebrate spring with the entire family. The fair will include past favorites such as pony rides, moonwalk, high striker, face painting, cookie decorating, games and prizes.

Start an afternoon at the fair with lunch at the Fast Food Grille or at Derby's own Gourmet Galley which features many delicious selections. Music will be provided throughout the afternoon by a DJ.

Join Hingham author and 'Arthur' TV series creator Marc Brown. He will autograph copies of his latest book, "Arthur Writes A Story" and bring along a real life 'Arthur' and other surprises.

Items for sale include plants for Mother's Day, gently used books, toys, treasures at the white elephant table and scrumptious home baked goods.

Admission and parking are free. For more information, call 749-0746.

Twenty-six Arrests Last Month

In his monthly status report to selectmen, Police Chief Brian Noonan reported there were a total of 26 arrests in town in April. Eight were for possession of a Class D substance (on arrest was for intent to distribute), six were protective custody, four were warrant arrests, three were for minors in possession of alcohol, two for assault, two for motor vehicle violations, and one was for violation of a 209A restraining order.

There was one attempted breaking and entering at a resident last month, Noonan said.

In April, the emergency dispatch center received a 130 emergency 9-1-1 calls.

Noonan said the attended a three-day police chief's spring conference in Leominster, Mass. The seminars included: 'Police Chief Survival and Stress Awareness," "Firearms Information Update of Federal Laws," and "Current Issues for Police Chiefs."

The chief praised is officers for their conduct during the recent media onslaught relating to the Kennedy scandal.

"I would like to publicly commend the members of the Cohasset Police Department,our emergency dispatch staff and secretarial staff for their professionalism in the handling of the onslaught of media descending upon our town."

Public Notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 97P0842E1

Estate of WILLIAM E. HAYNES late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that JOANN HAYNES of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 14, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this first day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

Officials Ink Contract for New School

But Air Conditioning is Not Included

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The new school will not be $2 million over budget after all.

The bids are in and the school building committee awarded the contract Tuesday to general contractor John T. Callahan and Sons of Bridgewater for $8,473,000, a figure which is only about $100,000 over budget, officials say.

In March, the committee told selectmen that cost estimates were $1.6 to $2 million higher than expected based on numbers obtained by official estimators. But building member Rob Spofford cautioned them at the time that the figures were not "definitive" because the project had not been put out to bid.

Charter School Plots Course for Success

Non-Traditional Education Approach Tried

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

In one of the primary classrooms at the South Shore Charter School in Hull, students learning about the metamorphosis of butterflies — as well as "butterfly math" — watched eagerly as a former caterpillar made its first attempts at leaving its cocoon and embarking on a new journey.

The fledgling charter school could be viewed from much the same perspective. The driving forces behind this new approach to education are trying to put to rest what they consider outdated teaching and learning methods and replace them with non-traditional ways to help their students reach new heights.

But the transition takes time.

Landfill and Town Settle Wetlands Dispute

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset Heights Limited, a privately owned landfill, has agreed to end a wetlands dispute that has been the subject of a lawsuit in Norfolk Superior Court for the past year.

CHL has agreed to remove siltation from a 1,500-square-foot area of wetlands to the southwest of the landfill in a site known as Area D. Siltation in the affected area is as deep as 32 inches in some locations.

The agreement for judgment ends the court case and forces CHL to restore the wetland, which has been damaged by the siltation.

Members of the town's conservation commission say the siltation is dangerous to native vegetation and is allowing an invasive weed, phragmites, to crowd out other plants.

But a wetlands scientist hired by CHL said ripping out all plant life in the affected area to remove siltation and phragmites may not be the best solution.

CHL attorney Anton Moehrke said work would probably

Cohasset's Week

Fire-fighters are Interviewed

Three local men are vying for two openings on the fire department. Selectmen interviewed Philip A. Pratt and John M. Hernan of Cohasset and Joseph F. Mahoney of Hull this week. They took the matter under advisement and will make a decision after results of background checks on the applicants are obtained.

A certified EMT and call fire-fighter, Pratt, 24, 83 Sohier St., graduated from Cohasset High in 1991 and has worked as a carpenter since completing a post-graduate year at Blue Hills Technical Regional High School.

Hernan, 34, 558 Beechwood St., graduated from UMass Boston with a bachelor of arts degree in 1989. He works as a landscaper and is an EMT with Brewster Ambulance.

Joseph Mahoney, 28, of Hull, is a Gulf War veteran. He works in construction and has his scuba rescue certification. Mahoney said he is working on his EMT certification.

Since 1982, all newly hired Cohasset fire-fighters must be EMTs and maintain that certification throughout their careers, selectmen said. Those hired before that year do not have to have EMT status.

Fire Department Overtime Depleted

The fire department overtime account has a balance of $887.27, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

In fiscal year 1997, which started July 1, the town appropriated $122,000 for overtime. As of April 1, there was $17,242.27 remaining and overtime charges for the month were $16,355.

Lincoln said there is $44,223 in the unused salaries and holiday pay account which can be used to cover overtime for the rest of the fiscal year.

"Baring any unforeseen circumstances, I am confident this balance will see the department through until July 1," Lincoln wrote in his report to selectmen.

Selectman Diane C. Sullivan questioned Lincoln about the high use of overtime. He explained that the department has vacancies which are driving up overtime. Selectmen interviewed three candidates for the fire-fighter positions this week.

Money for Voting Machines

Town Clerk Marion Douglas has written to state Sen. Robert Hedlund seeking his support for a loan program for municipalities to purchase replacement voting equipment.

Secretary of State William Galvin is considering removing punch cards from the list of voting equipment allowed in the state. She asked Hedlund to contact Sen. Andrea Nuciforo and Rep. Arthur Broadhurst of the elections laws committee to move the bill out of committee.

Cohasset was one of several towns in the 10th Congressional District that use punch-card voting machines and was involved in a recount of the Democratic primary race last fall between William Delahunt and Philip Johnston. After a recount and a court challenge, Delahunt was declared the winner.

No Truck Traffic on Pond Street

Following an accident on Pond Street last week involving two dump trucks, selectmen have asked the town's safety officer to contact the state to investigate banning heavy trucks from the roadway.

Both Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield wrote to selectmen this week to say traffic rules on Pond Street should be changed.

Lincoln said there have been incidents over the past 15 years involving a gas tank truck, fuel oil tank truck and cement mixer truck.

"In my opinion, it is time to limit commercial traffic on Pond Street to those vehicles only having specific business on Pond Street," Lincoln said.

Litchfield said there have been six major accidents in the last few years.

"My fear is the next one could possibly involve a school bus," Litchfield said. He suggested all commercial vehicles over 10,000 pounds be restricted from using Pond Street as a through way.

Police Chief Brian Noonan also supports restricting truck traffic on Pond Street.

In last week's accident police said one truck couldn't stop on the sharp hill near Spring Street and ended up sandwiched between the other truck and the ledge. The fuel tanks of both trucks, which were carrying hot top for road resurfacing in town, were punctured in the mishap.

Vacancies on Town Committees

There are two vacancies on the mosquito control committee, four on the sidewalk study committee, five on the town history committee and two on the Greenbush mitigation committee. Anyone interested in serving on one of these committees, should stop by the selectmen's office at town hall or call 383-9900.

One-Way on Elm Street

Selectmen will look into making Elm Street in the village one way.

Selectman Merle Brown said cars are parked on the sidewalks making it impossible for people to use them. He pointed out that mothers with baby strollers have to walk in the street.

Selectmen said the one-way traffic would have to go in the direction on Elm from Brook to South Main Street to enable emergency vehicles to pass. They are not considering having one-way traffic in the other direction because in that case, fire trucks would have to go down Brook Street and make a difficult right onto South Main Street.

Centrex Phones Coming to Town

Selectmen are investigating having a Centrex phone system installed in town. A five-year contract would cost the town about $938 a month for "measured service" for 52 phone lines including those in the town and school departments. Installation costs of about $2641 and voice mail, which is $8.50 per line, are not included. Measured service means that the town would be charged a fee of a few cents for all calls outside the system. With Centrex, members of town departments could reach one another by dialing extensions.

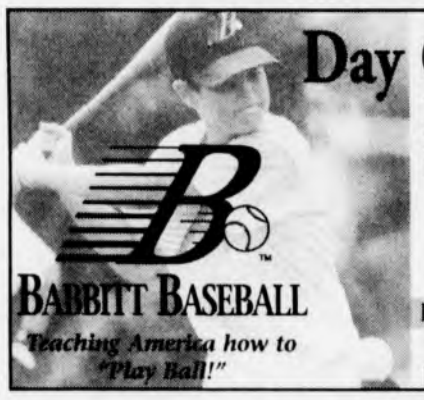
Currently, the town spends about $2,000 a month for phone service.

Officials from NYNEX said Monday that benefit to a contract is rate protection. Selectmen asked Paul J. Wieners, associate director of customer service with NYNEX, to see if the company would consider waiving installation and voice mail costs if the town opted for a 10-year contract.

Permits Available

Current beach and recycling facility permits are expiring!

Beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits are now available at the town hall Mondays and Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Thursdays from 4:30 to 7 p.m., and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. until Friday, June 27.



Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle; $3 per vehicle for elders over 60 years old. RTF stickers are $65, $25 for second vehicle if application is made at a different time, and $33 for a sole resident.

To purchase stickers, vehicle registrations are needed, or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). Applicants are encouraged to purchase both stickers through the mail by providing a copy of their registration and a self-addressed return envelope. RTF stickers may be purchased at the RTF on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
THE OFFER TO BUY

QUESTION: I have listed my home with a Realtor and am waiting for the first prospect. What is the procedure if I get an offer lower than the asking price?

ANSWER: You can depend on human nature. Your prospect WILL probably make an offer lower than your asking price. In order to consider the offer, it must be in writing and signed. It must have a definite time limit, and it should be accompanied by a respectable amount of the buyer's money as an indication of sincerity.

Once these elements are fulfilled, it's up to you to either accept the lower offer, reject it outright, or make a counter offer to sell somewhere between the two.

DEP Wants Town's Plan For Utilizing Its Wells

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The state Department of Environmental Protection has directed the town to either rehabilitate old out-of-use wells for emergency use or declare them abandoned.

In a letter to the town, DEP said Cohasset must verify its emergency water status no later than June 30. DEP wants to know what the town plans to do with its wells now and in the future.

Water commissioners plan to meet with DEP representative Kelly O'Keefe to discuss the directive.

The town has two well fields that will need to be considered — one on Sohier Street and one in Elms Meadow. The Sohier Street wells were last used in 1979, and the Elms Meadow was last used in 1971.

The town's consulting engineer, Dominic Tutela, said it would be expensive to rehabilitate any old wells.

"You know what has to be done?" Tutela asked. "You have to rebuild the wells. DEP is saying the emergency supply wells have to be run like it's for every day use."

Tutela said it would could cost more than $250,000 to rebuild each well.

"You would have to rebuild the entire well," Tutela said. "You would have to pump it, clean it, install new well pumps and treatment systems, chlorinate it, possibly fluoridate it, and then maintain it like new."

Weston and Sampson Engineering Project Manager John Bocchino said DEP is forcing towns to make a distinction between emergency and abandoned wells.

Bocchino said rebuilding the wells was such a significant task that the town may be forced to declare some of them abandoned.

Once a well is officially abandoned, it can never be reclaimed, Tutela said.

"DEP wants a response by June 30," Bocchino said. "They're looking for information about schedules and moneys if we decide to rebuild."

If the town decided to rehabilitate any wells, it would have two years to complete the work, Bocchino said.

Tutela said the Elms Meadow wells are in bad shape: One well is almost destroyed and one is in very poor condition.

"I'd be surprised if you wanted to do anything with that other than turning it into a museum," Tutela said.

Water commissioner Richard Munson added that a water building in Elms Meadow could collapse anytime.

Tutela said a well at Sohier Street could serve as a good emergency well, but wouldn't be adequate for every day use.

The MBTA also plans to remove vegetation on its Greenbush right of way, which is very close to Elms Meadow.

"One well building is so close to the track you could wash its windows from the train," Tutela said.

The MBTA plans to use herbicides which could contaminate the well fields. If the town decides to rehabilitate the wells, the MBTA would be barred from using herbicides.

Notice to Cohasset Water Users

Over the next couple of weeks, there will be construction on Pond Street. This work may cause rusty water in some parts of town. The Cohasset Water Department apologizes for any inconvenience this may cause.

OUT OF RECIRCULATION

▶The exhaust-gas-recirculation (EGR) system, as its name clearly implies, recirculates exhaust gas back through the intake manifold into the engine. There, it acts as a cooling agent to lower combustion temperatures. All this is done with the intention of preventing oxides of nitrogen, which are pollutants, from forming in the engine and being expelled through the tailpipe into the atmosphere. One indication that a care owner has that the EGR system is malfunctioning is that it will give rise to detonation (also known as spark knock and ping), particularly when the engine is cold. Other symptoms of a malfunctioning EGR are hesitation or stalling on acceleration and stalling on deceleration and during quick stops.

▶Some folks enjoy learning more about how their car works and others wish to leave it to the experts. Whether you like to know the ins and outs of your repair or simply want to drop it off for repair, we'll work with you. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, you'll find we're there when you need us. As Aging Needs Increase:

Solutions to Caring for A loved One With Alzheimer's

Thursday, May 29, 1997

When one person gets Alzheimer's Disease or other Dementia, the entire family is affected. Everyone's life is drastically changed. And you want to do what's right.

To help you deal with this, Grove Manor Estates in collaboration with Quincy Hospital is holding this Free Seminar*, and is also starting a Caregiver's Support Group. The Seminar will answer some of the hard questions for you. Topics include:*

- The unpredictable nature of the disease
- How to avoid catastrophic reactions/events
- The stress it adds to the caregiver's work and personal life
- Your own fears about aging
- Choosing the best setting to care for those with the disease

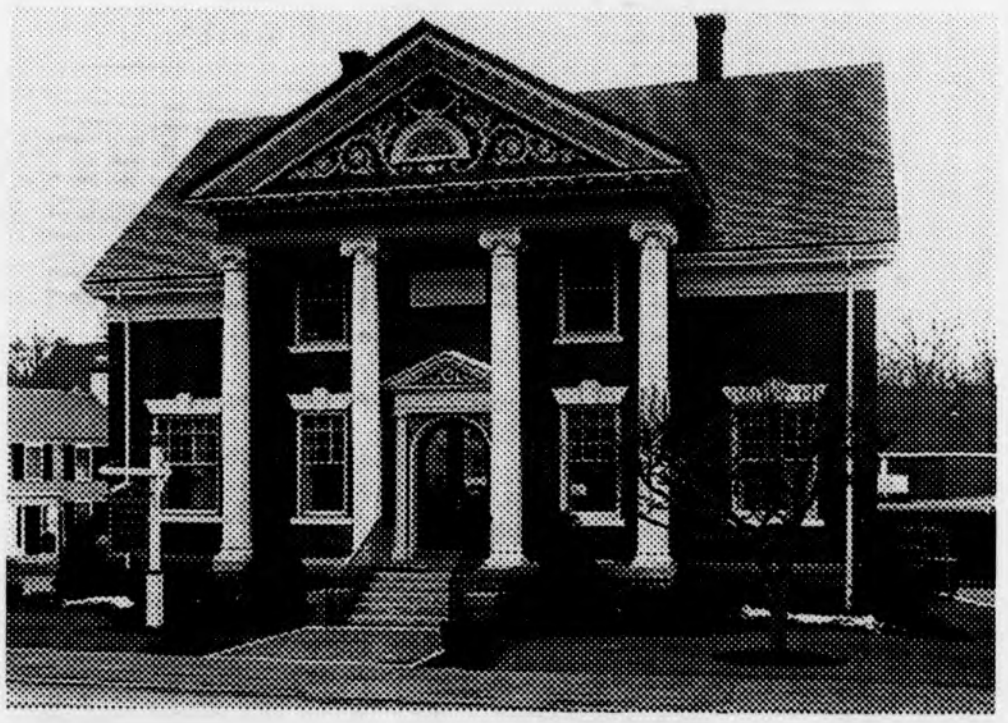
Our guest speaker is Roberta H. Guez, LICSW, Program Director of Psychiatric Services, Quincy Hospital. She has over 20 years experience in geriatric mental health and as a social worker, and speaks frequently on Alzheimer's.

Grove Manor Estates is an Assisted Living Retirement Community, which also features the Woodlands, specializing in serving those with Alzheimer's.



Seating is limited, so call today for reservations: (617) 843-3700. Refreshments will be served.

Officials Ink Contract

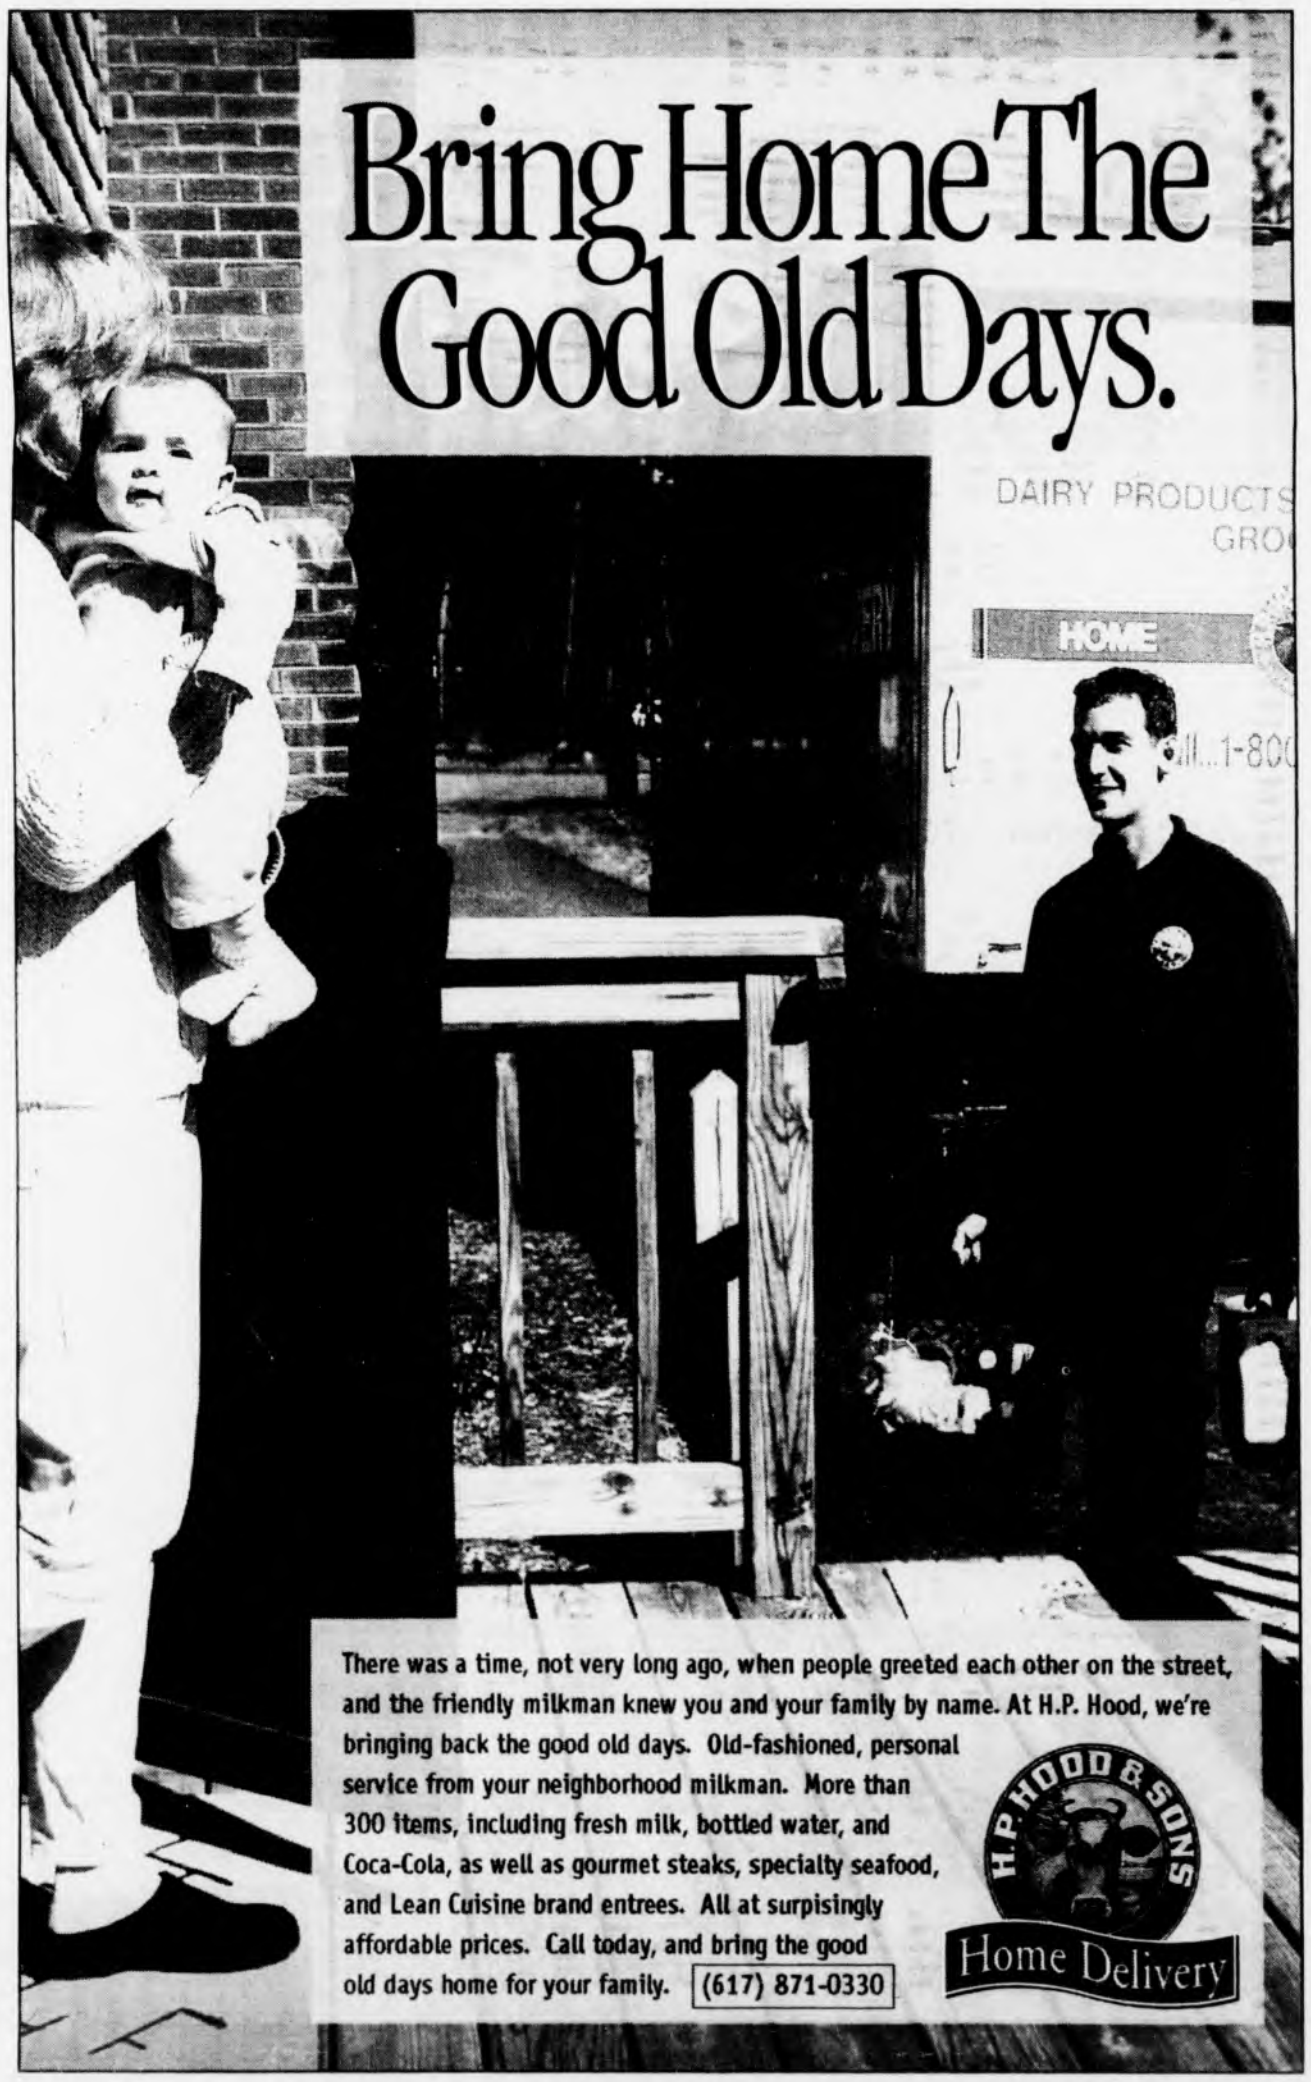
Callahan's bid was about $300,000 less than the next bidder, Mello Construction of Taunton and includes a brick facade and veneer plastic for the exterior of the building to be constructed behind the Deer Hill School.

Sid Bowen of Earl + Flansburgh Associates, architects retained by the school department, said Callahan's references checked out. He said the new school will cost about $102 a square foot to construct.

Over objections from newly elected school committee member Joe McElroy, who attended Tuesday's meeting, the building committee did not include about $88,000 in air conditioning piping in the contract The piping would set the stage so air conditioning could be added later in order to make the school available for possible use in the summer months.

"I hate to see us be penny-wise and pound foolish," McElroy said.

Bowen said air conditioning work should be included if the building committee thought it would be installed at a later date. He warned that adding the infrastructure for air conditioning later would be much more expensive.



"To retrofit would cost triple after the building is in place," Bowen said.

But the committee wanted to get the contract signed so work could begin and did not have the money for the air conditioning work. Plans are to open the school in September 1998. The town appropriated $9.9 million last year through a Prop. 2-1/2 override for the project which includes $665,000 in design and engineering fees.

To get the $88,000 for the air conditioning, the committee would either have to take the money from the $528,000 set aside for contingencies or go to town meeting, which would take too long. They felt dipping into the contingency fund would be unwise at this point and expect some of the contingency might have to be used for site work.

To recoup the $107,000 that the bid is over budget, Bowen explained that some small items can be scaled back or eliminated. For example, he said $100 a window or $9,000 can be saved by "fixing" the upper windows in each classroom so they don't open. The lower windows will still open and close.

McElroy and Andrew Foster, an abutter to the new school, urged the building committee to hold off signing the contract until they get input from the selectmen and school committee. But the building committee members said while they will keep those boards updated, they had the authority to sign the contract and felt it necessary to get the project moving as soon as possible.

Landfill

begin sometime in late June. Moehrke said the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which oversees work done in wetlands for the federal government, must approve the settlement before work can begin.

CHL owners Paul and John Barry had agreed last year to a number of mitigation conditions as part of a consent agreement with the town. Those conditions included studies of areas A and C, a 7,500-square-foot wetlands replication project, a study of the loss of tree canopy, and area D restoration.

Roderick Gaskell, a wetlands specialist working for CHL, said all conditions of the consent agreement have been completed except for the area D restoration. Gaskell said the restoration was never completed because CHL wants to study and monitor the wetlands before destroying plants that are 40 or 50 years old.

"The right way to do this is to study it," Gaskell said. "We'll pay the fines in the meantime."

Gaskell agrees that phragmites can crowd out and destroy other forms of plant life. He even agrees that the siltation came from a pipe at the landfill. What he doesn't agree with is the town's solution.

Gaskell said he has recorded measurements showing that phragmites have receded in the wetland over the last five years. He also has photographs showing that the tree canopy is returning.

Direct sunlight provides one of the key conditions for phragmites to thrive, Gaskell said.

Conservation commission member Tom Callahan has said in previous discussions that "phragmites are not going to shrink."

Gaskell said the town has refuted his report. He also criticized the town's environmental data as "unscientific."

"It is my belief that the town just wants to say that we're out of compliance all the time," he said.

Gaskell also points to an article in the Massachusetts Audobon Society's January/February 1997 issue of Sanctuary magazine by Robert Buchsbaum which states that phragmites have been shown to coexist with other plant species in salt marshes under the right conditions.

Mass. Audobon also concluded in a 1990 study that some wildlife species thrived in areas populated with phragmites.

The article states that removing phragmites from a salt marsh depends on the goals of the project. If the goal is to restore the historical plant life, "then phragmites should be reduced as much as possible."

Gaskell said a study is needed for at least two reasons: the phragmites are receding and there is a possibility that wildlife is thriving under the canopy provided by phragmites.

Gaskell said the conclusion of the Mass. Audobon article drives his point home.

"It is hard to get away from the conclusion that each phragmites area has to be examined within the context of the overall ecosystem before we can decide what restoration measures, if any, should be undertaken," Buchsbaum states in his article.

But this information has not changed the fact that CHL has signed an agreement for judgment stating that it will restore area D.

Gaskell said CHL has agreed to rip out the wetland under the condition that it bear no responsibility for the effects of that work.

"I'm not going to call black white," Gaskell said. "It's like digging a foxhole and filling it in. If they want us to rip out a wetland, we'll run the machines but we won't be responsible for the consequences."

Moehrke also questioned the wisdom of tearing up the wetland.

"It's like a Brazilian rain forest in there and that's a violation?" he wondered. "The conservation commission is saying it's the wrong kind of vegetation. Well, now we have to get in there with a bulldozer and kill all that vegetation."

Moehrke said the agreement for judgment addresses all current areas in dispute. He conceded that there could be additional disputes in the future.

CHL and the town are still involved in six additional lawsuits.

Despite Concerns from Abutters

Bear Hill Water Tower Approved

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Town meeting authorized a water tank on Bear hill, the water commissioners approved it, but residents who live in the shadow of Bear Hill oppose it.

Abutters to the town's only water tank, located on Bear Hill, are angry that a second tank has been proposed at the location.

Water commissioners approved plans at their May 8 meeting to build a 2-million-gallon water tank on Bear Hill, rejecting an alternate site on Scituate Hill. The commission authorized opponents of the Bear Hill site to continue exploring Scituate Hill sites, including a possible location on land formerly owned by Webb Norfolk Conveyor, Co. off Rt. 3A.

New water commission Chairman Robert Kasameyer said any alternatives to Bear Hill must be presented prior to a zoning board hearing scheduled for May 21. The next water commission meeting is scheduled for May 19.

Kasameyer said the Bear Hill site was the best location currently available.

"There is a problem with fire flows and we have to consider the safety factor," Kasameyer said. "Time is a key issue and we don't know anything about Scituate Hill. With Bear Hill we're on target to build the tank by winter."

Town officials are concerned that fire flows are inadequate at night because the water plant is closed. A second tank would provide better capacity to fight nighttime fires, especially in the dry summer months.

Town meeting approved the $1.4 million tank on Bear Hill, and Kasameyer said the water commissioners were just carrying out the wishes of the town.

Kasameyer said any site on Scituate Hill would delay the project for at least a year until town meeting could approve a land acquisition.

Opponents of the Bear Hill site said the town has lived with current fire flow for decades, and spending more time searching for alternative sites wouldn't affect safety.

"To assure the town of fire flows you can turn on the emergency pump if the tank is depleted during a big fire," said tank abutter Domenic Baccari. "You can also extend the water plant's hours of operation."

Some residents felt the water commission just didn't care about the abutters.

"Too many projects like this one are rammed through and roll over people," said Mark Rattenbury. "I don't see a compelling reason not to pursue Scituate Hill."

Local residents Wayne Sawchuk and Glenn Pratt have been working on behalf of opponents of the Bear Hill site with the town's consulting engineers to find a new location for the tank.

The first site they looked at on Scituate Hill, a state highway property off Route 3A, would cost $250,000 more than Bear Hill. Massachusetts Highway Department officials rejected the town's request because the state lost a $50 million lawsuit to Paul and John Barry, owners of the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

CHL successfully sued Mass. Highway for allegedly contaminating groundwater under the landfill with salt runoff from the Route 3A site. The state has already paid CHL $10 million, but is appealing the case.

Sawchuk said the Barrys would be willing to donate to the town another piece of land on Scituate Hill, the Coyne property. But new water commissioner John McNabb opposed the suggestion because the town is locked into six lawsuits with the Barrys over CHL.

Pratt said the Webb Norfolk site would cost about the same as the Bear Hill site, except for land acquisition costs.

Consulting engineer Dominic Tutela agreed that the cost would be about the same. Tutela added that he would have to perform geological borings on Scituate Hill to make sure the land was appropriate.

Sawchuk added that the town may not be able to begin construction on Bear Hill until next year because of the lengthy permitting process.

Sawchuk said he would approach the current owners of the 62-acre Webb Norfolk site and ask for a one-acre donation of land. He added that the owner might be interested because the tank would provide an abundant water supply for developers interested in purchasing the property.

Tutela will also work with residents to make the current tank more aesthetically appealing by painting it a different color and planting high trees. But many residents scoffed at the idea that trees could hide the tank's presence.

"How big are these trees going to be?" asked George Gurnis.

Proposed School Fitness Center Seeks Financial Backing

Focus of High School PE Changing

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

School health officials are reaching out to the community to help pay for a new fitness center proposed at the high school.

The estimated cost to develop the facility that will extend its use to not only the students but the community at large, is $100,000. With $2,000 donated by local power-lifter Eric Kupperstein and $1,000 donated by the PSO, the proposed fitness needs a lot more funding to bring it to fruition.

To health education coordinator Mike Gill — the center will help provide a critical piece of the physical education program.

"Physical education is vital to all aspects of the normal growth and development of children and youth — not only the physical but the social and emotional growth as well," he said.

"However, at this point, the Cohasset Schools are deficient in the equipment and space necessary to cultivate an appreciation for personal fitness in its students."

The plan is to make this project a community endeavor. The center will be open to students during the day. After school it could open up for athletic teams, faculty and town employees. Between 5 and 9 p.m., the center could be open for use by the public.

Keeping the center open Saturdays and during the summer would not only keep people on track with their fitness but give people, particularly students, an alternative activity, proponents say. A membership plan would then be created in order to keep the facility open after hours.

With the adoption of the 90-minute block schedule which takes effect this September, the physical education department will be able to devote a large portion of class time on fitness.

"The timing to develop a quality fitness center couldn't be better. Physical education is undergoing tremendous change throughout the country. We are in the process of restructuring our curriculum to incorporate fitness as a major part of physical education," said Clark Chatterton, physical education teacher and athletic director at the junior-senior high school.

'I started to work out when I was in eighth grade for football. However, it did a lot more for me than just prepare me physically, it gave me a sense of discipline and self esteem.'

— Eric Kupperstein, power-lifter.

Power-lifter Eric Kupperstein, at left, and schools health education coordinator Mike Gill meet to discuss plans for the fitness center at the high school. Kupperstein has donated $1,000 toward the project.

The fitness center will be located in the current senior lounge. Due to state education reform, study halls have been cut, therefore the senior lounge has no use. The space allows room to establish the intended model of the center; aerobic floor, cardiovascular station, and weight training area. Ideally the space will comfortably hold 25-50 people exercising simultaneously.

Gill said the focus of physical education is moving away from team sports.

"Our vision is to gear physical education towards personal wellness and fitness as opposed to its traditional format of teamed sports," Gill said. "Of course team sports should play a part in physical education but they should be taught as a result of personalized training.

"Team sports are not for everybody. Instead of excluding those who do not thrive in the team setting, we should be offering an alternative where everyone can succeed," he said.

Financial donor, Eric Kupperstein, is a world-class power lifter. His interest in drug-free lifting, youth fitness and sports motivated him to make a donation to the proposed project.

"I started to work out when I was in eighth grade for football. However, it did a lot more for me than just prepare me physically, it gave me a sense of discipline and self esteem," Kupperstein said.

He believes that once students start to pay attention to their bodies, they learn to respect and take care of themselves. This awareness will hopefully prevent them from doing anything to counteract their success. Kupperstein has also offered to hold training classes at the center for those in the community with interest.

Gill talks about the positive results personalized training has on individuals.

"Enhanced learning, improved concentration, greater self-control and self-confidence, as well as the promotion of healthy, positive, and lifelong attitudes toward physical activity are well documented benefits of quality physical education in schools. Exercise should be a way of life and with the proposed fitness center all of this becomes possible," he said.

In order for the establishment of this center to get underway, it needs additional donors from the community.

"Organizations or private citizens with an interest in the project will hopefully support the goal of preparing our students to be physically and emotionally fit for life," Gill said.

If interested in assisting with the fund-raising, call Mike Gill at 383-6107. Donations may be sent to the Cohasset Schools Fitness Center, c/o Gill, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, 02025.

Cohasset Food Drive a Success

More than two tons of food and groceries were collected by letter carriers in Cohasset last weekend.

All the items were donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Cohasset Post Office helped "Stamp Out Hunger" by participating in the food drive, which was sponsored by the National Association of Letter Carriers in conjunction with the United States Postal Service.

Letter carriers collected the donations that residents left by their mailboxes when they made their regular mail deliveries.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

A Salute Goes to Peter Wood This Week

A 'salute' goes to Peter Wood this week — he has certainly received many over his lifetime! Peter was recently awarded the Legion of Merit from the U.S. Army upon retirement after 25 years of military service. Six of those year were spent with the U.S. Coast Guard, and 19 years were spent with the U.S. Army Reserve, when he retired as a Sergeant Major. Peter's last position was as Chief Legal Non-Commissioned Officer, assigned to the 94th Army Regional Support Command, in Fort Devens.

Peter also has another accomplishment that is newsworthy, and one to be proud of also! He recently competed in the 1997 ABNAMRO Boulevard 10K road race, held in Aruba. He was awarded a trophy for finishing third in his class. Runners came from all over the Globe to compete in this race: the USA, Aruba, Curacao, St. Martin, Guadeloupe, Columbia, Venezuela, Puerto Rico, Peru, Holland, Luxemburg, Suriname. Quite a feat indeed! All of the training and running that we see Peter do "around town" certainly paid off! Congratulations go to you on both milestones Peter, we admire you and your dedication!

Speaking of marathoners, did you know that one of the Boston Marathon Finishers was Dr. Leah Whipple? Dr. Whipple practices veterinary medicine in Berwyn, Penn., now, but she grew up in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High in 1969. She ran in one Montreal and two New York marathons to qualify for Boston. Her Boston time was three hours, 34 minutes! Part of the reason for that grand finish might have been her siblings Roger, Ben and Nancy (Grinnell) who gathered with spouses and children to give her a rousing pasta send-off from Cohasset! Sounds like great fun, and we are sure that all are proud of Leah for her wonderful efforts!

Speaking of birthdays, we send belated birthday wishes to Jean Doble this week, her big day was on Mother's Day this year! We won't give her age away, just tell you that it is close to the speed limit! Hope you had a great day, Jean!

We have a new little girl to celebrate in our town, her name is Catherine Elizabeth Gilman, the daughter of Beth (Marsden) and Jamie Gilman. Catherine was born April 18, and weighed 6 pounds, 5 ounces. She has a big sister, Marie Ellen Gilman, who will be three in July, and is just thrilled to have Catherine join their family. Congratulations to all of you!

Had a nice letter from William F. Sullivan recently, asking for help through this column in locating three members of the Cohasset High School Class of 1948. On May 27, at 6:30 p.m. the Class of 1948 will hold its first ever reunion at Kimball's By-the-Sea. They have located, or otherwise accounted for all class members (of which there were a total of 33) except Patricia R. Hahner, Richard E. Welch, and Helen J. Wolfe. Mr. Sullivan (who was president of the class of 1948) hopes that someone in Cohasset will remember these folks, where they went when they left Cohasset, what college they may have attended, whom they married, or any other info that might help locate them (a check of the various people-search systems on the Internet, while helpful in locating other class members, has not been successful in locating these three classmates). Mr. Sullivan recalls that Helen lived on Summer Street, and Richard lived on Jeruslaem Rd (on the edge of Strait's Pond). He cannot recall, after 49 years, where Patricia lived in Cohasset. If anyone has any information on the present whereabouts of these three people, please call Mr. Sullivan collect in Seattle, Washington, at (206) 285-1798 or e-mail him at billinsea-caaol.com, or call Dorothy Conte, in Hingham at 749-0682, or Rosalie Bravo, also in Hingham, at 749-9223. They are so hoping to have all living members of their class attend their first reunion , your interest and help would thrill them! Hopefully they will take a few pictures of the event, and give us a "report" on the event!

Ken and Sue Fone were in town last week, it was so great seeing them — they did promise that they wouldn't wait so long between visits again, and said to be sure to say hello to those that they didn't have time to visit. They do love life in Maine, but miss us too, and did say that out town looks great!

Congratulations go to all of our newly elected officials, we thank you for being so willing to give up your extra time and energy to help make the town and schools function so well — and, thanks to the out-going officials for the countless hours and dedication that you provided us!

That's the news, hopefully you will send me (or call me) with yours!

Social Service League Sponsors Mammography Screening

If you are a woman, you are at risk for breast cancer. Although many of the recent reports on mammography have been confusing, the fact is that one women in eight is at risk of breast cancer in her lifetime! The two major risk factors for breast cancer are being female and getting older. Although there is not much you can do to change either risk factor, there is good news!

The Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring a mammography screening on Saturday, June 7. The Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc. will be performing the examinations with the mobile mammography service. Appointments are necessary and can be scheduled by calling the Cohasset Social Service League at (617) 383 0771.

The mammograms are performed by fully licensed female mammography technologists in a comfortable, private mobile coach. The films are read by board certified radiologists and results are provided to each woman as well as the physician of her choice.

When used in conjunction with the following total breast health plan, mammography is the most reliable method we have now for early detection of breast cancer. There are proven methods for detecting breast cancer early, before it has spread, while it is still treatable. Here is vital information you should know to save a life-your own or a loved one's. The three-step program to breast health is simple:

- Do monthly breast self-examination;
- Have a clinical breast exam by your health care professional annually;
- Have a mammogram every year over the age of 40

Mobile Diagnostic Services, Inc., ACR Accredited, FDA Certified and Massachusetts Licensed mobile mammography service, is a not-for-profit corporation with a history of serving women in Massachusetts for over nine years. Mammography is their only business. Because cost and accessibility are cited as major factors discouraging women from having mammography, MDSI provides low-cost mammography on a mobile unit, bringing this lifesaving 30 minute examination to women at worksites, health centers and community locations.

Insurance can often cover the cost of a mammogram, and MDSI can bill your insurance company directly, or you may pay on the day of the exam and obtain a receipt for insurance reimbursement. Medicare covers their portion of a mammogram examination every two years. Deductible and co-pay may apply, so you should call Medicare at (800) 882-1228 to check your individual status.

Remember -breast cancer doesn't take time off. The Cohasset Social Service League and Mobile Diagnostic Services care about your good health so schedule your mammogram today!

Ambulance Billing Update

The town billed for 25 ambulance transports last month for a total amount due of $9,145.61 and collected $8,078.30. Payments collected for ambulance are applied to invoices from previous fiscal years and the current fiscal year.

Ban Trucks on Pond Street

It's unanimous. The police chief, fire chief and superintendent of public works all agree — trucks and Pond Street don't mix.

Police Chief Brian Noonan drove that point home last week after yet another near disaster was averted. Two heavy dump trucks carrying hot top had a mishap on the sharp hill at the end of Pond near its intersection with Spring Street.

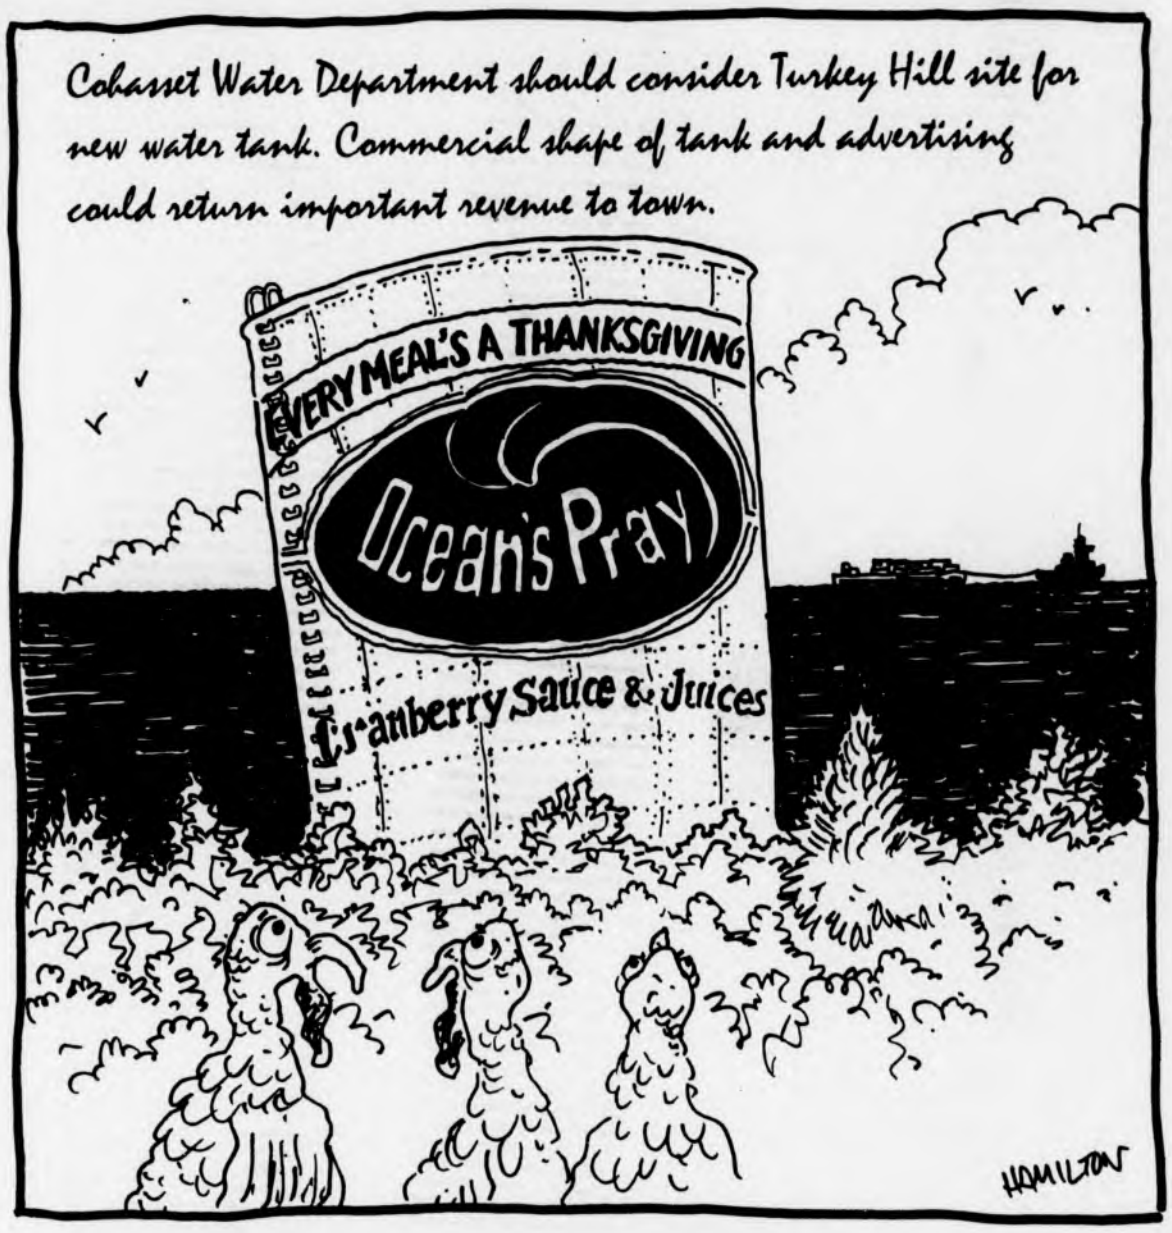
Luckily, the truck with defective brakes somehow became wedged between the ledge and the other truck. There was a mess but not nearly what could have been.. While it took Clean Harbors several hours to clean up fuel from ruptured fuel tanks, the situation would have been much worse if all the hot top had spilled out onto the ledge and roadway.

Chief Noonan said he would ask DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield to see that trucking companies do not use Pond Street because of the steep hill.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln says there have been incidents over the past 15 years involving a gas tank truck, fuel oil tank truck and cement mixer truck.

And Supt. Litchfield worries that a school bus could be involved in a future accident. He suggested all vehicles in excess of 10,000 pounds be restricted from using Pond Street as a through way.

According to selectmen, the town will have to go through the proper channels at the state level to get the authority to ban truck traffic on Pond Street. They have asked the town's safety officer, Cliff Jones, to look into the matter.



There certainly won't be a lack of evidence to convince state authorities that this is the right move.

Clearly, limiting or eliminating trucks on Pond Street is an idea whose time has come.

In a related matter, selectmen will also ask Officer Jones to investigate making Elm Street in the village one way. The street is so narrow that cars must park on the sidewalks forcing pedestrians to use the street. One-way traffic would have to proceed along Elm from Brook to South Main Street because fire and emergency vehicles would be headed that way. Although the group favors the opposite traffic pattern, the Village Revitalization Committee also backs making Elm Street one-way.

We think with a little education and changing of our habits, one-way along Elm will work. It will help pedestrians and also make the street more attractive paving the way for the possible addition of brick sidewalks proposed by the Revitalization Committee.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teenagers Volunteer for Food Pantry

Letter to the Editor:

This past Saturday my son made his First Communion at St. Anthony's Church. It was an important day for him. He read a petition before the congregation that went as follows: "That we may sacrifice for those less fortunate than ourselves..." When I heard this I tried to think how, from day to day, our children in Cohasset could sacrifice for others. To sacrifice sounds so lofty and uncommon, but my answer came almost simultaneously.

On Saturday, May 10, the Post Office sponsored a food drive for which the Cohasset Food Pantry benefited by the donation of forty-four hundred pounds of non-perishable items. Mr. Bob Thompson, Coordinator of Volunteers for the Cohasset Food Pantry, located at the Congregational Church, noted that, "the community was extremely generous." Last years collection in comparison was forty-two hundred pounds.

One can only imagine the logistics of moving around a couple of tons of food and non-perishables. Mr. Thompson mentioned that it took last year's regular volunteer staff a week to complete the job. This year a group of 7th grade boys from Cohasset Jr/ Sr. High School volunteered their services to carry, sort and shelf. They were able to accomplish the work, under Mr. Thompson's direction, in one day. These boys worked in three shifts amid their soccer, baseball and tennis schedules; they accomplished their tasks very efficiently according to Bob Thompson, who was delighted with their enthusiasm and focus.

Many of the volunteers commented how much they enjoyed working on this project and would be willing to volunteer again. Some, who wanted to volunteer but had other commitments called to apologize for their absence, but offered their services in the future. I think the willingness of these thirteen year old boys is indicative of a desire by our young people to be helpful. It is important that we encourage and provide similar opportunities and recognize these positive efforts. It was my pleasure to work with Ann McCarthy Egan, Adjustment Counselor, and Mary Babaian, Guidance Counselor at Cohasset Jr. /Sr. High School on the recruitment effort. As a result the the following young men volunteered their time: Jeremy Tedeschi, Ben Kinch, Greg Smith, Eric Libby, Joe Niessink, Peter Kovach, Jay Bertovich, Peter Maitland, David DeVito, Tom Digan, Jeff Garber, Greg Ernst, Steve Murray, Alex Etkind, Greg Harrington, Greg Donovan, Tim Straughn, Jeremy Tedeschi, Matt Ogrodnik, Nick Laas, Brian Lewis, David Krueger, Robin Murphy,Chris Carr, Jason Moore, Jake Morgan and Nick Bolster.

To Bob Thompson and Margie Steele, Director, and all who volunteer weekly at the Food Pantry, our thanks.

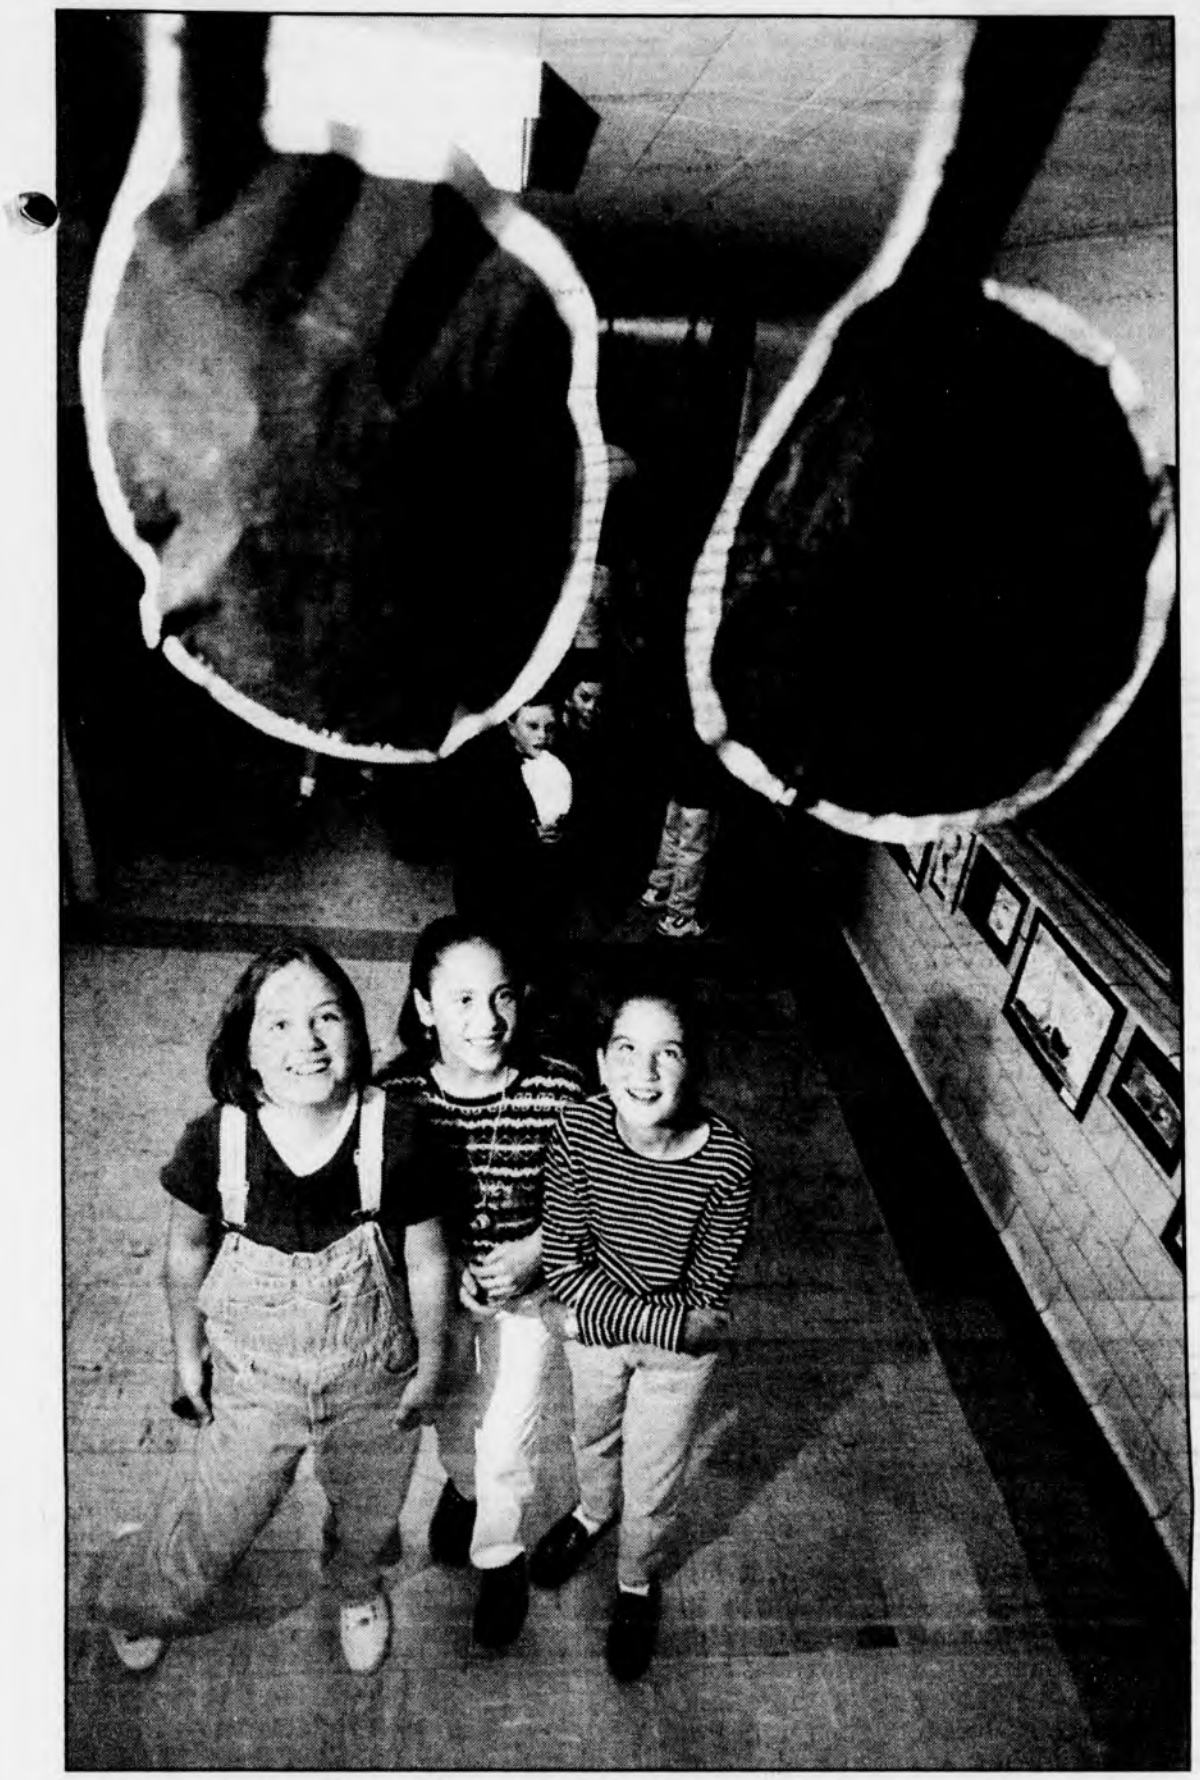
Turgiss Appreciates Support

To the Editor:

I want to thank the people who voted for me this past election. Throughout the campaign, I met so many interesting and insightful citizens who care deeply about our schools.



My campaign committee was a great group of enthusiastic, dedicated and concerned people for whom "thanks" will never be enough! In addition to my committee, there are the wonderful people who hosted coffees, put up lawn signs, held signs, worked on mailings, made phone calls and contributed financially. My husband, Robert, and daughter, Nicole, were my "at home committee," always encouraging and supportive.

Thanks to Mary Ford, Mariner editor, and Molly Hochkeppel, Patriot Ledger reporter, for moderating the School Committee Candidates Forum and keeping the community informed. I also want to thank the Chamber of Commerce for providing the candidates opportunity to listen to and address community concerns.

Sincere congratulations to Kathy Ofsthum and Joe McElroy. I wish them the best as they serve on the school committee.

Charter School

After all, the educational model that public schools currently operate under stems from recommendations made in 1892, said Diane Ellis Miles, secondary school principal at the charter school.

The 1993 Massachusetts Education Reform Act instigated a state-wide mission to "break the mold" of traditional schooling by throwing 25 experimental charter schools into the educational mix.

Since it opened for instruction in 1995, the ocean-side South Shore Charter School has been under pressure to prove that its innovative project-based learning techniques yield better student performance than the model used in traditional public schools.

"If it doesn't work within the first five years, the state pulls the plug," said South Shore Charter School CEO Tim Anderson. "But we know it's going to work. We're making real, solid progress."

The school's curriculum has undergone many changes and will continue to change for the next three years of its trial period, Miles said.

"What becomes important in this system is an emphasis on what the students are learning, rather than what the teachers are teaching," Miles said.

The school's formula for success hinges on five basic goals: getting students involved in the governance of the school, inviting parents to contribute to the overall operation of the school, emphasizing project-based learning, letting students learn at their own pace and using technology to track student progress.

According to the school's current model, students — learning at their own pace — spend the morning hours of the school day in traditional courses such as math, English and physics.

After lunch, they meet in groups to work on projects geared to integrate as many traditional school subjects as possible while putting their knowledge to the test, Miles said. Some student-designed projects include cleaning up a polluted pond, building a school in Nicaragua, raising different species of fish and reintroducing them into Boston Harbor and creating a new card game with universal rules.

"We are striving to equip our students and to help our students be prepared for life from school to a career," Miles said.

By September 1997, the school aims to transfer the focus of the school day to the student projects and use all-encompassing non-traditional courses to "fill in the gaps," she said. For example, instead of offering a traditional course in the Russian language that concentrates on grammar, vocabulary and verb conjugation, the school would introduce a course on the history, people and traditions of Russia that would be taught in Russian and would combine communication, grammar, history and geography all at the same time.

"Instead of memorizing bits of facts in one's brain, one will be learning and using," Miles explained.

Courses are taught at four different levels of instruction grouped by ability, not necessarily age. Students work in groups or individually, getting as much help as they need from teachers and according to their own pace.

"If students want more help in English, they can get it. If they want to spend more time on art, they can," Anderson said.

Primary school students start learning physics, reading and world languages — Spanish, Russian, French and sign language — in kindergarten.

Miles has introduced a grading system that stresses performance-based learning and eliminates the letter grades C and D. Students receive a grade of A, B, Incomplete or F for their work. An incomplete or F grade signifies that the student has not yet mastered the information and skills needed to proceed to the next level. Because students learn at their own pace, they do not repeat courses, but build on what they have already learned and continue to work toward accomplishing their goals, she said.

"We don't care how long it takes a student to attain. Our concern is, do they attain?" Miles said.

In the pursuit to attain, students keep a journal every day, perform 50 hours of community service each year and must score in the 60th percentile in all their subjects to graduate. By the end of the five-year trial, the school will expect their students to achieve placement in the 80th percentile nationally, Anderson said.

"The diploma has to stand for something," Anderson said.

Students are required to present updates on their projects and receive quarterly multi-page progress reports from their teachers. At the beginning and end of each school year, students take the California achievement test to measure their progress according to a nationally-recognized gauge.

In turn, students and parents rate the performance of the teachers quarterly. Teachers are hired with one-year contracts.

"We try to build a sense of ownership," he said.

And the 325 students from 23 Massachusetts communities who opt to attend the South Shore Charter School over their towns' public schools seem to thrive in what Anderson calls a "creative and energizing" learning environment.

"It's awesome," said first-year charter school student Nick MacIver, a fifth-grader from Hull who transferred from Hull Memorial. "There are more projects and group activity. Last year, I sat at a

Yard Sale to Benefit 10th Appalachia Trip

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project is sponsoring their annual yard sale, Saturday, May 17, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset (next to town hall). Items can be donated any morning from Monday through Friday. For other times or for pickup of large items by appointment, please call 383-0345. Proceeds will be used to support our 10th trip, this year to Campbell County, Tennessee, where 84 Cohasset volunteers will work to help repair and upgrade homes of needy families. Bright and early, the morning of Saturday, June 28, 48 teenagers, 12 college-age youth and 24 adults will board buses to head for Tennessee and spend the following week working on 12 homes. We will then return to Cohasset, "good-tired" and inspired, Sunday evening, July 6. To help us get there, we would appreciate your support of "treasures" and "treasure" in our up-coming yard sale. Also, please mark your calendars for our car washes as well, May 31 and June 14, also in front of Second Congregational Church.

desk and did work. Now, I can sit on the floor and do my work. It's fun. Last year, I couldn't ask any questions. The teacher wanted to move on. But now, I can ask away."

The kindergarten, first-, second- and third-grade classes have already filled up with substantial waiting lists, Anderson said. The school's population has increased by 50 students each year since it opened, he said.

A public school, the South Shore Charter School must accept students who express an interest in attending if space permits. Priority is given to Hull students — 45 percent of the school population hails from Hull — and to siblings of students already enrolled.

State money that would be applied to town public schools — about $5,400 per student — follows students who choose to attend the charter school. That issue has raised controversy in many communities who are concerned about losing students and state aid. But for the past two years, that money has been reimbursed to town public schools, Anderson said.

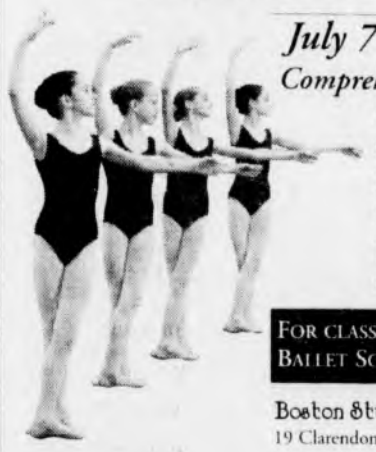
St. Stephen's Habitat Partnership

Informational Meeting on May 18

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is pleased to announce a partnership with South Shore Habitat for Humanity to build a home in Quincy. The project, initiated by the church's Outreach Committee, was unanimously approved by the Vestry on April 28. The Committee's primary objective in 1997 is to alleviate hunger and inadequate housing, and sponsorship of a Habitat house has appealed to many members of the church as a way to meet that challenge.

In addition to raising the cost of the house, $50,000, St. Stephen's has committed to providing work site crews at least one Saturday a month. The labor for the rest of the construction will be provided by South Shore Habitat.

Habitat for Humanity International was founded 21 years ago in Georgia by Millard Fuller. The fledgling organization gained a boost in visibility by the support of former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Roslyn, who continue to be actively involved. Habitat is a non-profit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry that has built more than 50,000 houses worldwide.



South Shore Habitat has built or renovated 12 houses in the past 11 years. Many people in Cohasset took part in a local Habitat project, the renovation of the Bates Building on Elm Street.

The house that St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is sponsoring will be one of 10 Habitat houses to be built on a 3.3 acre site in Quincy. Work is expected to begin in September and a partner family will be chosen at that time. The family will be selected by the Habitat board using income, need, willingness to partner with Habitat and other criteria. Partner families buy houses that are sold at no profit and are financed with affordable, no interest mortgages. In addition, they invest their own labor—500 hours of sweat equity.

Anyone interested in getting involved in the St. Stephen's project is more than welcome to come to an informational meeting to be held in Walton Rodgers Hall at 11:30 a.m., May 18, after church services or to call Willoughby Hood for further details at 383-1666.

Lacks Looks For Big Finale

Lacrosse Star Longs For Successful Tourney Run

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

It's typical that Jon Lacks' most memorable high school lacrosse game came during a contest where he didn't put any points up on the board. But it was the final result, a 9-8 win over Hingham, that really counted as far as the senior co-captain was concerned.

"They've (Hingham) been such a power for so many years and we have never come close to beating them," said Lacks. "I got a lot of attention. The did what they should have, successfully, and it worked. I came up with nothing."

Lacks typically has the opposing team's best defender on him throughout a game, trying to slow down the offense he is able to create for the Skippers. The opponents may succeed in slowing Lacks, but his presence on the field gives Cohasset an advantage.

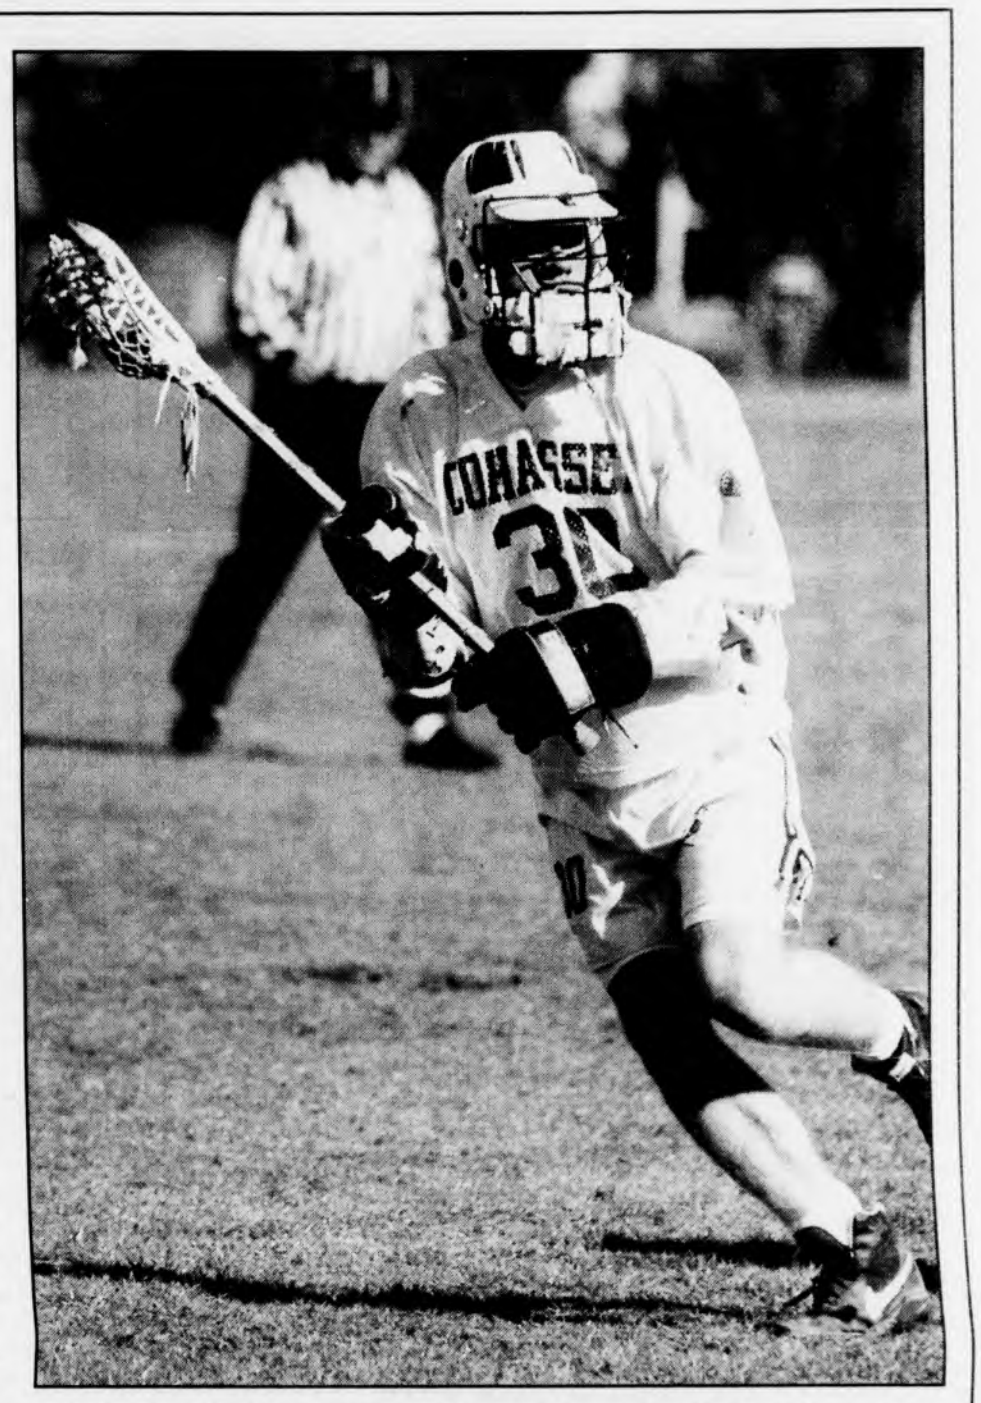
Lacks said on Sunday he expected this to be a big week for the Skippers, who were riding a 10-1 record, their only loss coming in a tough, physical game last week in the team's second meeting against Hingham. The game was extra special because it was the first night lacrosse contest ever at Cohasset High School.

"There were over 300 people there," Lacks said. "There was a definite energy and the fans gave us a lot of support."

Unfortunately, the Harbormen weren't going to let Cohasset sweep two games from them. Despite falling behind early, Hingham came back with a vengeance against the exhausted Skipper team.

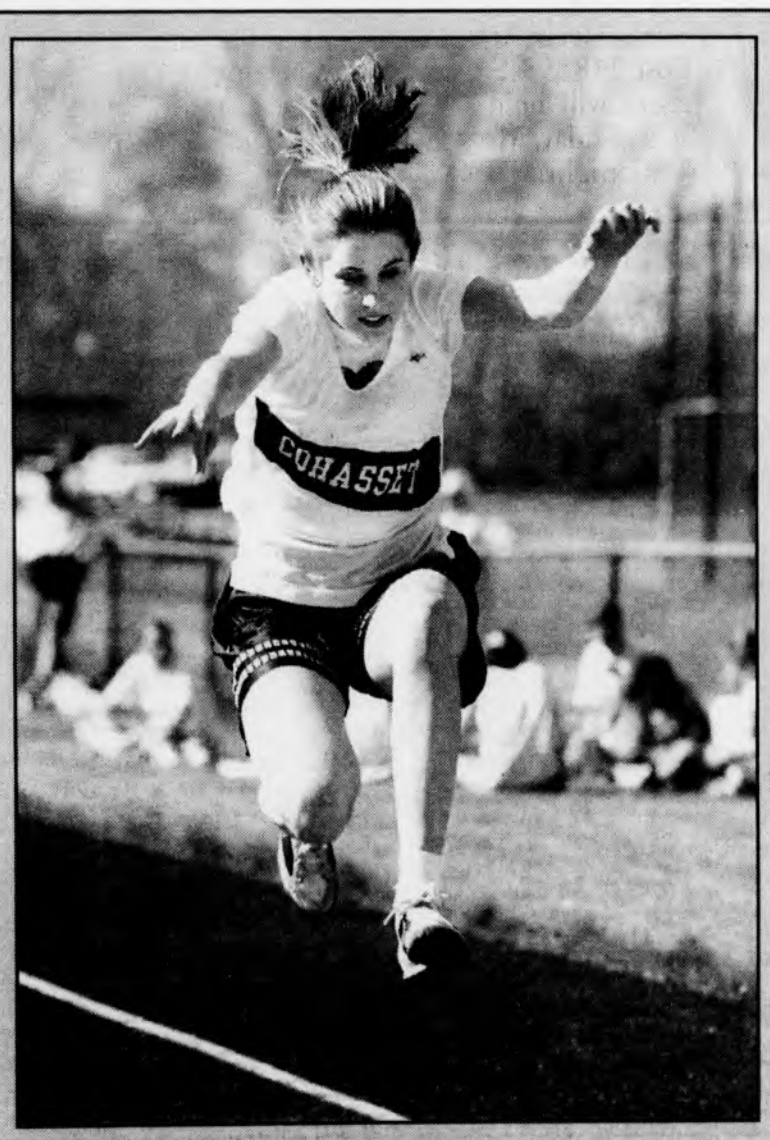
Cohasset did what it had to in the early-going, but Hingham's depth made the difference with six consecutive goals.

"Unless we don't put it to them at the beginning of the game," Lacks said, "we have tough fourth quarters."



But the game has given Lacks a rush in several ways. He likes the fast pace and aggressiveness that goes along with it, and the competitiveness of those who play. "I like the whole feel of the game," he said. "The whole sport has changed my life."

There's also that feeling of constant improvement. The program was struggling along when Lacks first started playing and it slowly developed into a legitimate power. Cohasset has the distinction of being the smallest school to qualify for the postseason on a consistent basis. It wasn't an easy ride up, but it has its rewards.



"It has been fun playing on a team that started off tough and has improved over the years," Lacks said.

Lacks is hoping the Skippers can earn a first-round bye this week with tough league games against Duxbury, Sandwich and Falmouth. What Lacks knows

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

Anglers Spring on Stocked Ponds and Rivers

A silken arc of spiders' web shoots across the surface of the pond and settles gently onto its surface. The minuscule hook on the end drags a wriggling meal worm into the depths. Soundlessly the rod whips into a bow as a fat trout inhales the worm below. The hiss of the drag quiets slowly and after a few minutes a colorful trout lays on the wet sand. The 1997 fishing season has begun.

For anglers all over Massachusetts the stocking of ponds rivers and streams signals the arrival of Spring. The stocking trucks have made their rounds and trout have been deposited by the net full in local streams and ponds.

In Hingham the Weir River and Plymouth River are stocked. Cohasset and Scituate share the bounty in Bound Brook as well as Tack Factory Pond in Scituate. Norwell's Norris Reservation and Third Herring Brook are famous. Further afield the Indian Head River, straddling Hanover and Pembroke, the South River in Marshfield, and Whitman's Pond in Weymouth each see a healthy stocking of brookies rainbows and browns. The ponds of Plymouth, of which Littles and Long may be most well-known, also have had salmon stock introduced again this year. A nine and 1/2 pounder made it to the scale already.

Many of these waters that are stocked with trout and most other ponds in the area contain a wide variety of warm water fish. When the sun warms the water in spring, pickerel and perch are usually the first to be seen. As the water climbs above 50 degrees, large and small mouth bass lose their sluggishness. Crappies, sunnies, and bluegills can next be see nesting in small gravelly bowls along the shore.

Early spring fishing is more productive with bait. Bass can be observed staring at a fat shiner for minutes at a time. It almost seems that the cold temperatures slow the bass' recognition of food. Finally when it does register the bass will eat. It makes you think that using lures on cold-water bass can be mighty frustrating: that sure-fire Rapala that caught you the big one last year is coming up empty after a couple dozen casts. Imagine if you will the cold slow brain of the bass as the lure wiggles by. Two casts later over promising water and the bass' brain finally registers food. Have faith in that lure, though, in a couple weeks the water will warm, brains will unthaw, and the bass will again "whack" their share of lures.

Parents Have to Let Kids be Kids

Maybe it's me who's living in the dark ages. After all, young kids are involved in, and excelling at every sport imaginable these days. It takes a lot of commitment, but they love what they're doing.

The trouble is, many of them won't be competing in anything for much longer, thanks to parents who don't have a brain in their head.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not referring to all parents, not even the majority. The parents I have seen at youth events are caring, intelligent people who want their children to enjoy sports. Whether they win or lose doesn't seem to matter as long as their children leave the field with smiles on their faces.

What their goal is for their children to come away from the sport with a positive feeling towards it — a happy memory to look back on when they are older. These are the kids who, more often than not, are the ones who wind up excelling at the high school and college level. Their parents should be applauded for not putting any pressure on their kids. For young kids, having fun should be the name of the game.

Hey, if Rick Pitino wants his Boston Celtics players, who earn millions of dollars, to have fun on the basketball court, why on earth should a youngster be deprived of the same chance? And remember, Pitino is one of, if not the, most respected coach in basketball, college and pro. What's more he's a great motivator. Who are we to question Pitino's philosophy?

But there are parents who make sports the end all, be all of their children's existence.

I met one in particular just last week. Along with soccer and basketball, his 12-year-old daughter will be running

Big Finale

Cohasset must do is avoid the mental mistakes that have plagued the team this season. He has no doubt, however, the squad is aiming for a strong seed in the postseason.

"We have to stay out of the penalty box," Lacks said. "Our team's more united than it's ever been. Everybody is ready and willing to take on the challenge. Everybody's pulling their weight and that's definitely making the difference."

For Lacks, the high school season is an extension of the lacrosse he plays year-round. This past winter he played in the High School National Indoor Lacrosse Tourney with teammate, goaltender Ely Kahn. The pair were selected from their winter team and faced some strong competition.

"We were definitely playing against the best Division 1 players," Lacks said. "We could hold our own. I think lacrosse in this part of the country is getting as strong as anywhere in the country."

Lacks serves as a liaison between the rest of the lineup and head coach Ken Ekberg in running the offense. Lacks holds Ekberg in high regard and respects the coach's desire to win.

"He's a really unique coach," Lacks said. "He has the real determination to win. He'll bark at you, but it's never anything personal. Coach just wants to make us better players."

When this season ends, both Lacks and Kahn will head up to Green Mountain College in Vermont for two weeks to help coach at the Top Gun Lacrosse Camp. Directed by college coaches and players, the camp features some of the most promising high school players in the country.

Lacks and Kahn both attended the camp as players, but this is the first year they'll be coaching. Lacks is already looking forward to it and can definitely see himself in a coaching capacity after he is done playing lacrosse.

"That's something I'd really like to do," Lacks said. "I love the technical part of the game."

Lacks was recruited by several colleges, but wound up picking Providence College, where former Cohasset star Ken Leahy played. Lacks is looking to the college experience with excitement. And for the first time in Cohasset lacrosse history, three players, Lacks, Kahn and Matt Belson, will be playing Division 1 lacrosse.

No matter how the season ends up, Lacks will look back on his years on the lacrosse field nostalgically.

"A lot of the seniors on this team all picked up sticks together," Lacks said. "We've developed so much and we've all done it together.

"It's been a great ride."

No Post Season For Diamond Kings

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Skippers varsity baseball team (4-11), whose tournament aspirations have been dwindling for weeks now, finally found itself mathematically eliminated from postseason play with this week's 7-2 loss to Hull.

Despite a two-hit effort from Greg Taylor and solid pitching, particularly in the late innings, Cohasset found itself plagued by problems which have hampered it all season long. The Skippers have been inconsistent, piecing together two or three good innings, but usually too late to make a difference. Also, no player has repeatedly turned it up a notch to make the big play.

On Monday, Cohasset was crushed by the Hanover Indians, losing 16-3 at home. Pat Hurley pitched three beautiful innings to close it out, but the damage had been done. Senior Rob Buckley collected two hits, but he stood alone in Cohasset's lackluster offensive effort.

After making tournament last year, the Skippers had high expectations for this season. After losing two players from the team, Cohasset's talent level dropped and its wins dropped with it. However, with five games remaining in the season, the Skippers have reason to believed that solid pitching and slowly awakening bats could help them win those games.

Cohasset Summer Hockey Sign Up

Summer hockey sign-ups for Squirts and Bantams will be Tuesday, May 20, from 7:30 to 8 p.m. at Deerhill School. These are tryout teams. Tryouts will be May 31 at Babson College from 1:10 to 2 p.m. Cost to sign up will be $10. If interested in playing at these levels, call Bob Moody at 383-0385.

Little League Dance

The annual Little League dance and fund raiser will be held on May 17 at Kimball's by the Sea from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. There will be hor d'oeuvres and a silent auction. Music will be provided by "The Greatful Dads." Tickets are $25. For tickets or donations to the auction, contact Kevin Lewis at 383-2076.

'Kick-A-Thon' to Benefit New Foundation

A kung fu 'Kick-A-Thon' event is scheduled to be held Friday, May, 16 at Jade Forest Kung Fu/ Tai Chi in Cohasset. Students and staff members participants will range in age from four to. . .well quite a bit older. Proceeds from the Kick-A-Thon will be donated to Project Action Foundation, Inc., a non-profit corporation which provides scholarships in dance, gymnastics, and martial arts to underprivileged children and youngsters 'at risk'. As a Project Action sponsor studio, Jade Forest supports the foundation's goal of providing such youngsters the opportunity to benefit from positive role models, peer support, and self esteem in a healthy, secure, and supportive environment.

During the Kick-A-Thon, students of all ages and levels of skill will execute basic martial arts kicks as well as some of the more difficult and advanced kicking techniques of kung fu. Scott Jeffery, Assistant Head Instructor at Jade Forest, and a nationally rated competitor on the tournament circuit will 'kick off' the event, beginning at 5:30 p.m. All students participating will have collected donations from sponsors for 100 the kicks they will perform. Additional donations can also be made by members of the public wishing to lend their support at this exciting event.

Project Action Foundation seeks to reduce the underlying causes of juvenile crime and antisocial behavior through new and innovative approaches. Youngsters deemed appropriate candidates for participation in Project Action's program must earn their way through regular attendance, academic accountability and good behavior, all of which are closely monitored.

For further information about this event, or to learn more about the programs at Jade Forest please contact John Loupos at (617) 383-6822.

He gave me a copy of her soccer schedule, complete with practices and tournaments. He then added that any other commitments that may happen to fall on these particular dates will fall by the wayside. No questions asked.

So when does this cute little 12 year old rest? She has about four days from the end of summer soccer to the beginning of the junior high preseason practices, the last week of August. Now take a shot in the dark in guessing who her coach is. That's right. Dad started the program at her school and is working to build it up to the point where the team can enter an official league.

This, however, is all tame compared to that big race in August. Falmouth, if you've never run it, is an absolute beautiful course. Winding roads traverse through tree-lined streets for the first three miles before the runners hit the wide-open thoroughfare of Surf Drive. This is the flattest section of the course. The final three-quarters of a mile head uphill before a forgiving downhill to the finish.

As scenic a course as Falmouth is, it's not an easy one, not even for the most prepared runners. World-class runners, including Bill Rodgers, Alberto Salazar and Frank Shorter have all had their problems on the course. The heat can be unbearable, and Shorter has said on several occasions that the course is "a lot tougher than you'd think."

For a 12 year old to be running Falmouth, I don't care whether it's a boy or girl, is irresponsible on the parents' part. And they can rationalize it all they want with their little spin of how much their kids "enjoy" the day and how the race is a great take in for the family.

The fact is, nitwits, your children's bones and muscles are still growing and aren't strong enough to handle the pounding of seven miles. Even worse, the majority of these kids actually train for the race.

I have no doubt these parents care for their kids. Do them a favor. If they're interested in road races, head over to the Woodsdale School in Abington for the Colonial Roadrunners' weekly 3.2-mile fun run. On Saturday mornings, there's always the 2.5-mile loop around Fresh Pond in Cambridge. Have them run the half, mile or two mile in age-group track meets. They can compete against kids their own age and drastically reduce the risk of injury.

Believe me, nobody remembers what a runner does as a 12 year old when studies have shown they reach their peak as late as their mid-30s. Do your kid a favor. Take it easy on them and keep it fun.

Herring runs are in full swing now with the annual return of this silvery staple of the oceanic food chain. Right behind them are the heralding run of schoolie stripers, the rats, small 4-6 pound fish. Several spots are hot and the anglers are on them like flies. Black's Creek at the south end of Wollaston Beach, the Back River, Weir River, the Gulph, the Foster Road bridge, First Herring Brook, the North River at Damon's Point, the South River above the Bridgewaye, Duxbury Bay at the back channel are all giving up schoolie's from time to time. A wide variety of lures are successful. Gag's famous Mambo Minnow, Bombers, Rebels, Kastmasters, are among the most commonly used. Some anglers test their skills with fresh water gear on these early arrivals. The best bait at this point appears to be seaworms drifted in the current. John Tedeschi had a busy evening the tide floating them under the Mill Bridge in Cohasset. Fly fishermen are already working the beach under the Charthouse and the grassy marshes of the Gulph and the North River.

As I wrap up for the week I can only smile as a local lobsterman is relating seeing huge schools marked on his fishfinder at about 20 feet. Sounds like the mackerel are here.

Catch one that's hard to carry.

Phonathon Starts Next Week

The PSO annual Phonathon has been scheduled for May 20 and 21. Calls will be made between the hours of 7 and 9 p.m.

Last year, more than $7,000 was raised. With these funds the PSO was able to buy uniforms for the high school band, interior security gates at Deer Hill and fund all teacher grants (e.g. speakers, class publications, field trips). The pledges will be for the 1997-1998 school year.

Post Prom Committee Seeks Support

The Post Prom Breakfast Committee for the graduating seniors has come up with some ideas to make this year's event the best ever.

The breakfast will be held this year at the Second Congregational Church and has traditionally been well attended by the seniors in past years. This year, along with the delicious food which is provided by the parents of the attendees, the committee would like to offer a little more to keep the prom-goers entertained.

"We were thrilled with the number of parents who are willing to help out this year and the support from the school has been great, too" reports co-chair Donna O'Donnell. "However, some of the ideas would require more money than we presently have available for this event."

Community support for this breakfast would be very much appreciated to help fund the surprise entertainment. The committee is looking for cash donations in the range of $15.

"The main focus is to keep the students safe and away from danger. Prom night is always a worry for parents and post prom activities have become a big part of the prom night festivities in order to keep the teens out of their cars and away from drugs and alcohol," said co-chair Debbie Niessink.

If you would like to help the committee provide a safe, fun night for the prom-goers, please consider sending a donation to the Post-Prom Breakfast Committee. Checks may be made payable to Donna O'Donnell and mailed to her at 196 Fairoaks Lane.

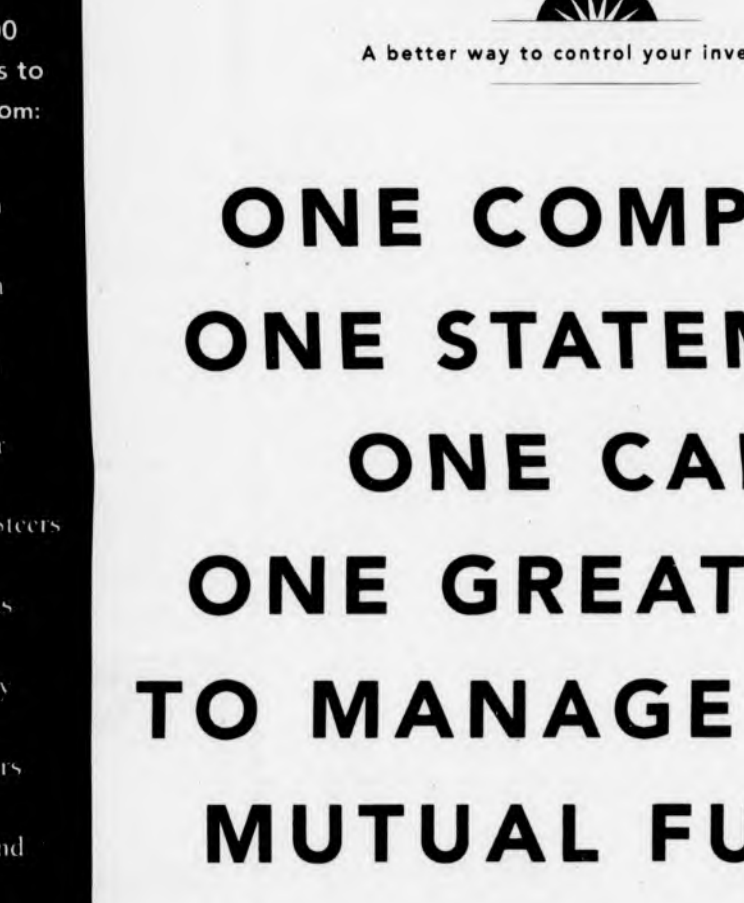
INVESTING: Calculating total portfolio return

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

How do you gauge the success of your investments? You probably check how much your stocks have appreciated or eye the interest paid on your bonds. Maybe you even quantify them with tangible equivalents—a car, a house, a vacation, etc. With these methods you may be getting only a partial picture. And how do you compare returns on different kinds of investments? Two components make up the profit of most investments: income (dividends or interest) and capital gains (price appreciation). And factored together, they can give you the most accurate and universal measure for assessing performance: total return. Total return is simply the percentage gain you've gotten on the money you invested.

Here's how to calculate total return. Let's say you bought 100 shares of a $10 stock (a $1,000 investment), and it paid out an annual dividend of $1 a share. A year later the stock's value had risen to $15 a share. In terms of capital gains, you've earned $500 ($1,500 minus $1,000). Add to that the $100 in dividends you received ($1 paid for each 100 shares), and your total gain is $600. Now, to convert your gain into a percentage, divide what you earned ($600) by your original investment ($1,000); you get 0.6. Move the decimal point to the right two places to make it a percentage, and the total return is 60 percent—not a hard calculation to make. (You can calculate total return with fixed-income investments the same way: Add the price appreciation of the bond to its interest payments, and divide that by the starting price of the bond. Of course, any price depreciation can offset income, so it's possible to have a negative rate of return.) Now you could go on to compare the percentage of return for the above stock to the percentage of return for any of the mutual funds or bonds you own and find out which gave you the best return on your money.



"Investors need [total return] to make intelligent decisions," said John Markese, president of the American Association of Individual Investors (or AAII) in Chicago. Despite the seemingly infallible logic of focusing on total return percentages instead of dollar amounts, many individual investors don't use it as an investment tool.

One reason may be that most money-management firms and brokerage houses—for example, two of the largest discount brokerages, Charles Schwab and Fidelity Investments—don't include it in their monthly reports. Financial firms in general "don't want to have the liability or the exposure of actually telling their customers what their rate of return is," if they have miscalculated, or their products have lost money, says Markese. And convention may also be to blame. Investors, after all, don't insist on having money managers or brokers tally their total return because they don't see it used much on Wall Street. But percentages do paint a clearer picture. The difference, for instance, between the Dow's gaining 100 points to reach 3000 and 100 points to reach 7000 is the difference between an advance of 3.45 percent and one of 1.45 percent.

While investors can calculate their own total returns, the math gets trickier if they actively add and withdraw money from their investments. Say an investor buys more shares of Microsoft toward the end of the month, and she wants to calculate the stock's total return for that month. Does it make sense for her to count all of the late purchase with her base investment at the beginning of the month when calculating total return? Not really. The AAII supplies a standard formula for calculating total return in such cases; the formula, for the sake of simplicity, assumes that all additions are made midway through the period. The equation may seem like hocus-pocus—or at least like a complex equation—to most investors, but essentially it does what the first, albeit simpler, calculation does: divides what you earned by what you started with. The equation differs in that it factors in net additions (that is, additions to the account minus any withdrawals) into your beginning and ending balances. One of the pitfalls of this method is that if you add money to or subtract it from your account at the end or beginning of the month, your total return may be off by a fraction of a point, says Markese.

Two components make up the profit of most investments: income (dividends or interest) and capital gains (price appreciation). And factored together, they can give you the most accurate and universal measure for assessing performance: total return.

Here's how the calculation works. Let's say the Microsoft investor mentioned above began the month with $1,300 worth of the software company's shares and ends the month owning $2,000 worth. Take that ending balance plus any income that has not been reinvested (in this case, there is none, because Microsoft doesn't pay out a dividend). Subtract half of any net additions that were made from that total. So let's say she bought $500 worth of Microsoft and sold $100 during the month, making her net addition $400—half of which is $200. And $2,000 minus $200 is $1,800. That's the first part of the equation. Now take the beginning balance plus half of the net additions ($1,300 plus $200 equals $1,500), and subtract it from $1,800. That $300 is what the investor earned last month. As with the previous total-return calculation, divide the beginning balance and, in this case, half the net addition into what was earned. So $300 divided by $1,500 equals .20, or 20 percent.

If you aren't comfortable with this pencil-and-paper method of finding total return, software programs exist that can calculate it and even go to the exact decimal point by taking into account exactly when deposits and withdrawals were made. In any case, don't ignore total return. Use it as your investment ruler. And with a certain amount of coaxing, eventually your money managers and brokers may also.

Calling All Gardeners

If you drove by the South Shore Community Center last week you saw many busy workers sprucing up the grounds.

It is the plan to continue working on the grounds under the direction of Barbara Anglin, the Secret Gardener, and Karen Kirkendall. Plans are to plant a flowering border on Depot Court along the chain link fence. Any of the following listed plants, or any others that you have to share, are needed.

Bonica Roses, New Dawn Shrub Roses, Caryopteris Shrub, Foxglove, Coreopsis (Moonbeam), Japanese Anenome, Echinolea (white and purple), Lavender, Yarrow (pastels), Russian Sage, Creeping Phlox, Phlox, Blue Fescue Grass, Longwort, Soapwort, Peonies, Clematis.

Other items that are needed for this project are: nine yards of compost, 15 to 20 roses (Bonica and New Dawn Shrubs), 25 lbs. of bonemeal, two large containers of Ortho Systemic Rose Fertilizer, and various bulbs.

Please drop anything off at the center by June 5 or call 383-0088 if you would like to help fund this project. The Rose Shrub will cost $10 each.

Hats off to the following volunteers on the project: Anna Abbruzzese, Peter Laugelle, Linda McCarthy, Sarah Marmo, Karen Kirkendall, Chanticleers (Men's Breakfast Club), the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and Mike Bleakie, Barbara Anglin and Dean Rizzo.

Teens Raise Money for Breast Cancer Research

A teen choral group "Allegra" will perform a benefit concert Sunday, May 18, at 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset to raise money for breast cancer research. "Allegra" was formed in 1995 to promote ensemble singing among young women and to provide community service. "We've had two wonderful seasons", says founder and choral director Ann Whiteley. "The group has been well received at the Rotary Club, St. Stephen's Church, Second Congregational Church, CHS Pops and the Valentine Cabaret."

Seventeen young women in grades eight through 12 perform a variety of musical styles from William Byrd to Neil Sedaka. Accompaniments will be provided on piano, flute and cello by young women as well. "We decided that donations to our final concert would benefit breast cancer research to heighten awareness for a very critical women's issue," said Whiteley. "I get tired of reading about the many problems that teenagers are involved in. This group shows a productive use of their time, talents and energy."

Tickets are not required and checks may be made payable to the American Cancer Society. The members of the group are all from Cohasset. They are: Holly Brennock, Katie Buckley, Jami Butman, Carolyn Cameron, Mareth Collins-Wooley, Jane Flaherty, Grace Gardner, Lydia Guild, Lindy Holway, Elizabeth Ingber, Alison Kinchia, Ashley Koed, Bree McKenney, Elizabeth Myers, Sarah Pease, Kelly Tufts, Megan Whiteley.

Lightkeeper's House to Hold Open House May 26

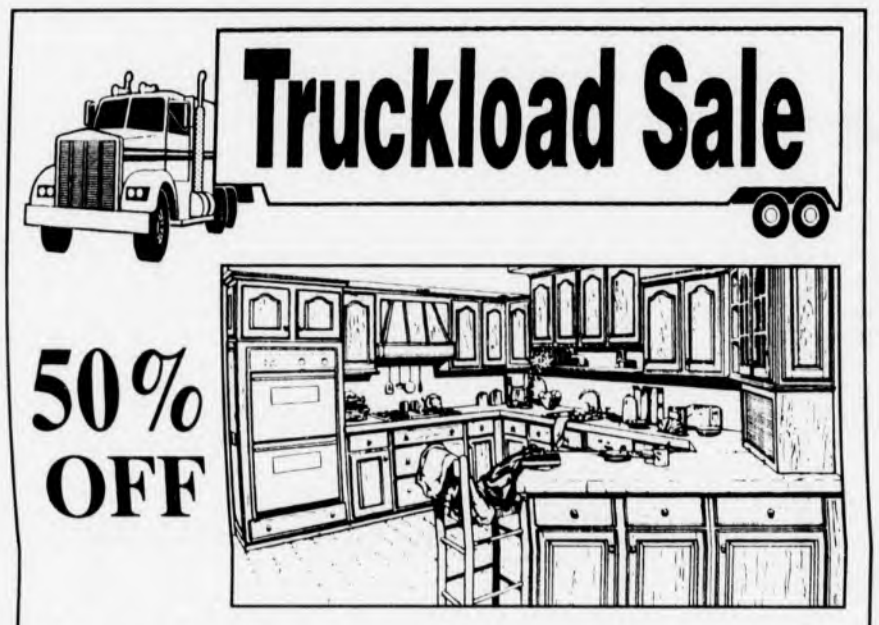
The board members of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation will host a family open house and picnic after the Memorial Day parade May 26.

CLC board members will serve all-American hot dogs and soft drinks at no charge. Grills and charcoal will be available for those who bring their own picnics. It is hoped this will become an annual event at the close of Memorial Day services.

The Lightkeeper's House is ideally situated on Government Island near the Veterans Park where the final speeches are given and the flag raised. The view is lovely, and people have a chance to reflect on the beauty of Cohasset, the contributions veterans have made, and to enjoy the camaraderie of their neighbors.

The latest plans for the Learning Lab, which is sponsored by the CLC, will be on display and members of the board will provide additional information.

Reception Honoring Mrs. Price



Cohasset kindergarten teacher Marie Price will retire at the end of the school year. All students, past and present, and parents are cordially invited to an open house reception in her honor Sunday, June 1, at the Second Congregational Church (next to town hall), from 2 to 4 p.m. The room mothers are collecting contributions for a Memory Book for Mrs. Price.

All former students are asked to submit a message on an 8 1/2 x 11" sheet of paper to the boxes in the offices at each school building, or bring to the reception. Your contribution can take any format. For example, it could be a drawing, a letter, "then" and "now" pictures or a special story. Be sure to include your name and the year you had Mrs. Price. Also, help us spread the word, especially among older students and returning college students.

Nursery School Yard Sale Set

Author/Illustrator Signing

Children's author/illustrator Karen Lee Baker will draw and sign copies of her new book, "Seneca," Saturday, May 17, from 10 a.m. to noon at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset.

Seneca, the main character of this beautiful picture book, is the perfect horse — friendly and handsome, fun and full of spirit. The young narrator knows he is the horse for her. Grooming, feeding and cleaning are requirements for owning your own horse — but having fun is, too. Galloping in fields, jumping logs and sharing tranquil rides are all part of enjoying your horse.

Call Buttonwood at 383-2665 for more information or to order your signed copy.

Pops '97 is May 17

When conductor John Corley brings down his baton for the final crashing climax of John Philip Sousa's "Stars And Stripes", it will mark the end not only of the Hingham civic orchestra's "Pops '97" Concert, but also the final concert of Mr. Corley's 26-year reign as the orchestra's conductor and musical director.

During that time, Corley, who assumed the leadership of the orchestra in 1976, has conducted the orchestra in every conceivable type of concert; classical, candlelight and yuletide concerts in New North and Old Ship churches, original children's concerts including 27 clowns, spectacular ballets, a magical "Night in Old Vienna" and many others too numerous to mention.

The orchestra's "conductor search committee" will have a difficult task filling the void left by Mr. Corley's retirement.

The final concert, "Pops '97," will be held Saturday evening, May 17, at 8 p.m., at the Old Ship parish hall, 107 Main St., Hingham. Among the compositions to be presented will be the "March of the Toreadors" from "Carmen," "Arkansas Traveler," a Strauss waltz, "Guys and Dolls," and "Bugler's Holiday," featuring the Hingham Civic Orchestra trumpeters.

Tickets are $10 and reservations are suggested. Call 749-4411 (eves. only through May 12), 925-1311 thereafter.

Cohasset Police Celebrate the Jimmy Fund's 50th Anniversary

The Massachusetts Chiefs of Police and communities across the state have been instrumental in supporting the Jimmy Fund and the search for a cure for cancer for 50 years. To continue this tradition and in celebration of the 50-year anniversary of the Jimmy Fund and Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, the Cohasset Police Department is launching its 1997 Jimmy Fund Canister Drive.

"Jimmy Fund canisters will be on display in local businesses in the region from now throughout the 1997 Red Sox season," Chief Brian Noonan said. "We have always relied on the generosity of the businesses and residents of Cohasset to make our fund-raising for the fight against cancer a success."

Featuring the slogan, "Your Spare Change Can Change the Future," the canisters entreat stores' patrons to "...join the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police and the Jimmy Fund in their support of doctors and researchers who are searching to find a cure for cancer."

Fifty years ago, a radio appeal broadcast nationwide introduced the country to a 12-year old named "Jimmy." Jimmy was sick and in the hospital, though he didn't know why — all he wanted was a TV so he could watch his favorite baseball team. However, the audience knew that Jimmy had cancer. Money to help him poured in from all over the country and that's how the Jimmy Fund was born.

"It's hard to believe that in the 1940's, when the Jimmy Fund was founded, cancer was a disease only whispered about," said Mike Andrews, chairman and executive director of the Jimmy Fund. "It was a time when almost everyone suffering from cancer, children and adults alike, died. Fifty years of generous donations later and everyone's chances have improved — cancer death rates are finally declining and cure rates for some forms of childhood cancers are as high as 80 percent."

But the battle is still being waged. Every day, scientists at Dana-Farber, a recognized world leader in cancer care and research, are uncovering new ways to attack cancer and they need your help now more than ever. Please join the Cohasset Police Department and the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association on the front lines of this fight.

For more information about how to help, call police chief Brian W. Noonan at 383-1055.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 97P0968E1

Estate of MARY E. BARNICLE late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that PETER J. BARNICLE, III of COHASSET be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 28, 1997.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this fourteenth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-seven.

Scouting News

Girl Scout Registration is Today

Girl Scout Registration for next year will be held on Thursday, May 15 from 6:30 to 8:00 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. Registration is $7.00.

Registration is for all girls: Daisy girls are in Kindergarten (by Fall 1997); Brownies are in 1st, 2nd, and 3rd grades (Osgood); Juniors are in 4th, 5th, 6th grades (Deerhill). Cadettes and Seniors are in 7th-12th grades (Middle and High School),

The current ten troops in town welcome new girls. We are always seeking new volunteers.

The Daisy troops meet once a month and will need new leaders.

For more information, contact Mary McElroy 383-0505 or Terry James 383-9173.

Cohasset Pack 38 Cub Scouts

Tuesday, April 15, four Webelos II scouts crossed over into Boy Scouts. They will join Cohasset Troop 28, headed by Scout Master Phil Lehr. The candle lighting ceremony was held during the Cub Scout pack meeting at Deer Hill that evening. Boy Scout Robbie Lehr helped to light the 12 candles on the 50-year-old candelabra which Arthur Lehr helped to make when he was a Boy Scout. Each candle signifies a part of the Boy Scout Law. After the candles were lit Scott McArthur, David Santiago and Nicholas Barnes (Jonathan Degruchy was absent) had their Webelos neckties exchanged for Boy Scout ties and then they individually crossed over a bridge reciting the Boy Scout Law. They were greeted on the "Boy Scout side" by Phil Lehr and their parents and were presented with Boy Scout hats.

Troop 28 has been very active with five to six campouts during the year as well as a weekend ski trip to New Hampshire. Two campouts have been planned for May as well as a week-long camping trip in June. The Boy Scouts also participate in a statewide clean-up of beaches each fall and use Bassings Beach in Cohasset as their base, camping in tents on the beach.

Also attending the pack meeting was The Rev. Gary Ritts who presented Webelos I Scouts Jack Carroll and Jim DeGiacomo with their God and Country religious medals. Rev. Ritts had worked with Jack and Jim over the three-month period it took them to complete the requirements for this medal.

'Eleanor Roosevelt' to Speak with Girl Scouts

The Cohasset Junior and Cadette Girl Scout Troops and the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs are jointly sponsoring an Ice Cream Social with Eleanor Roosevelt portrayed by actress Elena Dowd. She will represent Mrs. Roosevelt in her years as the First Lady. The event will be at the Cohasset Lightkeepers' House on June 4 at 2:30 p.m.

The Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and Bergson's are contributors. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Tickets are $5.00. They are available at the Cohasset Elder Affairs Office at 3 North Main Street, Cohasset(383-9112), or by calling Mary McElroy(383-0505).

The Artist's Son Introduces Christopher Gallery

The Artist's Son Gallery and Picture Framer will formally introduce the inception of the Christopher Gallery. The Christopher Gallery, located at Jonathan Livingston Square, on Route 3A, in Cohasset, is establishing itself as a nationally known fine art gallery offering representational, traditional paintings by contemporary artists.

A double feature event is planned for Saturday, May 17. The public is invited to attend a dual life painting demonstration by artists John Kilroy and Clement Micarelli. The artists will paint a model dressed in renaissance costume in the afternoon from noon to 4 p.m. There will be an open house in the evening from 6 to 9 p.m. where the public is invited to view the paintings and visit with several of the gallery artists.

Regular gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Collectors, students and browsers are welcome to visit our ongoing selection of paintings by well-known artists including Francis Golden, Lois Griffel, Robert Douglas Hunter, Michael Lynch, Kevin MacPherson and William F. Reese.

For more information, call (800) 383-1801.

Selectmen Hung Up in Lobster Lab

Process Stalled Over Text of Proposal

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

For the third week in a row, selectmen grappled with how to handle the request for proposal (RFP) for the former Cohasset Colonials showroom on the Hagerty Property.

Repeated requests from town counsel for guidance on the matter yielded little this week, as the board continued to appear confused over how to proceed.

Town meeting in March approved leasing the Victorian house to a non-profit organization for the purpose of developing a "lobster lab," an educational, research facility there.

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, which leases the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island from the town, plans to manage and refurbish the building.

Lobster Lab director Kevin Ulmer plans to lease the top floor from the Lightkeepers for his own business.

At issue is how much detail should be included in the RFP.

Selectmen are split on the matter, with Merle Brown leading the charge to have the RFP be similar to the one issued for the lightkeepers residence. That RFP was a fairly simple document with "non-boiler plate" issues

Businesses Long for Village Station Study

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

A train station in Cohasset Village isn't such a bad concept, at least from the point of view of a number of local businesses owners.

The business community wants more of a say in what will happen with the Greenbush Line restoration project and are suggesting that a station might be better in the village rather than on Route 3A.

The MBTA plans to build the commuter rail station on Route 3 and has the blessing of selectmen and a large number of residents. But business people would like the town to reopen the station discussion and at least study the viability of a village location.

Dean Rizzo, chairman of the town's Greenbush mitigation committee and a member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, supports a station in the village.

Officials Split on Train Meeting

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Town officials met with Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes and MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan May 15 to discuss Greenbush mitigation issues that were previously rejected by T environmental affairs manager Andrew Brennan.

The meeting was arranged by Brennan to ask Kerasiotes and Moynihan to reconsider a list of mitigation items. But town officials who attended the meeting are split on what the MBTA is now agreeing to do.

Attending the meeting were selectmen Diane Sullivan and Merle Brown, conservation commission members Veneta Roebuck and Thomas Callahan, Greenbush mitigation committee members Dean Rizzo and Michael Dick, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, Brennan and T project manager Robert Egan.

Rizzo said Kerasiotes clearly agreed to several of the town's mitigation requests.

"I thought it went very well," Rizzo said. "I thought Mr. Kerasiotes was very receptive to our requests and concerns. He expressed a desire and willingness to

Osgood Reuse Progress Reported

A survey mailed to all residents will help determine what should be done with the 70-year-old Osgood School on Ripley Road.

Joanne Adkins, chairman of the Osgood School Reuse Committee, asked selectmen for $1,700 to pay for postage and photocopying.

She also said the committee would like to hire a consultant for about $9,000 to conduct a marketing feasibility study which would look at and attach a value to a range of potential uses.

Possibilities include single-family homes, condominiums, affordable housing and an assisted-living facility.

Adkins said the survey would seek residents' ideas on whether the uses should be "owner versus rental, or senior versus family."

She explained that if single family homes at the site were developed, the building would have to be demolished. Other options might involve demolishing part of the building.

Adkins said the committee has solicited input from developers with experience in the reuse of schools and would now like to move ahead with the survey and study.

"We are not married to any idea. We'd like to go to the town and say 'these are the options,'" she said.

Selectmen voted 4-1 to approve the $1,700 request. Saying she could support a lesser figure, Selectman Diane C. Sullivan cast the dissenting vote. Diane Sullivan suggested having the surveys go out with the water bills or other town bill as a way to cut costs. This idea was not supported by the other selectmen because of timing issues (bills are sent out quarterly) and how to get the surveys to the 350 homes in North Cohasset which are on Hingham water.

Selectmen agreed that the $9,000 request for a consultant should wait until the fall town meeting.

"My feeling is the town should make that decision,"Selectman Merle Brown said.

The Osgood School will close at the end of the 1997-1998 school year and will be replaced by a new elementary school to be built behind the Deer Hill School off Sohier Street.

Litchfield Gets Raise

Selectmen awarded DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield, whose annual salary is $47,000, a 5 percent raise this week.

The praised Litchfield, who was formerly the highway surveyor, for having done a great job in his first year at the helm of the new department of public works.

Music Circus License Renewed

Selectmen renewed the Sunday and entertainment licenses at the South Shore Music Circus this week.

"We will continue in our effort to assist the community and to be good neighbors," Music Circus general manager Vincent Longo told selectmen at their meeting Monday.

The annual liquor license at the Music Circus was renewed in January.

Three Boards to Meet June 2

Selectmen will ask the board of health and sewer commissioners to meet with them June 2 to iron out communication issues surrounding the "second amended agreement for judgement," the town/state sewer and septic agreement.

In a letter to selectmen, the health board complained of a lack of communication and void in leadership on the matter.

The board said the engineer for the project has provided contradictory information on which board should submit the limited septic system management paln to the state which is required under the agreement for judgement.

"Someone must determine who will submit the plan and to who it is to be submitted," the health board wrote.

"Communication among the three boards is still sorely lacking and needs to be improved if the town is to discharge its obligations in accordance with the judgement."

Flag Pole, wall to be painted

Advisory Committee Chairman Roger Whitley reminded selectmen Monday that the flag pole on the town common and outside wall on the new section of town hall need painting. He said drapes are also needed in the town hall auditorium.

"The building inspector talked to me and didn't want to see the fiscal year end without the money available being used," Whitley said. At the end of the fiscal year, unspent money goes into the general fund.

Whitley said there is money is the gift account and town hall fund for the painting projects. There is left over money in a warrant article for the auditorium improvments.

"I'm just dropping the problems into your lap," Whitley said.

Selectman Merle Brown assured Whitley that he would work with building inspector Robert Egan on the three projects.

"I didn't want these projects to be forgotten," Whitley said.

Commission Questions Building Addition

Conservation commission members questioned whether they should permit the owner of a house on Jerusalem Road to construct a major building addition close to a wetland.

Wayne Schmidt, 726 Jerusalem Rd., wants to build a four-car, 1,520-square-foot garage onto one side of his 2,050-square-foot home. Schmidt needs the garage to store antique cars and tools. Currently, Schmidt has several vehicles stored in his yard, as well as old cans and other debris, according to conservation agent Paul Shea.

The garage would be located within 19-1/2 feet of a wetland, much closer than the town's 50 foot no-build zone. Conservation commission members advised Schmidt to relocate or redesign the addition. Conservation Commission member Thomas Callahan said the addition was "just too massive for the property."

Conservation commission members asked Schmidt to rework his designs and attend their next meeting.

Board Appointments Made

Selectmen appointed Michael J. Beverly, 240 Fair Oaks Lane, to the water resource protection committee, and Robert M. Davenport, 17 Black Horse Lane, to the town history committee this week.

Commission Spurns Rose Hill Wildlife Study

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The proposed Rose Hill subdivision on Route 3A is already unpopular with the conservation commission because of its proximity to wetlands and a flood plain. The developer didn't gain any popularity at the May 15 conservation commission meeting when he presented a wildlife habitat study that didn't examine Sanctuary Pond.

Commission members complained that the developer supplied only two copies to conservation agent Paul Shea, rather than enough for every member. Members complained they didn't have enough time to review the study before the meeting.

"It's frustrating that we didn't get the reports ahead of time," Conservation Commission Chairman VenetaRoebuck said.

The developer wants to build a subdivision on a 17-acre site close to Sanctuary Pond.

Members of the conservation commission reviewed the preliminary plans Apr. 3 and asked the builder to return with the wildlife habitat evaluation and revised measurements of the flood plain line.

Daniel V. Calano Jr. is one of the landowners in a trust that wants to build a 14-home subdivision on the 17-acre site. The entrance to the subdivision would be off Route 3A with the road branching off into two cul de sacs.

Calano said the plans conformed to all ecological requirements including the placement of property lines at least 100 feet from wetlands and 200 feet from the river.

The proposal is to build a 14-home subdivision on the 17-acre site. The entrance to the subdivision would be off Route 3A with the road branching off into two cul de sacs.

Calano said the study was late because the conservation commission asked him to examine the James Brook Basin study, but gave his engineer the wrong study. Calano received the James Brook tidal study instead of the James Brook Basin study.

Roebuck supplied Calano with the correct study and asked him to examine wildlife in Sanctuary Pond.

Calano complained that he shouldn't have to study Sanctuary Pond because no work was proposed in the pond, but Shea disagreed.

"Sanctuary Pond should be added to the study because of the fish populations," Shea said. "The project impact on Sanctuary Pond probably is not that great, but it should still be examined."

Shea also disagreed with the delineation of wetlands lines and river frontage as required by the state Rivers Protection Act.

But Calano's engineer, Peter J. Ogren of Hayes Engineering in Wakefield, reiterated his position that the state had not yet clearly identified the correct way to implement the Rivers Act. Ogren said the state has advised developers and towns to use the Rivers Act as an advisory tool until it defined the correct method of implementation.

However, Calano agreed to abide by Shea's delineation lines.

Calano said the site would require a large amount of grading and filling because it was so much lower than the surrounding area.

But member ThomasCallahan restated his distaste for any filling in a wetland.

"I'm still reluctant to allow an inch of fill in the flood plain , especially because of the flooding that hit the village last October," Callahan said.

Solutions to Caring for A loved One With Alzheimer's

Thursday, May 29, 1997

When one person gets Alzheimer's Disease or other Dementia, the entire family is affected. Everyone's life is drastically changed. And you want to do what's right.

To help you deal with this, Grove Manor Estates in collaboration with Quincy Hospital is holding this Free Seminar*, and is also starting a Caregiver's Support Group. The Seminar will answer some of the hard questions for you. Topics include:*

- The unpredictable nature of the disease
- How to avoid catastrophic reactions/events
- The stress it adds to the caregiver's work and personal life
- Your own fears about aging
- Choosing the best setting to care for those with the disease

Our guest speaker is Roberta H. Guez, LICSW, Program Director of Psychiatric Services, Quincy Hospital. She has over 20 years experience in geriatric mental health and as a social worker, and speaks frequently on Alzheimer's.

Grove Manor Estates is an Assisted Living Retirement Community, which also features the Woodlands, specializing in serving those with Alzheimer's.

Chittick Moves to Building Committee

The latest addition to the school building committee, JoAnne Chittick, was appointed over the objections raised by newly elected school committee member Joe McElroy. McElroy believes the building committee should be comprised of community members whose profession is in the building field.

Chittick, who did not seek reelection to the school committee, was involved in the planning for the new building for the past year-and-a-half which, according to school committee member Ralph Kidder, proves Chittick's expertise.

"I agree with Joe's point of considering the expertise of a new member to this board and I believe JoAnne's years of involvement in the school committee and the time she spent with the planning of the new building illustrates her knowledge of building maintenance and how intimately she knows the new building project," Kidder said.

Chittick replaces Liz Bates on the building committee.

Village Station Study

He recognizes this is against the mitigation committee's official support of the 3A site.

"I'm in favor of having a process where we study both alternatives to determine the best location," Rizzo said.

Rizzo is not the only local official who feels the station location should be revisited. Al Moore, planning board chairman, has said previously that the train is still going to pass through the village even if the station is on Route 3A.

"Residents of the Village are going to get all the bad effects when the train comes through but none of the good," Moore said.

Rizzo agreed with Moore's assessment. He said homeowners in the village opposed the station because they feared the train would lower property values and create noise, air pollution and safety hazards. But residents are going to experience all those problems even without a village station, Rizzo said.

"If I was a homeowner in the village I would want the station because it would enhance the value of my home," Rizzo said. "The difference is between having a home in walking distance of a commuter rail station or having a home in walking distance of a fence and a rail road crossing."

Rizzo said rejecting the Village station without at least studying it is tantamount to passing up an opportunity to make the train part of the downtown revitalization effort. The T would have to pay for major renovations to the downtown area if a Village location was approved.

Town meeting rejected a request from Rizzo to fund a study or at least approve the concept and try to find outside funding.

Rizzo is not a lone voice in the wilderness fighting for a village station. More than 40 business owners signed a petition last February asking selectmen to reconsider the station.

Rizzo said even business people who support the village location would not back a poor design.

"The business community doesn't ask for much," Rizzo said. "They're just asking to have it considered. If it's determined that the station would disrupt traffic and parking, and be ugly they wouldn't want it either."

Rizzo said it is difficult for business people in the village to voice their opinions because many of them are from out of town and have no say in local politics.

Jeff Thayer runs an architectural firm in Cohasset and owns an office building at 113-115 Ripley Road. A Weymouth resident, Thayer said many local business owners have been excluded from the public debate because they don't live in Cohasset.

"A strong, vocal minority has managed to force their commuter neighbors to drive to the edge of town to ride the train when rail service is restored," Thayer said. "They don't want traffic in the one spot in town where more traffic is needed."

Thayer said studies have shown that more than 100 people from the downtown area would walk to the village station to ride the train. Those 100 pedestrians could help village businesses thrive, Thayer said.

He added that the village may turn into a "quaint office park" unless the town steps up its revitalization commitment. A village station could be a critical element of that revitalization, Thayer said.

"The village businesses will not benefit from a vastly improved parking area and increased activity which would eventually occur during midday and weekends as it currently does on the South Shore," Thayer said.

> 'The business community doesn't ask for much. They're just asking to have it considered. If it's determined that the station would disrupt traffic and parking, and be ugly they wouldn't want it either.'
> — Dean Rizzo, chamber of commerce.

Thayer added that residents should be prepared for round-the-clock train service once Greenbush is restored.

"The T says it will only run trains during the week, but just take a look at the North Shore," Thayer said. "This is just the beginning of public transportation on the South Shore."

Thayer said he is not happy about Greenbush; he just wants to make the best of a bad situation.

"The train is going to run right behind the back of my 300-year-old house in Weymouth," Thayer said. "I would much rather not see the train run through, but that decision has already been made."

Anne Gabanelle of Duxbury owns French Memories, and The Bread Shop in downtown Hingham, another business that will be affected by Greenbush.

Gabanelle said she is strongly opposed to the restoration of the Greenbush line, but if the train is coming she would like to see the town benefit from its presence.

"I agree there are a lot of security problems with the train," Gabanelle said. "But if the train is coming it makes more sense to get some advantage from it."

Gabanelle said she supports the chamber of commerce's position, which is taking advantage of the train because it can't be stopped.

Gabanelle said she would not presume to tell residents that the station should be located in the village. But she can commiserate with their fears because restored service will devastate her Hingham store, which is right next to the train tracks. Gabanelle said she doubts many customers will be interested in her store with diesel fumes pouring out of a train.

Gabanelle said the village is a pretty location, that could end up filled with McDonalds and other chain stores. She said Route 3A development is making it nearly impossible for village businesses to survive.

Gabanelle said the town had to do something to revitalize the village. She pointed to Scituate, which has a strong downtown because it prohibits commercial development on Route 3A.

"People think we don't care about the village impacts because we don't live here, but that's not true," Gabanelle said. "These businesses are our lives."

Rizzo said he hopes residents and selectmen will reconsider the Village station and at least study the potential benefits.

"The train is at least four years away and a lot can happen in that time," Rizzo said.

Train Meeting

work with Cohasset on our mitigation problems."

But Callahan had a completely different take on what happened at the meeting. Callahan and Roebuck asked Kerasiotes to pay for consultants to monitor the T's construction and planning work. But Kerasiotes told them "absolutely no."

"Secretary Kerasiotes put a gun to our heads and said that other promises could be in jeopardy if we take an adversarial role with the MBTA and the state," Callahan said.

Conservation commission members had considered issuing an order of conditions demanding that the T pay for a consultant to monitor geotechnical borings along the right-of-way. But the commission backed away at its May 15 meeting and may submit a consultant's bill to the T for payment at a later date.

Kerasiotes told town officials he would not set a precedent that allowed other towns to demand similar reimbursements.

Roebuck explained that the town was in a unique situation because it couldn't afford a full-time consultant, but Kerasiotes wouldn't agree to pay the fees.

"I was very much in favor of demanding payment before, but now I feel we have nothing to gain," Roebuck said. "We have nothing to gain and everything to lose by enforcing that order."

Sullivan said the town should stay focused on larger issues, rather than creating animosity on the state level over consultant fees.

"The tone of the meeting was clear and he (Kerasiotes) said flat-out 'no'," Sullivan said. "There is far more at stake here than making them angry over fees."

But Roebuck said Sullivan was letting Kerasiotes intimidate her.

Even Hedlund and Murray were split on what exactly the T and Kerasiotes are promising to do.

"I thought the meeting was beneficial," Murray said. "They are going to take a look at things brought up at the meeting."

But Hedlund wasn't so optimistic about what Kerasiotes was promising.

"I hope the secretary's word means something, but we get mixed signals depending on who we talk to," Hedlund said.

Hedlund added that he had great confidence in Egan, but little optimism in the T's upper echelon.

Rizzo maintains that the meeting went very well and that Kerasiotes didn't just brush aside any of the town's requests.

Rizzo said Kerasiotes promised to cancel plans to construct an access road for a drop-off on North Main Street.

"The only access will be on Route 3A," Rizzo said. "There is no North Main drop-off."

Town officials objected strenuously to the North Main drop-off because they want to keep at least one main artery clear during peak traffic times.

But Roebuck said she heard Kerasiotes say something different.

"Maybe I wasn't listening," Roebuck said. "But I thought he said they would look at it. I'm not certain they said they would do it."

Roebuck said Kerasiotes is doing what he's been doing throughout the mitigation process: pledging to study problems.

"That's his (Kerasiotes) M.O.," Roebuck said. "He just said they'll look at this and study that and consider alternatives."

Rizzo said the Kerasiotes also pledged to pay for a portion of the $1.5 million James Brook flood control project only if it could be shown that restoring service on the Greenbush line would exacerbate flooding.

But Callahan said the T was holding the project hostage by promising to study the rail impacts and pay if the town could demonstrate additional flooding problems.

"In a democracy, they would have to pay for part of the project," Callahan said.

Kerasiotes also said the T would look into other mitigation issues, including replacing 60 parking spots in the village instead of 20, installing a traffic light on Route 3A at the station entrance, and building an emergency access road on Rocky Lane.

Brennan confirmed that the T would build an emergency egress on Rocky Lane, but the Highway Department would have the final say on the traffic light on Route 3A. Brennan said the intersection does not meet the Highway Department's criteria for a new light, but the T would ask again.

Roebuck said the whole scenario was disappointing because the T was saying one thing and doing another.

"The state Wetlands Act limits filling in wetlands to 5,000 square feet for any project, but the T is filling 50,000 square feet in Cohasset alone," Roebuck said. "They have a pre-designed program and their sticking to it. In the end, I think Cohasset will be stuck with a bigger T assessment along with the major lifestyle impacts."

Murray said the town could also seek redress for Greenbush issues through the Legislature's Transportation Committee, which is co-chaired by state Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree. Murray said Sullivan has been receptive to local issues, even though he strongly favors the train.

Buckley Named Commander of State Group

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Ray Buckley, center, was installed at Kimball's by the Sea this week as commander of the Department of Massachusetts American Ex-Prisoners of War. With Buckley are Lawrence Moses, past national commander, and Zack Roberts, national junior vice chairman.

Tuesday evening, May 20, at Kimball's By The Sea, Ray Buckley was inducted as new commander of the Department of Massachusetts American Ex-Prisoners of War. In attendance were more than 100 former prisoners of war and their wives.

In accordance with his title, Buckley will conduct association business meetings and attend functions several times a year in which all chapters within Massachusetts will participate. In the Southeastern Chapter alone, there are 250 members.

The motto of the American Ex-Prisoners of War Association is "We exist to help those who cannot help themselves."

"We run support groups to make sure veterans get proper medical treatment and compensation. Our chapter has something called the Daisy Fund. We use the funds to assist the veterans and their families when medical bills need to get paid or when they need to buy clothing or other essentials and the money isn't there," Buckley says.

Buckley joined this association in 1994 as a junior vice commander. From that point, it was a matter of time and moving up the chain of command, not only in the chapter, but in the state as well, before his appointment of commander came.

The American Ex-POW Association was founded by the American wives and daughters of the Bataan Death March survivors in 1942 after 54,000 American and Filipino soldiers were marched 65 grueling miles from Bataan in the Philippines to a prison camp in San Fernando after they had surrendered to Japanese soldiers. The march lasted several weeks. It included torture, deprivation of food and water, and little rest. Many soldiers were forced to go barefoot. When a soldier fell from exhaustion and starvation, he was shot, clubbed, or bayoneted to death. Ten thousand fell before the march ended. Those who survived the march withstood several more transfers on foot and by boxcar to the final destination spot of Camp O'Donnell. There, for as long as they survived, they were held as prisoners of war.

Over the past 55 years, the American Ex-POW Association has evolved into a national one, with each state having its own department and chapters. Association headquarters is in Arlington, Texas.

In Massachusetts, there are four chapters, including the Southeastern Chapter which includes Cohasset's former prisoners of war of World War II, Frederick Piepenbrink, a retired postal worker, as well as Buckley of Forest Avenue.

JOINED ARMY AT 19

At 19 years of age, Buckley, who was partially deaf even then, joined the Army in 1944. Despite his hearing problem, he was sent overseas eventually "because they needed bodies."

Buckley spent 19 months in the Army, five as a prisoner of war. Captured in November of 1944 with four other Americans, he was listed as Missing In Action (MIA) by the War Department until February 1945. It was then that, from prison, he was able to send word to his father that he was a prisoner of war. His father then contacted the War Department.

By February, Buckley, who is well over six feet, was slowly being starved down to 100 pounds.

Before capture, Buckley was assigned to the Zeigfried line, which ran the length of Germany on the western side and was all permanent fortification. This meant that the Germans had installed cement blocks with tops, razed like the teeth of dinosaur, to prevent Army tanks from going through.

"The Germans never thought we would penetrate, but we did, and we paid a penalty. In my outfit, there were 10 men killed. In all, there were many, many more. I was put with a machine gunner. In combat, machine gunners were given about 30 seconds to live, which was not good for me, of course. We were on outpost duty, way out in front," Buckley recalls.

After the battle, Buckley and his four fellow soldiers waited for three days for relief. No one came. They stood in water, freezing, with no food or water.

"It was 50 years later that I found out why no one ever came to help us. I only found out because a book was written and published from diary notes kept by a soldier who relieved my outfit. Nobody had told him we were out there so far. The sergeant who put us out there was killed. There was no radio or walkie-talkie. For three days, the Germans watched us from a 'pill box' on the hill, where they were firing from. They captured me and the four other soldiers that Wednesday night."

'SMELLED LIKE DEATH'

After interrogation and several transfers over days, still in the mud-covered uniforms from the trenches, the soldiers were brought to a prison camp that "smelled like death." Soup was brought out in buckets with no utensils. Soldiers filled their boots or found cans lying in the dirt. Fifteen thousand people would die in that prison camp before the war ended.

For those of us who have never had to physically endure in wartime the tortures that result from fighting for what we believe in, learning what a prisoner of war does endure is, at the very least, unimaginable.

"You're cold to the marrow of your bones and you never, ever get warm. Once a day, you get a seventh of a loaf of bread and a bowl of weak soup or hot water. Most of all, you live in constant fear because you don't know how long you're going to be alive or how you're going to die," Buckley recalls.

How much is a seventh of a loaf of bread? How slowly would it be eaten, knowing there won't be more for at least a day?

Buckley said his first hot meal from December to Easter came on Easter Sunday. The POWs were given mashed potatoes with oatmeal on top.

"It tasted delicious ... like anything tastes delicious when you're starving," he says.

Buckley volunteered for the work details just to get out of the camp. The work was done in town. Buckley delivered coal and took ice off a pond with bare hands and loaded it onto a conveyor belt that rolled up to a brewery. His hands as well as his feet were permanently frozen.

"I did this every day for one reason. At noontime, they fed us a bowl of delicious soup and a bottle of beer," he says.

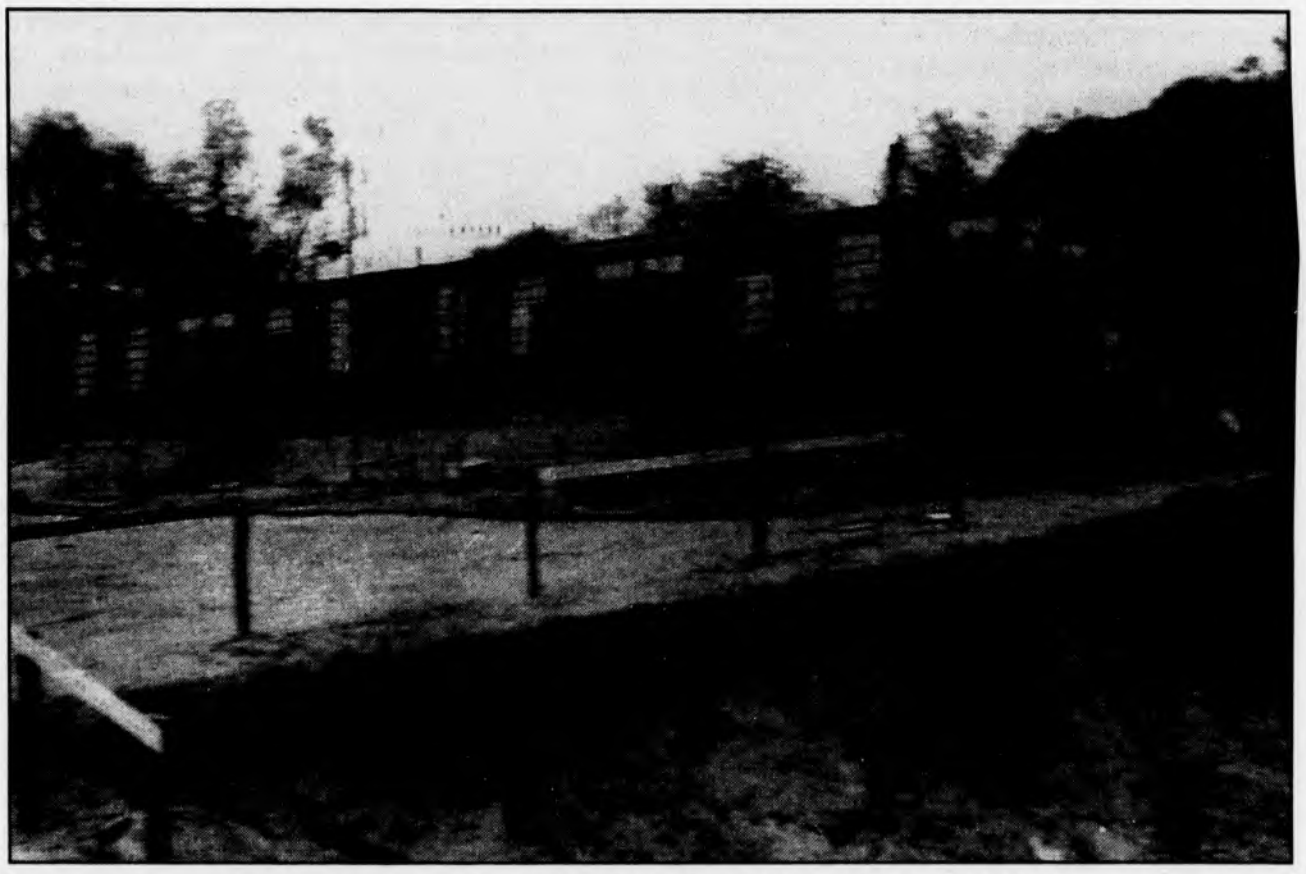
Days and nights, weeks and months, crawled by. It was 1945 and eventually, even in the prison camps, the prisoners of war knew the war was coming to an end. The alarms no longer went off during the air raids.

"I asked a German sergeant one day in German why aren't they sounding the air raid alarms. 'My boy,' he said, 'it's the beginning of the last moment.' South of us in the sky over Berlin, you could see a green glow. It was Berlin burning. The war was ending," Buckley says.

When it was obvious that the Russian soldiers, America's allies, were marching east toward their camp, bombing everything in sight, Buckley said the camp, both Germans and POWs moved out during the night and headed west.

"We convinced the Germans we'd all be killed because of the bombing. The Russians had no idea who they were bombing, and we didn't want to end up casualties. We would've been killed had we stayed," he says.

They ended up in Schwerin. It was a massive conversion of refugees from prison camps all over Germany.



Eventually, Buckley was brought with others to France to a tent city. There, the soldiers were processed out and given showers, clean uniforms and pay. They were then shipped directly back to the United States.

"I ended up back where I started from. And, who do you think was there serving us our first chow on American turf? German prisoners. They looked good — healthy and fat. They ate well. At that point, I was less than 100 pounds, but I was so happy to be home, I couldn't feel anger at the sight of them," he says.

A black bread recipe printed in the 'Ex-POW Bulletin' by Joseph P. O'Donnell came from the official record of the Food Providing Ministry published (top secret) in Berlin. The recipe for the bread included 50 percent bruised rye grain, 20 percent sliced sugar beets, 20 percent tree flour (saw dust), and 10 percent minced leaves and straw. A note from the contributing writer, also a former POW, indicates that there were also bits of glass and sand in the bread.

Memorial Day Exercises on Monday

The annual Memorial Day parade steps off from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot at 10:30 a.m. Monday and will proceed down Sohier Street to North Main Street to Central Cemetery, then to Cohasset Common and Veterans Memorial Park in the harbor.

The parade and exercises are sponsored by the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9163.

All veterans are invited to participate and should report to the Legion Hall, 98 Summer St., at 8 a.m. The contingent will march to the library to board buses for veterans' grave-side services.

Lightkeeper's Open House

The board members of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation will host a family open house and picnic after the Memorial Day parade May 26.

CLC board members will serve all-American hot dogs and soft drinks at no charge. Grills and charcoal will be available for those who bring their own picnics. It is hoped this will become an annual event at the close of Memorial Day services.

The Lightkeeper's House is on Government Island near the Veterans Park where the final speeches are given. The latest plans for the Learning Lab, which is sponsored by the CLC, will be on display and members of the board will provide additional information.

Don't Miss Pre-Prom Gala at Lightkeepers

If you would like to witness a special event, then Thursday, May 29, is the night to circle on your calendar! The Cohasset High School Class of 1997 is holding its prom that night, and the parents of the class are hosting a "pre-prom" party from 6 to 7:15 p.m. at the Light Keepers House. At 7:15 p.m. three trolley cars will arrive at the Light Keeper's House to pick up all of the prom attendees and transport them, following a short joy ride, to the Barker Tavern (the trolleys will be chaperoned by school staff and parents.). It is really worth the trip to see how wonderful all of the prom-goers look, and how happy they are! The fact that it is such a special night for them is evident when you look at them — try to take a peek!

Wait until you hear what Colleen Fitzsimmons did last weekend! Colleen was a member of the Holy Cross varsity lightweight rowing team that went to the Champion International Regatta, held in Gainesville, Fla. (the Grand Finals, folks!), and she and her team finished third in the event! The same team won the New England's the week before! How exciting! And, what a way to end her time at Holy Cross; Colleen is graduating from there this week! Best of luck to you in the future, we'll be watching you and your career.

We send birthday greetings all the way to Hawaii this week — happy birthday to Cheyanne (Annie) Aikau, who will be 5 years old May 27! Her sister, Keala, had her second birthday May 4, so it was a busy time for "the Hawaiians!" There, Auntie Sal kept her promise, and they now have their names in print!

On the subject of birthdays, be sure to give Ann Pompeo a hug when you see her this week. Her birthday is Wednesday, May 28! No need to divulge her age, just remember that you are as young as you feel, so she is ageless! Have a wonderful day, Ann!

Saturday was a special day for Cohasset, The Christopher Gallery, a national caliber art gallery, opened right here in Cohasset! They are at the Artist's Son, 130 King St., Route 3A. The Artist's Son will be the same, with the same custom framing and the same people to help you. Be sure to stop by!

Hats off to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen who sponsored a meeting on substance abuse within the community Wednesday!

Had a nice chat with Mary Jane Cotton Low last week, she is the one organizing the reunion for the CHS Class of 1962. She is working hard, and doing a great job in the process, as are many fellow classmates! Anyway, her birthday was May 15, and we do hope that it was a special one indeed! By the way, Mary Jane lives in Albuquerque, N.M.!

Remember last summer when the St. Joseph Villa Retreat Center ran their first fund-raiser? Well, they (the Sisters of Saint Joseph and their very able crew of volunteers) realized enough profit to replace windows for the entire building (which you know are numerous). They are planning another fund-raiser (Fund-raiser II) which will include a performance by Roger Whittaker at the South Shore Music Circus Friday, Aug. 15, a dinner and a raffle. Renovations from this year's profits are the rebuilding of the front porch, which is already in progress, and repair and/or painting the interior and exterior walls. We will be keeping you informed as we get more information, just save the date and plan on having a gala evening for a most worthy cause!

Cohasset resident Alex Nugent, 4, finds a properly fitted bicycle helmet with help from Ann Caccavale, RN, at South Shore Hospital's Health & Safety Fair. More than 3,000 attended the day-long fair at South Weymouth Junior High School on May 10.

Although he is the principal at the Hatherly Elementary School in Scituate, many of us know Lou VonKahle and want to wish him well in his retirement June 30. Lou has served for 34 years in the Scituate school system — he is a wonderful man who helped form the lives of many, and he will be missed! Have a wonderful "rest of your life," Lou!

Did you find it yet? Or do you know anything about it? Did you even hear about it yet? The Cohasset Historic Commission is seeking any photos of Beacon Rock (or Signal Rock) that will show what was there in the mid- to late 1800s. Ham Tewksbury is awaiting your call if you have any photographs or information of what existed at that historic installation! Please call him at 383-1074.

Speaking of calls, don't forget to give me a buzz to let us know of your latest feat, venture, adventure, whatever! Thank you in advance!

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Hello, Remember Me?

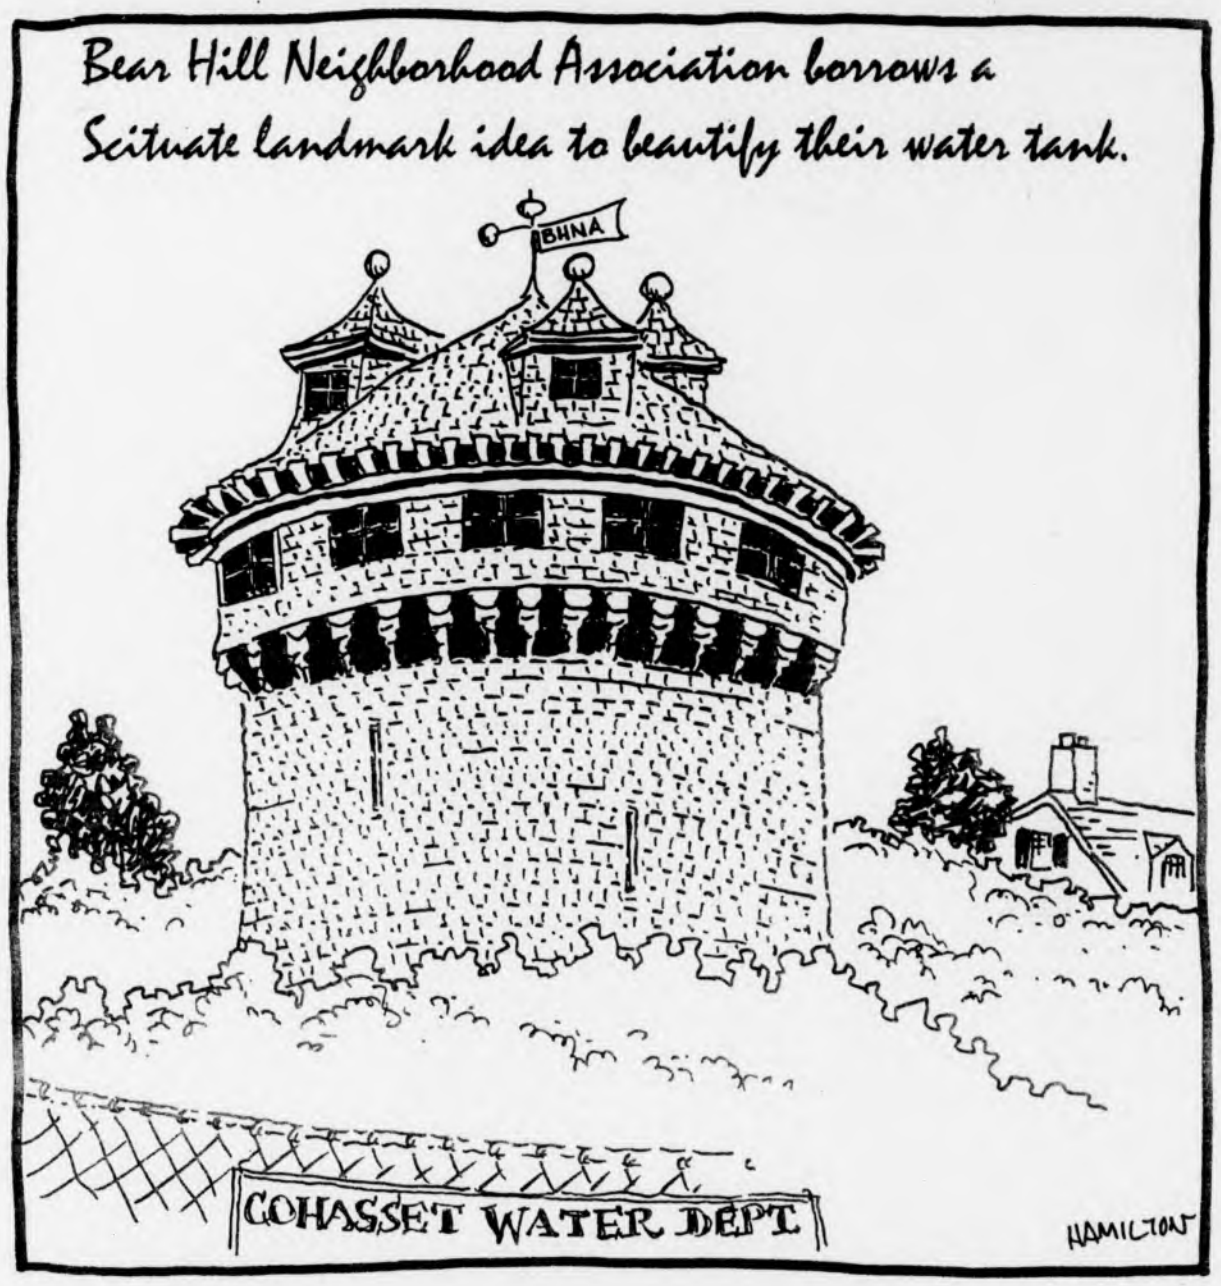
Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your Flag, the Flag of the United States of America. Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you, because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago people lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade and naturally I was leading every parade, proudly waving in the breeze. When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart — remember?

And you, I remember you, standing there straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart — remember?

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I have a few more stars since you were a boy. A lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now I don't feel as proud as I used to. When I come down your street, you just stand there with your hands in your pockets and I may get a small glance and then you look away. Then I see the children running around and shouting — they don't seem to know who I am — I saw one man take his hat off then look around. He didn't see anybody else with their hats off so he quickly put his back on!



Is it a sin to be patriotic anymore? Have you forgotten what I stand for and where I've been? Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea, Vietnam. Take a look at the memorial honor rolls sometime of those who never came back to keep this Republic free. One Nation Under God. When you salute me you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So, when you see me, stand straight, place your right hand over your heart — and I'll salute you by waving back — and I'll know that

YOU REMEMBER!

Food Pantry Appreciates Support

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Food Pantry would like to thank all those who helped make the make the food collection by the postal workers Saturday, May 10, such a wonderful success. It has replenished our shelves with a quantity and variety of foods and household supplies that should be adequate for many weeks.

We are grateful, of course, to the postal workers, under the direction of Richard Leach, who organized, promoted and then collected a record 4,400 pounds on a showery day.

We appreciate, too, the generosity of the many townspeople who donated the food and responded to our "wish list," bringing us just the items most needed.

And we want to thank the group of seventh-grade boys and Diana Kinch, who recruited and directed them, along with Bob Thompson, our head of volunteers, in sorting the donations by category and then stacking them in the pantry storeroom in the basement of the Second Congregational Church.

Altogether it was a fine example of community volunteering to help others.

There's Something for Everyone at Music Circus This Summer

Liza Minelli will perform at the Music Circus for the first time this summer.

By Melissa Boynton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

What's new at the South Shore Music Circus this year? Variety. Mixed in with returning favorites Anne Murray, Tom Jones and the Righteous Brothers are acts that will attract a wider age group.

To appeal to the teenage crowd there is the World Wrestling Federation night and a new event called Jock Rock. Unbeknownst to many, Alexi Lalas — the New England Revolution soccer star, is also an accomplished musician. On that evening he will perform with his band The Gypsies.

Young children can enjoy theatre that breathes life into such favorite stories as "Alice in Wonderland," "Beauty and the Beast" and "Cinderella." The Children's Theatre series kicks off on July 3 and runs every Thursday morning at 10:30 a.m.

Country music is also a substantial part of the venue's repertoire with such big names as Lorrie Morgan, Willie Nelson and Alabama.

"Alabama and Liza are selling out quickly," says Vince Longo, general manager. (Although Liza Minelli has never performed at the Music Circus, she has performed at the Melody Tent in Hyannis. At 15 in 1963, Minelli was at the Melody Tent in Hyannis where she learned the ropes as a technical intern).

To create a more "total experience" for the patrons, Longo has expanded the "Legends of New Orleans Festival" to include free Cajun food prepared by the Silver Spoon in Cohasset.

"We did an informal test market last year by setting up a free gumbo stand," Longo said. "When I saw a 30-minute wait for a small cup of soup I realized we might have something here."

The charter of the non-profit South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., parent company of the Music Circus, is to generate revenue from the shows to support local arts, education and recreation groups. The chairman of the SSPA board, Bruce Cameron, said that SSPA serves more than 40 organizations.

"We encourage any non-profit to submit proposals for specific projects as long as they are in the area of the arts, education or recreation," said Cameron in a telephone interview. The corporation has provided more than $1 million to those groups over the years.

In addition to providing funds to community non-profit organizations, the Music Circus has made efforts to be a good neighbor to the community. Last summer, the Music Circus provided the facility for Cohasset's special town meeting.

"When it was obvious that the attendance numbers were going to exceed the capacity of the meeting hall, the selectmen approached me to use the tent," said Longo. "It was a good thing it was moved, 2100 people showed up!"

He speaks with pride about how much fun people had with the advanced technologies at hand.

"Every time someone stood to make a statement one of our stage hands was over there with a cordless mike," he recalls.

The Music Circus is also the annual site for Cohasset High School graduation exercises.

A Little History About the Music Circus

Utilizing the Internet, some interesting facts were discovered from the South Shore Music Circus' aptly named, www.musiccircus.com.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates, which owns both the Music Circus and the Melody Tent in Hyannis had its humble beginnings in the Cohasset Town Hall. Back in 1932 Raymond Moore, founder of the Cape Playhouse in Dennis, was looking for an additional stage for his shows. He brought in big names such as Humphrey Bogart, Josephine Hull and Van Heflin.

A year later the South Shore Players was formed by Alexander Dean who took over for Moore. Under the new management, the performances gained popularity and eventually outgrew the 425 seats that the town hall provided. At the same time, advances were being made in the concept of summer theatre — tents were being used. The first Music Tent opened in Lambertville, New Jersey in 1949. A second tent opened in Florida catching the eye of a vacationing English actress, Gertrude Lawrence. She convinced her husband, Richard Aldrich to bring the concept to New England. At the time the South Shore Players rejected the idea of a musical tent. Moving down the Cape they formed the Cape Cod Music Circus (now the Cape Cod Melody Tent).

In December of 1950 the South Shore Players incorporated under the name South Shore Playhouse Inc. In July 1951, the South Shore Music Circus became tent number four on the horse grounds of the Bancroft estate. Horse stalls were torn down and new structures were put in their place. On June 25, 1951, 'Show Boat' opened with seats selling for $1.20 to $3.60.

Over the years, the facilities have been upgraded to provide better sound and comfort for patrons. Once canvas tents have been replaced with more weather-forgiving vinyl and a vented cupola. The sound is now designed for the theatre in-the-round.

COMMENTARY

Reflections on the 'Forgotten War'

By John J. Bowman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Care set upon his faded cheek
But under a brow of dauntless courage."
- John Milton

When, after protracted and frustrating negotiations, the Panmunjon ceasefire was formally announced July 27, 1953, there was little stir back in the United States. Unlike the mass exhilaration that swept the nation at the end of World War II, our great cities did not reverberate with impromptu and tumultuous ceremony at the conclusion of the Korean conflict; no great victory parades streamed down our avenues beneath blizzards of ticker-tape. In fact, news of the 1953 armistice was greeted with a wan matter-of-factness.

The Korean War remains today what General Matthew Ridgeway called it then,, "a forgotten war". For three years (1950-1953). the conflict raged back and forth across the 38th parallel of that harsh and desolate Central Asian country. 34,000 Americans died as a result. An additional 103,000 were wounded.

Few today remember...or care.

The names of the grim battlefields of that conflict — Inchon, Heartbreak Ridge, Pork Chop Hill, Chonglin Reservoir — have long since vanished from popular memory, and are now relegated to the bleak pages of obscure history texts.

Today there are no stirring monuments to the Korean War dead, no heart-rending memorial walls. No drums or trumpets echo down the corridors of time.

It was never a popular war, Korea. The American public of the early 50's, exhausted from the recent catastrophes of the Second World War cared little for the bleak news spilling out of Asia. On the cusp of an unprecedented post-war prosperity, Americans were, understandably pre-occupied with matters of a more personal and immediate natures raising families, achieving job enhancement securing home mortgages, making auto payments...etc. No one wanted to hear about a "political mess" halfway across the world somewhere.

Korea was, in Averell Harriman's words, "a sour little war".

But on this Memorial Day — almost 45 years later — perhaps it is time finally to render recognition where recognition is due.

The men and women who bravely held the line amid intolerable who fought and shed their blood upon inhospitable terrains far from home, who bore the brunt of unpopular battle with what Hemingway called, "grace under pressure"...they are deserving of our highest respect.

Forgotten somehow in the swirl of the domestic politics of that time, these Americans — now in their 60s — served this nation with "dauntless courage" and high good humor.

The time has come to recognize their sacrifice and the ultimate sacrifice of the 34,000.

It is a recognition we cannot afford to overlook. All great civilizations are driven by the dynamics of history; the future hinges on our respect and knowledge of the past. The Korean war may be forgotten but the devotion and patriotism of its veterans the best of a generation — deserves, at the very least, a few finely timed moments of quiet remembrance this weekend.

Some Private Ways Clear First Hurdle

Residents' Feedback Sought

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

A dozen of the town's private ways could be on their way to acceptance as town streets.

The new designation would allow the town to use state money to repair and pave the roads.

The private ways committee told selectmen Monday they chose the following roadways, which meet the town's criteria on width and drainage, as the first to be accepted: Bates Lane, Forest Notch, Lantern Lane, Locust Road, Norfolk Road, Oak Street, Reservoir Road, Riverview Road, Rocky Lane, Short Street, Whitney Woods Lane, and Norman Todd Road.

"The first list requires very little cost to the town to accept," member Henry Rattenbury said.

Selectmen asked the list of roads be sent to town counsel for guidance on what steps the town needs to take to get these roads approved. There may be a deeds process involved, selectmen said.

Ownership could prove to be a sticky issue with the town's dozens of private ways. Some are owned by the residents or developers and on others, it is not clear if anyone owns them, selectmen said. One-third of the town's roads are private ways.

The town appropriates some money each year to maintain private ways. Selectman Merle Brown pointed out that Norman Todd Road, which was constructed as a public works jobs project during the depression, hadn't been "hot topped" in 17 years.

The town does plow the private ways in town.

Selectmen would also like residents of the streets, slated for possible acceptance, to provide any feedback or information on ownership that might be helpful.

handled in the lease, Brown said.

But Selectmen Nan Roth, Ronnie McMorris and Michael Sullivan said issues surrounding parking, the renovation schedule and possible tax consequences for the office space, to be rented to Ulmer, need to be incorporated in the RFP. They are particularly concerned about how parking will be handled and if stickers or cards need to be issued to non-resident lobster lab users.

They felt the lease and RFP should dovetail and that town counsel should draft a proposed lease before the RFP is finalized — a proposal that Brown found ludicrous.

"Why should we make a lease up on a proposal that we haven't got?" he asked.

R. Murray Campbell, president of the Lightkeepers Corporation, reminded the board that the project is well intended.

"We are not carpetbaggers doing something to the town — we are citizens doing something for the town," he said.

He balked at a suggestion that the RFP and lease be put by the 15-member Hagerty study committee, warning too much input at this stage would "gum up the works." The Hagerty committee is charged with developing a recreational park at the site.

Selectman Diane C. Sullivan agreed with Brown that the RFP was clear and should be sent out. She stressed the board was obligated to follow the intent of town meeting, which supported the lobster lab use for the building.

A move by Diane Sullivan and Brown to have the RFP go out as is, failed.

Roth, McMorris and Michael Sullivan voted to have town counsel draft a lease based on the lightkeepers' lease but to include other issues such as how to handle parking and a schedule for renovation and maintenance. They want the lease ready in two weeks so they can include those issues in the RFP so it is in a condition to send out, they said.

The town bought the 2.2 acre Hagerty property four years ago. Over the years, selectmen have considered leasing, selling, moving or demolishing the house which has fallen into disrepair under the town's ownership.

Army Corps Seeks Public Comment on Greenbush

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

Residents will have an opportunity during the next few weeks to comment on the proposed restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad.

The Army Corps of Engineers, the lead federal agency involved in reviewing the project, is seeking public comment before deciding whether or not to issue the MBTA wetlands permitting for the project.

According to Ted Lento, project manager of the permits section of the ACE, "This will be the main chance for residents to get involved in the Corps permit process.

"There are state and local permitting processes going on, but this is on a federal level," he said.

In January, the Corps questioned the adequacy of the MBTA's study of alternatives to the restoration project and is requiring additional information from the transit authority before issuing a permit.

Comments provide an opportunity for the Corps to gain new information from the public about the proposed restoration, Lento said.

Notices of the comment period have been sent to all abutters.

"This is a beginning step in the process," he said.

MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan said the MBTA has done a "good job providing information requested by the Corps."

"We've been working closely with the Corps and are eager to hear comments from the public," Brennan said. "We're looking forward to seeing how the Corps moves forward on the project."

The MBTA has applied to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act to place fill within a total of 5.11 acres of wetlands and waterways for the project in preparation of the proposed restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad.

The Clean Water Act regulates the discharge of dredged or fill material in United States waters, including wetlands.

Following the MBTA decision to no longer seek federal transit funding for the project, the Federal Transit Administration environmental review was ended without a conclusion.

The Corps is now the sole federal agency involved in the project. The Corps is soliciting public comments about the proposed restoration until June 6.

Written comments on the proposed restoration of the Greenbush line may be sent by June 6 to: Ted Lento, U.S. Army Corps, Corps of Engineers, New England District, 424 Trapelo Road, Waltham, Mass. 02254-9149. Remarks should include file no. 199700680.

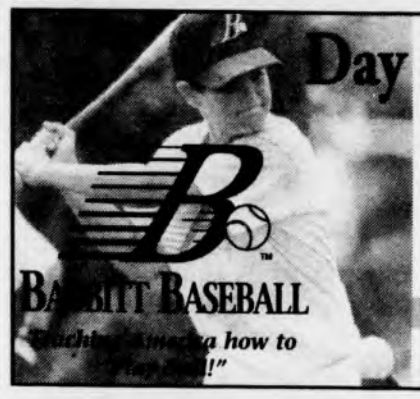
Written comments on the proposed restoration of the Greenbush line may be sent by June 6 to: Ted Lento, U.S. Army Corps, Corps of Engineers, New England District, 424 Trapelo Road, Waltham, Mass. 02254-9149. Remarks should include file no. 199700680.

The Army Corps of Engineers will consider many factors and their effects in making their final decision, including: conservation, economics, aesthetic issues, general environmental concerns, wetlands, cultural value, fish and wildlife values, flood hazards, flood plain value, land use, shoreline erosion, recreation, water supply and conservation, water equality, energy needs, safety and the general needs and welfare of the people.

The public notice of the comment period, issued by Karen Kirk Adams, chief of the permits section of the regulatory branch of the ACE, states that the ACE has determined that the "likelihood exists for the proposed work to impinge on properties listed in, or eligible for listing in, the National Register of Historic Places."

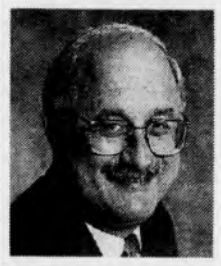
The Corps has determined that further consideration of the requirements of Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act is necessary in order to lessen the adverse impact of the project on historical properties or mitigate those impacts.

That decision was based on impacts associated with several alternatives offered by the MBTA in the Draft Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement.



Those impacts include noise, construction vibration, traffic and visual impacts, which the Corps has determined might adversely affect properties in the Lincoln National Register Historic District and the Fort Hill Street National Register-Eligible Historic District in Hingham.

Other National register properties in Braintree, Weymouth, Cohasset and Scituate could also be impacted.



The Corps is also requesting input relating to the Endangered Species Act regarding the presence of, and potential impacts to, certain species or their "critical habitat."

Extended Day Camp

The Extended Day Camp will be in session this summer from June 30 to August 15. The hours will be Monday through Friday, from 7 to 9 a.m. and 3 to 6 p.m., primarily accommodating those children enrolled in the Cohasset Summer Recreation Program. Also, as in the past, any family needing care during these dates and times are welcome.

Parents interested in registering their child or children for the Extended Day Camp, please call Liz Alpert or Gretchen Carney at 383-6860 between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. by May 23. Space is limited.

Reception Honoring Mrs. Price

Cohasset kindergarten teacher Marie Price will retire at the end of the school year. All students, past and present, and parents are cordially invited to an open house reception in her honor Sunday, June 1, at the Second Congregational Church (next to town hall), from 2 to 4 p.m. The room mothers are collecting contributions for a Memory Book for Mrs. Price.

All former students are asked to submit a message on an 8 1/2 x 11" sheet of paper to the boxes in the offices at each school building, or bring to the reception. Your contribution can take any format. For example, it could be a drawing, a letter, "then" and "now" pictures or a special story. Be sure to include your name and the year you had Mrs. Price. Also, help us spread the word, especially among older students and returning college students.

Young artists and members to the South Shore Art Center are invited to submit entries for the 42nd annual Festival on the Common exhibitions on May 30 and 31. from 10 am to 4 pm at the center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. the festival will take place June 20,21, and 22 on Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center. Members may bring work for the Festival Members Show and Young Artists can submit work for the Young Artists Exhibition sponsored by Garelick Farms.

Young Artists (18 years old and under) may submit entries on may 30 and 31 form 10 am to 4 pm at the Art Center gallery at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Entries must be matted and no larger that 18" by 24". there is no entry fee. Judged by artists Ellen Rotty and Ted Hirsch, gift and product Awards of Excellence will be given.

This year, the show will be exhibited under a tent on Cohasset Common.

To enter the members Show, membership must be current through June 1997 and can be paid at the time of entry, Each member may submit one entry ($6 fee) and the work must be original, recent and not previously exhibited at the SSAC or the annual festival. Work must be securely framed and wired, ready for hanging.

No clamped glass frames will be accepted. Sculpture and 3-D entries must be accompanied by their own pedestals.

For further information, please contact the Art Center, Tuesday through Friday 10 am to 4 pm at (617) 383-ARTS (2787).

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes, to be taught by Ms. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, on Cohasset Common, beginning Tuesday, May 27.

For all classes, the fee is $48 per dog for the eight week, 1-hour weekly, program. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Classes do not meet should weather conditions be inclement.

Friendship Perennial Border

This week work has continued on the grounds at the South Shore Community Center.

Plans are to plant 20 rose shrubs along the fence. If you would like to donate one, the cost is $10. Each rose shrub will be marked with a marker as to its donor.

The center is still in need of your perennials for a border. Any plants not used in the border will be sold at the Farmers Market to raise money for spring bulbs to be planted in the fall.

Plants may be dropped off at the center, and to donate a rose shrub send $10 to the South Shore Community Center, P.O Box 631, Cohasset, 0202S and indicate the name to be placed on the marker.

Ashley Stands Tall In Nobles' Goal

Local Goalie Shines In Rookie Season

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

At 5-foot-2 and 99-pounds Cohasset's Ashley Mihos wasn't exactly the most physically intimidating player on the ice for the Nobles & Greenough girls varsity hockey team last winter.

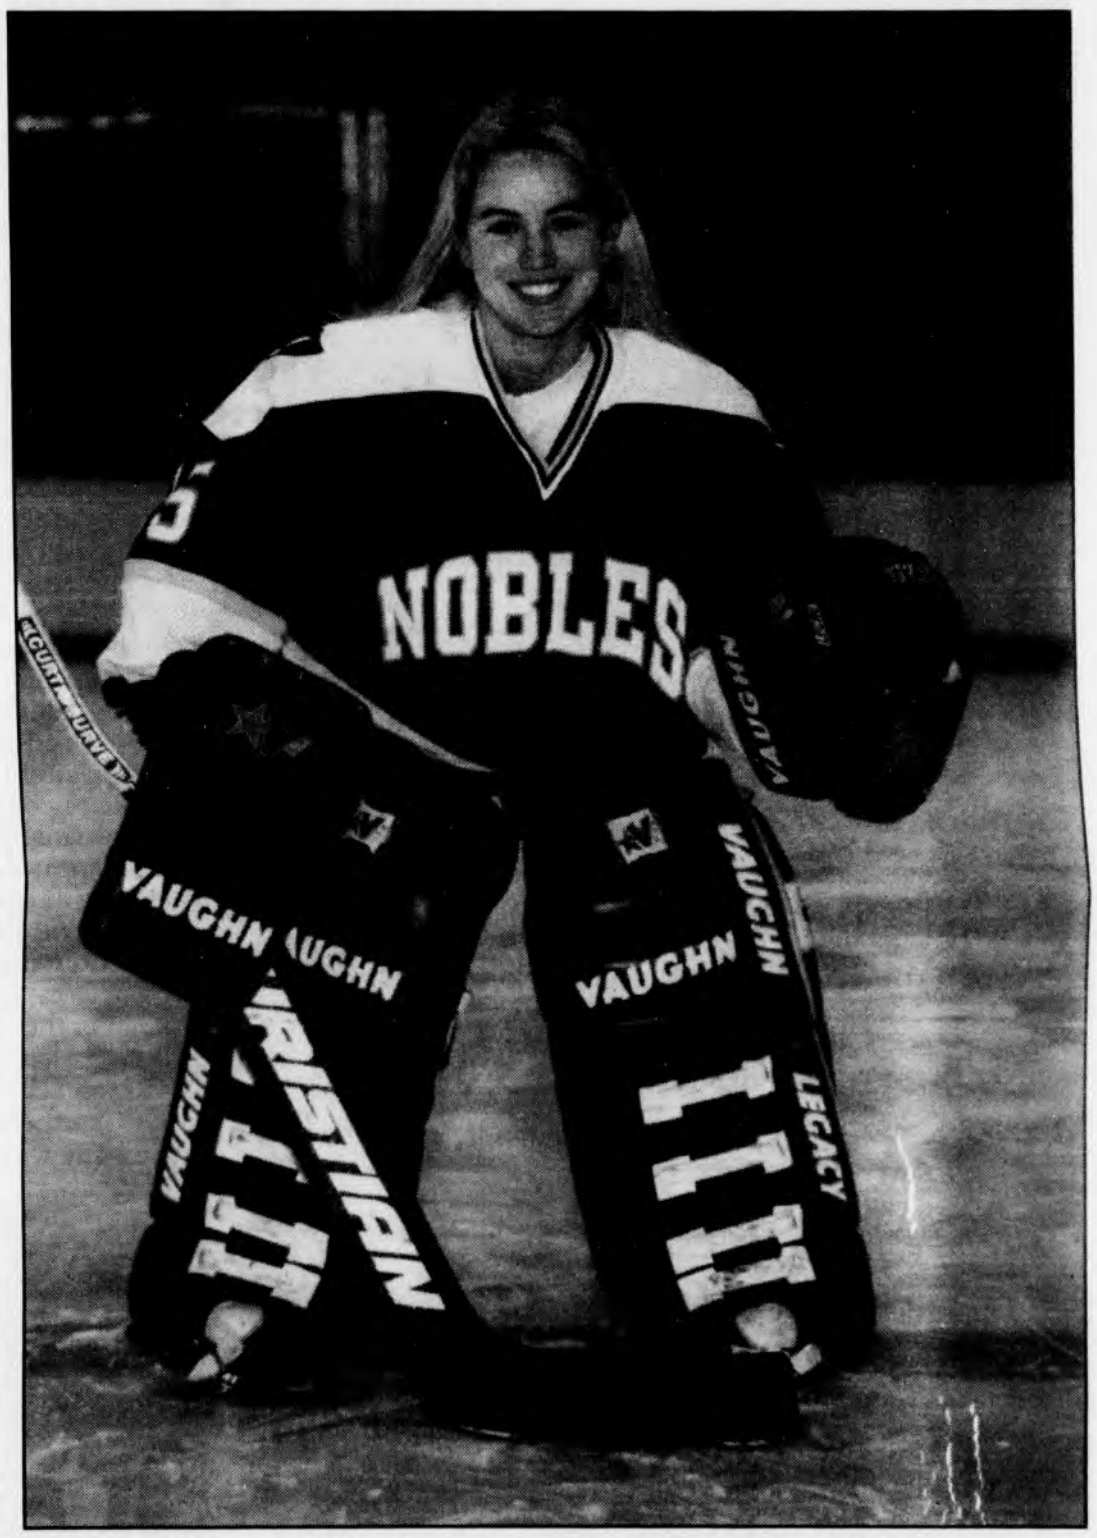
But what the ninth-grade goaltender lacked in size, she more than made up for in skill and savvy. The 15 year old made a season of cutting down opponents' angles when they broke into Nobles' zone, giving the sharpshooters very little net to aim at.

"That came natural to me," said Ashley, who breaks all stereotypes of female hockey players with her slight build and long blond hair.

The result was a stingy 2.05 goals against average as Nobles finished its Independent School League schedule with a second-place record 13-4.

What makes Ashley's season all the more impressive is the fact that she has only been stopping shots between the posts for four years. Ashley is hungry to improve and is the first to admit she is still learning the intricacies of goaltending every time she dons her more than 30 lbs. of equipment and steps on the ice.

"With experience," she said, "things start coming naturally."



The first rumblings that Ashley was considering giving hockey a try came while watching the Boston Bruins while in the fifth grade. She became intrigued by the play of former Bruin goaltender Andy Moog and came to the decision she wanted to become a goalie.

A student at Derby Academy in Hingham at the time, Ashley told her parents she wanted to take skating lessons and play ice hockey. Derby, however, didn't have a girls hockey team. If she wanted to play, it would have to be on the boys squad.

Ashley's parents hesitated at first, hoping instead she would consider girls basketball. But Ashley had no desire to spend her winters on the courts, but in the chilly rinks, protecting the net, instead.

With her parents' blessing, Ashley took skating lessons at Hingham's

Nobles & Greenough freshman goaltender Ashley Mihos of Cohasset posted a 2.05 goals against average in helping lead the Dedham-based school to a 13-4 record in the Indpendent Schools League.

Baseball Team Looks To The Future

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When a team has a record of 4-12 and has lost its last eight games, very few positive things can be written. On a big-league club, trade rumors, injuries, or contract hassles might be fodder, but not so for a high school team.

This year's Cohasset High baseball team will not make the tournament this season after a taste of the good life in '96. Instead, the Skippers will play the role of the spoiler while it faces Provincetown and Scituate, both teams twice, for their last four games of the year. However, there is good news.

This year's edition of Boys in Blue is a young one. With four sophomores and a freshman starting, the Skippers have built a solid nucleus of youngsters for the future. A staff of Greg Taylor, Joe Pergola, Ben Ketchum, Jim O'Sullivan and John-Paul Laugelle looks promising for another two years. Al Schwerin has a choke hold on the third-base spot and smaller groups of sophomores on the JV squad has also shown potential. Junior Pat Hurley has shown his versatility in the field, and his bat has come alive lately, spraying line drives to all fields.

However, the season is a lost one for the seniors. Rob Buckley, Grant Emde and Kevin McKenna have all shown senior leadership this year, along with being stellar in the field. Buckley is a reliable catcher, while McKenna has been nothing short of spectacular at first base. Emde's speed and quickness allow him to cover the wide outfield thoroughfares, making most flyballs a sure out.

After a 15-1 shellacking at the hands of the East Bridgewater Vikings, the Skippers trek to Provincetown on Saturday to square off against the Fishermen. Here's to a win.

EXTRA POINTS/Joe Reardon

Golf: The Game, Not The Sport

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

I'm not a golf fan. There, I said it. In fact, I consider it more of a game than a sport. I know people have argued for centuries over the definition of a sport. Granted, golf takes good eye/hand coordination, concentration, and no doubt the ability to perform under pressure. Those are all characteristics of most sports and also absolutely critical when it comes to hitting a ball into a hole. But, I don't know, I just can't bring myself to call it a sport.

I mean, how many sports can you name where you have the luxury of commenting on a shot, seconds after you know where it has ended up. If Wayne Gretzky turned to Mark Messier after his slapshot goal in the Rangers' playoff win over Philadelphia last weekend and told his teammate the puck was headed past Flyer goalie Ron Hextall, you can bet John LeClair would have creamed "The Great One" with an open-ice check.

Golf, too, is where business deals are made and broken. Rumor has it that Hakeem Olajuwon convinced Charles Barkley to give the Houston Rockets a try when the two were battling for a rebound when Barkley was still playing for the Phoenix Suns. I don't believe that story, but stranger things have happened.

And how annoying is watching golf on television? Fuzzy Zoeller, Mr. Good Publicity himself, drives off from a tee and you spend the next six seconds trying to pick out a tiny white ball in the clear-blue Florida sky. Give me the clicker and bring on the psychic hotline!

The clothes golfers wear are a bit much for me. And why, may I ask, do golfers wear spiked footgear? It's not as though they need to cut quick to the right to avoid a blitz from a group of caddies. They didn't get the steal sign from the club pro, or taking part in the course's annual 5K cross-country run.

There's something I obviously don't understand and the rest of the world does because golf is bigger than ever. Throw Tiger Woods into the mix and we have a new hero on par with Michael Jordan and Ken Griffey Jr.

I do like Tiger Woods. I respect any person who is at the very top of their vocation or avocation. And he's a likable guy, even though I don't buy into the fact that he's going to be more influential for Afro-Americans than either Martin Luther King or Muhammed Ali. His wacky father planted those seeds, not Tiger.

I love the fact that this 21-year-old kid has gone out and not only defeated older, more experienced golfers, but brought them to their knees. Tiger looks as though he could play several differen sports. Then, you could call him an athlete. But for now, he's the best at the game he plays.

Fishing Derby Enchants Kids

Cars gingerly inched along the oft-maintained dirt road leading into the Scituate Rod and Gun Club off Route 3A. As the macadam disappeared to the rear, noses pressed against steamy glass, eager to catch the first glimpse. And there, through the newly budded trees and brush, surrounded by great boulders, The Pond. But not just any pond, no. This pond, one day out of the year, is transformed from average fishing hole to a legendary fishing destination.

Row after row of cars parked bumper to bumper spill groups of excited kids and yawning adults, carrying their second cup of coffee in a travel mug. Kids know the routine and drag the parents inside the clubhouse to get registered, and get bait, and bobbers, and hooks, and eye the huge steaming cauldron of hot dogs for later. Some lift the lid of the barrel remembering the ice cold Cokes from last year and yes, there they are. Throwing caution to the wind, the bigger kids leap the three steps to the lawn below and sprint for a good spot on the shore. The smaller mites struggle down the stairs hollering for their bigger brethren to "wait for me!"

At the anointed hour the derby begins, and all around the pond the serious fishermen, er kids, thread worms on hooks, wind on bobbers, and cast into the best-looking spots. Others beseechingly plead with totally grossed-out Moms to impale their wriggling bait for them. The buzz of excitement is punctuated by oohs of wide-eyed kids and "did you see thats" of parents as the small pond's surface is regularly broken by the acrobatic trout below. Beautiful casts into an overhanging maple are interspersed with the excited shout of a kid hooking up for the first time, realizing that the fish on the other end is pulling as hard as he is. After a short while the first kids are marching to the clubhouse, great flipping trout dangling from heavily bowed rods, to get the weighmaster's opinion.

Often after the news that it's a smaller one or that the big one hasn't been caught yet, the kids are distracted by the free hot dogs and Coke, and reappear from the clubhouse with a drink and a dog in each hand, rod, reel and fish quickly forgotten. For four hours the overstocked pond entertains more than 150 kids from the Scituate area, many fishing for the first time. By the end of the day a clear champion of the young fishermen has emerged. Twelve-year-old John Kreitz of Scituate, relying on his hard-earned years of experience, picked the best spot and came away with a big trout weighing close to 3 pounds. John was awarded a rod and reel prize.

Seaworms and eels work well in the estuaries for those inclined to drift bait for schoolies. Good reports have been coming in from Black's Creek, Back River, Cohasset Harbor, and the North River and its tributaries. Small swimmers and spoons do the trick for the hardware crowd. Normans, Mambos, Kastmasters and dressed bucktails are hot. The green and white Clauser appears to have the early lead on the fly side.

Though the wind has been fierce this week, two boats managed to get out long enough to thrash 200-300 pounds of mackerel. The next few weeks should see an abundance of mackerel in the area waters. Cod are scarce to the north of the BG buoy some report. Others seem to do well farther to the south. Clams and Solvroken jigs are preferred. Stop by your local shop for the latest information.

Junior Skippers Rebound, Trounce Norwell 16-5

Just six days after losing a heartbreaker to Hingham, the Cohasset junior lacrosse team returned to action May 18 and stomped Norwell 2, 16-5.

Playing a near-flawless game that was the antithesis of the tilt with Hingham, Cohasset featured a balanced attack, crisp passing and aggressive defense that left Norwell frustrated throughout the contest.

Curt Kahn finished with three goals to lead Cohasset. Kahn has averaged more than a hat trick per game for the Junior Skippers. Paul Digan, Greg O'Connell, Evan Pestone and Matt Davis each scored twice, with Nick Spirito, Robert Hickey, Michael Devine, Michael Rasmussen and Rob Carpenter adding single tallies. Rasmussen joins Kahn as the only Cohasset players to score in all five games this season.

Digan and Hickey each added two assists, with Spirito, O'Connell, Pestone and Dwayne Morris also helping out on Cohasset scores.

Nick Murphy made eight first-half saves, including several key stops in a tightly played first quarter, helping Cohasset rebound from a slow start to a 9-2 half-time lead. Stephen Davis played the fourth quarter in goal — his first action there this year — and made one save.

The win came less than a week after the Junior Skippers suffered their only loss of the season, 13-10 at home against Hingham May 12. Sloppy play helped Hingham open a 6-1 first-quarter lead, which stretched to 9-3 by half-time. At that point, Hingham had outshot Cohasset 24-4, and only Murphy's stellar goaltending (15 first-half saves) kept the deficit at six.

Cohasset rebounded in the second half, twice closing to within two goals, but the Skippers never could get all the way back. Curt Kahn had four goals to lead Cohasset, with Robert Hickey adding a hat trick. Evan Pestone finished with one goal and three assists.

Murphy made 22 saves on the day.

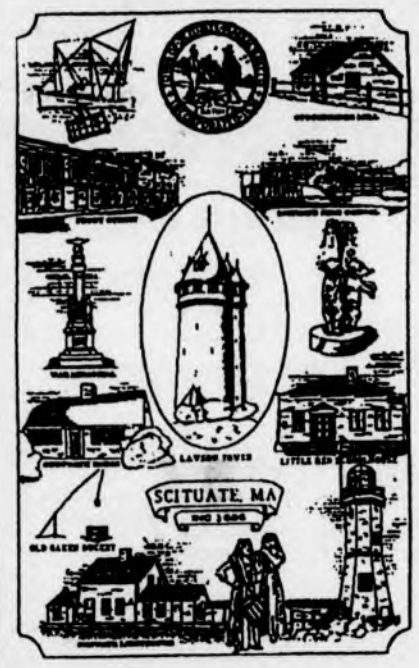
Halfway into its season, Cohasset stands at 4-1. Kahn has 16 goals to lead the team, but he has had plenty of help. Matt Davis has 10 goals and two assists. Pestone has eight goals and four assists, with Hickey right behind with eight goals and three assists.

"Ideally, you want a lacrosse team that scores 10 goals a game and gives up five," says Junior Skippers coach Chuck Jaffe. "We're currently averaging 12 — which is unheard of at this level — and giving up six. So long as we play smart and avoid the mental mistakes that hurt us against Hingham, we'll be a good test for any team we face."

The junior lacrosse team gets its stiffest test of the season Friday, May 23, when Marshfield comes to town. Marshfield's junior team has yet to lose, including a convincing victory over Hingham. The game will face off at 4:30 p.m. at Milliken Field.

Jade Forest Adds New Curriculum

John Loupos, owner of Jade Forest Kung Fu/ Tai Chi/ Internal Arts of Cohasset has recently been authorized by internationally renowned Master Wei Lun Huang, to teach Liu He Ba Fa.



Many people are already familiar with the slow motion art of Tai Chi Chuan, but remain unaware that Chinese culture produced two other lessor known internal styles as well, Ba Gua Chang and Hsing Yi Chuan.

Liu He Ba Fa, which means 6 Harmonies & Eight Methods, is a hybrid system combining the distinguishing features of each of the other three. People interested in learning more about this new addition to the Jade Forest curriculum may contact John Loupos at Jade Forest, (617) 383-6822 extraordinary support.

Pace Setters.

The Crowley and Sullivan families were among hundreds who attended Hospice of the South Shore's Sixth Annual Mall Walk.

Thanks to everyone's support, more than $123,000 was raised to help Hospice of the South Shore provide care and comfort to terminally ill patients and their families.

The Mall Walk was made possible by scores of dedicated volunteers, including co-chairs Karen McArdle and Dianne Ritter Chase, Dolly Bicknell, Laura Bicknell-Carbone, Eleanor Hall, Robin Hoffman, Charlene Long, Karen Malloy, Tom McCarthy, Rose Mone, Jo Anne and Steve Olson, Teresa Sasserson, Phyllis Troupe, and Bud and Barbara Watts.

Special "thank yous" also go to Rockland Trust (the Walk's lead sponsor), Citizens Bank, Fleet Bank, and Hanover Mall.

Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, helps anyone with a life-limiting illness. Our nurses, aides, social workers, counselors, and volunteers are available 24 hours a day to support patients and their families. Donations help defray the $200,000 in free care that Hospice of the South Shore provides each year.

Ashley Stands Tall

Pilgrim Arena. She spent the winters of sixth and seventh grade as a member of the boys team, one of two girls on the squad.

Their reception by male teammates was less than enthusiastic. "At first they weren't [illegible]hot with the idea," Ashley said. "The thought it was kind of a joke. After a while they were looking at us as just two more players on the team."

Ashley obviously made an impression on her fellow teammate. She became the first female hockey player in the school's history to be elected a team captain. Ashley was home sick the day she learned of the honor.

"My coach (Brooks Robbins) called me," Ashley said. "At first I didn't really believe it, but then I was really excited. I knew they (teammates) trusted me. I felt really confident with my team picking me."

Robbins was most impressed with Ashley's desire to improve and the dedication needed to accomplish her goals.

"She was quite remarkable in her focus," Robbins said. "She has devoted herself to becoming a good female goalie. I think her talent is being appreciated at the next level."

Ashley had a solid seventh-grade season, garnering the team's MVP award. Along the way she also played for the South Shore Hornets, an all-girls team that played most of its games in Canton and Concord, and spent two years as a member of the South Shore Seahawks.

Ashley also had a phenomenal field hockey career at Derby. The squad was undefeated for four seasons, all of which Ashley spent as the team's goalie. Over that course of time Ashley was impenetrable in goal, allowing just two goals.

Ashley's past season at Nobles was highlighted by a 5-3 victory over Assabet Valley of Concord, one of her best games in net, if not the best.

The select team was as tough a squad as Nobles had faced all season. Assabet was the No. 2 ranked team in the world in the 14- to 17-year-old division, based on its second-place finish in the International tourney in Australia.

Nobles, and Ashley, was up to the challenge, however. Ashley was as sharp as she had been all season, turning away nearly every shot Assabet leveled on her. She finished with 45 saves to backbone Nobles' huge win.

Nobles coach Mark Harrington said the victory over Assabet was only one of the games in a stretch where Ashley faced the "real iron teams.

"That was her first time where she went against some tough teams," Harrington said. "Ashley played well against Tabor (Academy) and shut out Lawrence (Academy) for two periods.

"She's young, and has lots to learn of course, but she's a good learner. There's a certain amount of special drive behind Ashley which is good in a goaltender. She should improve. It's pretty rare that I have such a young goaltender. I know she's going to work hard this summer at camp. I'm looking forward to having her back."

Ashley appeared to grow stronger and more confident the longer the game went on. "It was a total adrenaline rush," she said. "I can't believe I kept stopping them."

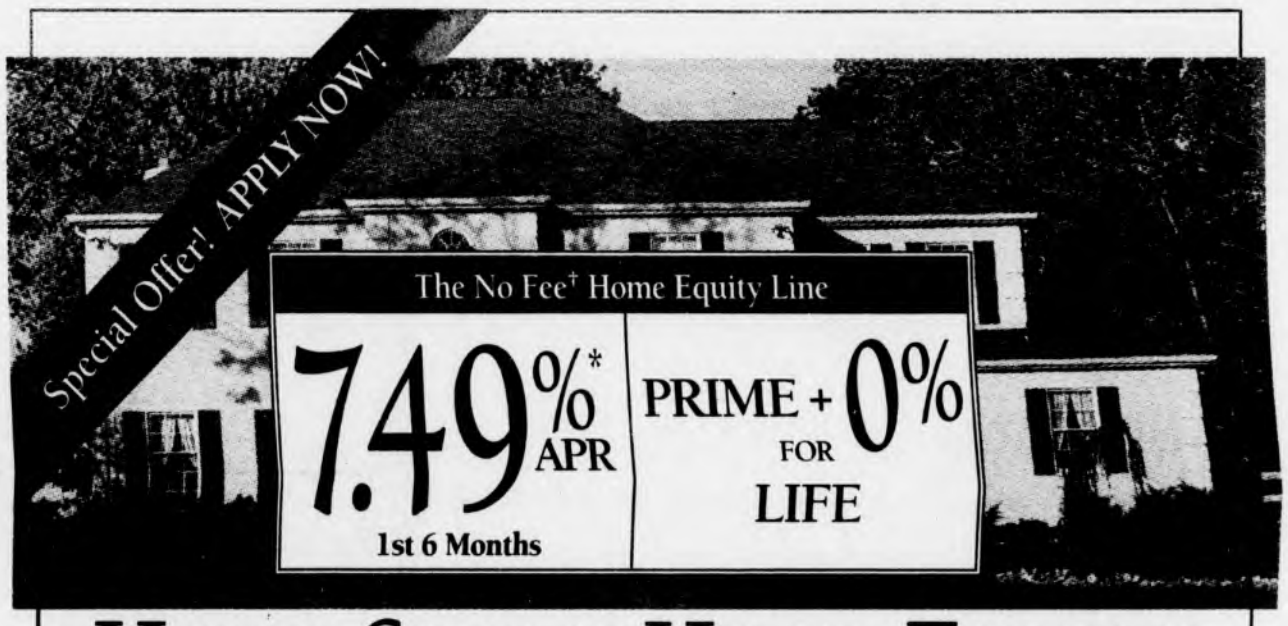
She credits her teammates, particularly captain Jamie Notman, who will be playing at Harvard next winter, with helping her make a smooth adjustment to high school hockey.

"We have a lot of amazing players on the team," Ashley said, "and they've been great with me."

Ashley has sustained more than her fair share of bumps and bruises, including a concussion that knocked her out of a game. She is currently working on strengthening the muscles in her legs to offset a knee problem she developed. But she has no intention of letting the injuries slow her down.

This summer Ashley will attend the Gary Dineen Hockey School on Cape Cod. She'll be on the ice for a one-week session in Dennis and for two weeks at the camp in Bourne. Ashley's also looking to join a summer league somewhere in the area where she can further her skills.

Her skills are more clear cut than they were going into her freshman year when she didn't know what to expect. Ashley is more comfortable in the net, and with a year's experience behind her, she is more confident she can do continue to do a good job for Nobles.



"I really want to improve my game in high school and eventually be the starting goalie," Ashley said. "I'd like to take hockey as far as I can take it."

Ashley's travels so far have been pretty successful. And with her determination this is just the beginning.

Fifteen-year-old goaltender Ashley Mihos has earned a wealth of experience playing on the Nobles & Greenough varsity girls hockey team during her freshman season. Ashley is looking forward to another strong season next winter between the posts in the Independent Schools League.

Maritime Museum to Open June 1

By David H. Wadsworth
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum at Elm Street, Cohasset Center, will open for its summer season Sunday, June 1, each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. through September. There is no charge for admission and donations are accepted.

The Maritime Museum is an 18th century former ship chandlery built by Cohasset shipowner Samuel Bates and for nearly two centuries was located near Bates Wharf at Cohasset Harbor. In the 1950s the old chandlery was given to the Society by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox, and was moved to its present location adjacent to the society's first historical museum, the Capt. John Wilson — David Nichols House.

Today the Maritime Museum holds extensive collections relating to Cohasset's maritime history, including ship models, lifesaving equipment, 19th century fishing gear, navigation instruments, maps and charts, and tells the story of famous Minot's Ledge Lighthouse just off Cohasset's shores. Also found in the museum are collections of general historical nature, including Native American stone tools, carpenters', shipwrights' and cordwainers' tools, and a "Fisherman's Country Store," containing diverse artifacts, once part of the stock of Tower Bros. Co. ship chandlery, also itself formerly located at Cohasset Harbor.

During the 18th and 19th centuries Cohasset was a maritime community, home port for "fleets" of family-owned fishing schooners catching mackerel for market; a center of shipbuilding at "Ship Cove" or Cohasset Harbor; and home of both fishing and deep sea captains sailing large merchant vessels from Boston to ports in all parts of the world. Generations of Cohasset families went to sea during the great "Age of Sail," and Cohasset's young men signed aboard the town's mackerel schooners by the age of 10 or 11 years. Some grew up to command fishing vessels, or serve as crew aboard the mercantile ships at Boston. A few, such as Capt. Joseph H. Smith and Capt. James Collier, rose to command clippers sailing distant seas.

The Historical Society's Maritime Museum specializes in Cohasset's own history, and also serves as a location for research into subjects such as genealogy of early Cohasset families and houses. The society's curator is on duty most days at the Maritime Museum. Special guided tours may be prearranged by calling the society at (617) 383-1434.

This unusual museum, in its 19th century setting, offers a unique glimpse into an age long past, when this small New England village turned its eyes to the sea.

Farmers Market on the Common

The 1997 Cohasset Village Farmers' market on Historic cohasset Common will be held Thursdays 3 pm to 7 pm form June 5 to October 9. It will feature a free folk music concert the first Thursday of each month long with organic produce, strawberries, herbs, perennials, bedding plants, Peacemeal bread, fresh flower bouquets, French pastries, honey products.

The June 5 market will feature Mark Purcell, singer, songwriter, along with fiddle player Joseph Kessler.

Plan to visit Village shops and cafés while supporting local agriculture on the South Shore.

Avoiding any surprises on your credit report

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Most people have never seen a copy of their own credit report, unless they have been denied a loan or had credit problems. But sometimes paying your credit card bills, insurance and mortgage payments on time isn't enough to ensure good credit. It is important to realize that the financial institutions that report your account information and the credit bureaus that compile the credit reports have been known to make mistakes.

"People don't want to know about their credit until they have a problem," said Maxine Sweet, a spokeswoman for Experian (formerly TRW), one of the three major credit bureaus that collect and sell individuals' financial information.

'A report done in 1991 by the Consumers Union showed that about half of all credit reports contained inaccurate information -- ranging from a wrong address to a fraudulent credit card account.'

A report done in 1991 by the Consumers Union showed that about half of all credit reports contained inaccurate information -- ranging from a wrong address to a fraudulent credit card account. While industry experts say credit bureaus have improved their records since then, mistakes are by no means extinct. Eric Mierkwinski, a spokesman for U.S. PIRG in Washington D.C., says that the most common errors on credit reports are a result of the intermingling of information on two different people with the same name, or incomplete data that reads as a missed payment.

Making sure your credit report is accurate could prevent potential problems when you go to apply for a loan or a job. Banks, insurers, mortgage lenders, landlords, and employers -- anyone who needs to know your credit history for business purposes -- can obtain your credit report. To make sure your credit report is free of mistakes, your first step is to order a copy by phone from one of the three big credit bureaus (Most smaller credit bureaus buy reports from them.): Experian, (800-682-7654), Equifax (800-685-1111) or Trans Union (800-916-8800).

Reports cost $8 per copy in most instances, but certain people qualify for free copies under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.. Massachusetts residents, for example, are allowed one free copy of their report per year upon request (so are residents of some other states). Anyone who has been denied credit can get a complimentary copy of their report from the bureau that provided the data to the lender, within 60 days of their request. Those who are unemployed and looking for work or who receive income subsidies from the government can receive copies for free as well.

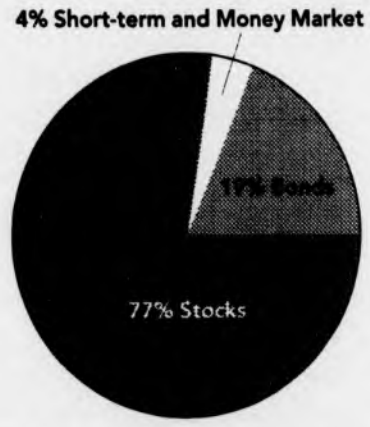
When you call, be prepared to give the automated operator the following details (it's difficult, if not impossible, to speak to a human being when ordering; the bureaus save all of their customer service representatives for credit report disputes.): your full legal name, -- clarify, for instance, whether you are John Doe Jr. versus Sr. -- your Social Security number, date of birth, current mailing address and previous addresses dating back perhaps as far as five years, depending on the credit bureau. The credit report should be sent to you within five days.

It's that easy. In fact, this process makes it appear as if your credit report would be accessible to any other person who possesses some of your personal information. But Norman Black, spokesman for Equifax, affirms that his company will not send an individual's credit report to an address other than their own, unless his company has the individual's permission or proof that the report is to be used for legitimate business purposes.

The credit report you receive in the mail will confirm the personal information you gave when ordering and will list the following: your credit card accounts and loans (e.g. student or mortgage), the dates you opened the accounts, your credit limits or original loan amounts, and the accounts' balances. If you have neglected at any time to make minimum required payments on balances due, those lapses will be noted. And that's not all. A typical credit report will also list any relevant rulings from state and county courts relating to bankruptcies, tax liens, and overdue child support payments. At the bottom of your report you should find a list of the companies and people who have viewed your report over the last six months and any employers that have requested it in the last two years.

If any items are missing, incomplete or incorrect, the Federal Trade Commission recommends that you dispute it in writing, rather than calling the bureau's toll-free customer service number. Documenting your complaint will help down the road if problems arise in resolving the issue. In your letter, include your full name and address and clearly state which item on your report you disagree with and why--you may even want to include a copy of your credit report with the disputed item circled.

Be as specific as possible. Clarify, for example, details of how you were never delinquent in your credit card payments. Include copies of documents (hold onto the originals) that support your argument. And the FTC suggests you send the letter by certified mail so you can prove the credit bureau received it. It should take no more than 30 days to resolve the issue, during which time the credit bureau will check with the creditor who supplied the disputed information. If the bureau finds that you are right, you can request that a notice of the correction be sent to anyone who reviewed your report in the past six months. If an investigation doesn't resolve your dispute, however, you can file a statement of up to 100 words to explain your side of the story. This statement will be mailed out with your credit report whenever it is requested.



Just remember, while credit bureaus are accountable for the accuracy of the information they provide, they are not responsible for whether or not a given creditor grants you a loan. Banks have various kinds of systems, independent of the bureaus, for ranking perspective customers' creditworthiness. "One of the most common myths is 'the credit bureau denied me credit.' The reality is that creditors make their own decisions with the information we provide," said Sweet. "We are like the library; we don't write the books, we store them."

SIMPLIFY INVESTING WITH FIDELITY ASSET MANAGER: GROWTH

Joie de Montreal

This Canadian city is the ultimate vacation destination

By Jim Woodworth

Summer in the city can be hot, and there is no hotter place for a summer vacation than the city of Montreal.

While Montreal — which celebrated its 350th birthday five years ago — is just 50 miles over the Canadian line in the province of Quebec, it seems far removed, both literally and figuratively, from its North American cousins south of the border.

That's because it is.

While Montreal, like its fellow Canadian urban centers, is a friendly, clean place to visit, it is also a hustling, bustling entertainment and arts center with the second-largest French-speaking population in the world. Located some 320 miles from Boston at the confluence of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, seasoned travelers claim the closest thing the United States has to offer is New Orleans, another city with a decidedly French accent.

And, while the French-speaking population of Montreal — roughly 70 percent, compared to an English-speaking population of 15 percent, and all other tongues combined another 15 percent — is very prevalent, it only adds to the rich cultural mosaic for which the city is known. "In all the tourist areas, virtually all of the people are bilingual," assured Roselyne Hebert of Quebec Province's tourism bureau. "It is really no problem."

In fact, summer in Montreal is an endless stream of festivals and artistic events, with perhaps the grandest of all being the Montreal International Jazz Festival June 26 through July 6. Considered by some critics to be the best festival of its kind in the entire world, it features 400 concerts, 300 of them free.

The festival consumes four city blocks in the heart of the city. The entertainers perform outdoors, without the distraction of traffic noise, which is diverted from the performance area. Some of this year's performers include Manhattan Transfer, Herbie Hancock, and Tony Bennett. For a free program and more information about the festival, call (888) 515-0515.

"Montreal is an important cultural center," said Hebert, noting it ranks the cities of Toronto and Quebec in that department.

If jazz doesn't grab you, the continent's only Formula One world championship race just might. The Molson Grand Prix is held in Montreal June 13-15. Auto racing fans will find this competition an exhilarating ride that tops even the Indianapolis 500.

For those who prefer to take things at a slower pace, Montreal offers a wonderful collection of museums, including the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, the McCord Museum of Canadian History, the Canadian Centre for Architecture, and the Stewart Museum. A special one- to three-day museum pass that saves visitors up to 50 percent admission on 19 museums is available. But be warned: that's just a handful of the museums waiting for you in Montreal.

And, there's more than 100 theater troupes, 50 dance companies, and more than 150 concert venues to keep visitors from getting bored. Oh yes, don't forget the countless shops and boutiques. "In Montreal, we're well-known for our theater and dance," said Herbert.

If the Great Outdoors is where you prefer to be, then you have myriad options in Montreal. Parc des Iles, located in the middle of the St. Lawrence River, offers the Biosphere — a water ecomuseum — and some of the best views of the city.

The city's Botanical Garden, which includes the world-famous Insectarium, is the second-largest of its kind in the world.

If organized athletic competition is more your style, be sure to catch the team that Dan Duquette built before he was lured back to his home state by the Boston Red Sox. Diehard fans will want to catch a Montreal Expos game in Olympic Stadium, where they will recognize the National League brand of baseball Duquette has brought to the Old Towne Team. And Montreal is the home of the most-storied franchise in hockey, the Montreal Canadiens, who play their home games at the Molson Centre.

But that's just the tip of the iceberg when it comes to the festivals and events held in Montreal. To get a full picture, call (800) 577-2266, extension 401, and ask for your free Canada Festivals and Events Guide.

So, you've spent a full day touring, soaking in the sights and the rich cultural history of Montreal. But you're not done yet. You want to get out and enjoy some night life.

Boy, did you come to the right place.

Want to try your luck at gaming? The Montreal Casino is ranked among the 10 largest in the world. Oh, you're not a high roller, but you love to get out and have a great time? Montreal's bars and nightclubs are open until 3 a.m., and the music and atmosphere may have be equaled, but never bettered anywhere in the world.

What will all this cost you? Less than you might think. The current exchange rate (41 percent) in Canada is among the best in years, so your dollars will go a whole lot further. There's more good news: you don't need a passport to travel in Canada; you can get by with a birth certificate and one photo ID, such as your driver's license. And speaking of driver's licenses, your United States license in valid in Canada.

And, visitors will be happy to know they can leave the driving to others — the Montreal Metro subway system links virtually all of the city's most popular shopping and entertainment complexes.

Plan on bringing some things back with you? You're entitled to bring back $400 worth of Canadian goods duty-free if you spend more than 48 hours north of the border. And, in some cases, you're entitled to a rebate of the goods and services tax charged to Canadian residents.

Want to learn more? A variety of organizations are willing to help you with lodging, tours, suggestions for entertainment and restaurants, and so much more. Start with the Canadian Tourism Commission at (800) 577-2266. The Province of Quebec has detailed information available by calling its tourism bureau at (800) 363-7777.

Closer to home, the Canadian Consulate can be reached by calling (617) 262-3760, or by writing to 3 Copley Place, Boston, MA 02116.

So come on up to Montreal. You'll be glad you did, eh?

Dwyer Named South Shore Advertising Manager

Amy Dwyer of Hingham is the new South Shore Sales Manager for Community Newspaper Company/South, publishers of the Mariner newspapers and Pennysavers.

Dwyer, who worked for 12 years at Ziff-Davis Publishing Company, is heading up the advertising sales effort for all Mariner newspapers and Pennysavers on the South Shore. Dwyer joined the sales team in early April and said she is impressed so far with what she has been a part of.

"In an age where world news has become a commodity, what people are craving is news and information that has direct impact on their lives. Community Newspaper Company is dedicated to answering that need at the hometown level with stories that reflect what's important in the community. This, in turn, provides highly targeted vehicles for companies to market their products and services," said Dwyer, who was born and raised in Abington. "The Community Newspaper Company/South group of newspapers is unmatched in the ability to provide such a product mix that can match the diverse needs on the South Shore."

Asa Cole, executive publisher of Community Newspaper Company/South, said "I am delighted to have someone with Amy's extensive sales background and familiarity with the South Shore lead our sales efforts."

Dwyer had extensive experience with Ziff-Davis — international publishers of high-tech magazines and newspapers — working in the company's national sales, corporate marketing and operations departments. When she left the organization, she was manager of network programs and had created a company strategy to integrate 20 technology focused publications, including PC Week and PC Magazine.

The Holy Cross College graduate said she sees exciting opportunities unfolding at CNC-South.

"The Mariner company is currently transitioning to an enhanced business model that promotes advertisers' ability to deliver their sales message to their target market with greater frequency and efficiency. The goal of our salesperson is to be a consultant to their advertising customer....understand their business, work with them to target their core market and help them to develop an effective sales message," said Dwyer. "I am personally committed to partnering with our advertisers to ensure their marketing objectives are met through advertising in the pages of the Mariner newspapers."

Dwyer can be reached at (617) 837-4504.

Arthur A. Smith and Cherie Czarnota have opened a Pet Safe Fencing franchise in Cohasset Village at 18 Elm St.

Local Pet Safe Fencing Franchise

Arthur A. Smith Jr., South Shore home builder and remodeler, and Cherie Czarnota, marketing executive, have been awarded the Massachusetts franchise of Pet Safe Fencing.

Pet Safe Fencing, founded more than seven years ago, is a pet containment system, which gives pets run of the entire property without fencing which can obstruct views.

Pet Safe Fencing features an underground cable on the property which transmits a radio signal to a tiny computer in the pet's collar, telling him where it's safe to play, what the boundaries are and what areas he must avoid.

Headquartered in Cohasset Village at 18 Elm St., (617) 383-0000, Pet Safe Fencing plans to create as many as 20 jobs in the administrative, sales, marketing and installation areas.

Sinnott to Speak at Awards Dinner

Sharon Sinnott, founder of The Sinnott School, an innovative business and employment skills program, will be the keynote speaker at the South Shore Women's Business Network Annual Meeting and Women Mean Business awards dinner, May 22 at Lantana, Randolph. The event is sponsored by Fleet Bank and Max Magazine, a Mariner/CNC publication. Rockland Trust Company is the SSWBN Platinum Partner.

The Women Mean Business awards were established in 1996 to honor individuals who have made a significant contribution to advancing the success of women in business; Sinnott was one of five award recipients in 1996, recognized for her innovation and commitment in founding The 1997 recipients are: Louise Alibrandi, The Face Place, Hanover; Noreen Carey-Neville, CLU, CHFC of Carey-Neville Associates, Weymouth; Vicki Donlan, Regional Marketing Director of Spence Center for Women's Health, Braintree; Elizabeth K. Levin, Vice President, Rizzo Associates, Boston, and President, The Alliance of Women's Business & Professional Organizations; Lois L. Lindauer, Founder, Diet Workshop, Inc., and President, The Boston Club; Patricia Maclsaac, R.N., CH, South Shore Hypnosis Center, Hingham; and Charlotte Phinney, Charlotte Hair Etc., Inc., Scituate.

Student Sexual Harassment Policy Reviewed

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Health Education Advisory Committee has put together an addendum to be added to the school's 1994 Sexual Harassment Policy for the students. The need for more adult advocates and a "formality of process" will be critical with the separation of middle school and high school next fall, officials say.

The current policy calls for a designated "reporting officer" who acts as the main contact for a student who has been harassed. Currently, the student who has been harassed will seek out the reporting officer. The officer then helps the student write a letter to the alleged perpetrator describing what was offensive and how it made he or she feel, and then the officer delivers the letter to the alleged perpetrator and discusses the incident.

Cohasset's reporting officer is Mike Gill, health education coordinator and director of physical education. Gill will no longer teach middle school students with the separation of faculty between the middle school and the high school. He fears that because these students will not know him, they might not be as apt to report misconduct.

"There are plenty of good people in this system who would be very willing to help students with this issue. I can't be the only one students come to. More than one person has to know what to do," Gill said.

The Health Education Advisory Committee believes that all teachers need to [illegible] trained to handle these typ[illegible] complaints. The advisory [illegible] mittee wants students to [illegible] comfortable going to any teacher. Members point out that students tend to click with certain teachers and not with others. Students are not going to trust a teacher he or she doesn't feel close to, they say.

The new policy addition creates a tool for teachers to use to help students resolve sexual harassment issues. In place of the current system of a letter written by a student with the assistance of Mike Gill, a standard form will be filled out by a student with the teacher he or she chooses to confide in. The form has four parts: the first section asks the victim to describe the inappropriate behavior; the second section asks the victim how the behavior made he or she feel; the third section describes the legality of the inappropriate action and gives it a name; and the fourth section describes the consequence of the offense. The teacher, acting as adult advocate, then sets up the meeting with the alleged perpetrator and takes it from there.

The school committee will forward the addendum draft to legal counsel but believes it will be well received. Judith Murphy, a parent and an administrative law judge, is a member of the Health Education Advisory Committee and was able to help with the legalities of creating the policy.

The committee hopes to see the new policy included in next year's student handbook.

School Committee Reorganizes

The committee welcomed new members, Kathy Ofsthun and Joe McElroy, at their meeting last Thursday. The committee then appointed Maureen Jerz as chairman, Rick Shea as vice chairman, and Ralph Kidder as secretary.

Maureen Jerz thanked Kidder for his service as chairman for two years.

Selectmen to Rizzo: Clam Up or Else

Comments on Village Station Study Irk Board

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Selectmen said Monday that Dean Rizzo will have to shut up on the village station issue if he wants to remain on the town's Greenbush mitigation committee.

And although they praised his hard work on the committee — which is working with the MBTA to resolve issues ranging from grade crossings and traffic lights to noise and environmental matters — they scolded him for being quoted in a Cohasset Mariner story last week.

The story focused on how some village businesses feel left out of the decision process on where the train station in Cohasset should be located and long for a study on the pros and cons of a village station.

In a telephone interview, Rizzo said the selectmen's gag order is confusing.

"I don't see what is wrong with responding to questions as a member of the business community," he said. "Just because business concerns are not the same as town concerns, I can't express them?"

Town meeting earlier this spring turned down a request to study the village station and selectmen say that should be the end of the matter.

"The decision was made and we're not interested in having it revisited," Selectman Nan Roth said.

She said Rizzo, who was called by the Mariner for the story, should

Cohasset Beams on Memorial Day

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The weather in picturesque Cohasset was in perfect cooperation for a parade. In the 78 years since the first Memorial Day Parade was held here, you couldn't have asked for a better morning.

At 9:50 a.m. on Memorial Day the parking lot of the South Shore Music Circus looked as it would on almost any other Monday with the exception of Larry Lecours, a veteran of World War II and the Korean War, sitting in his car, waiting. At the age of 69 he has been marching in the Cohasset Memorial Day Parade for the past four years, ever since Jim Leonard, his good friend and comrade, at the age of 74, had died of a heart attack while marching in this historic parade in 1994.

"It's all about remembering; and as long as my legs will carry me I'll be marching here," Lecours said.

By 10:30 a.m., 20 or so other veterans, some wearing army fatigues, others wearing full-dress uniforms, had gathered in the parking lot talking among themselves, remembering

Zoning Board Questions Water Tank Location

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The zoning board of appeals understands the need for a second water tank. But zoning board members want to make sure Bear Hill is the best site for the second tank.

The water commissioners brought their plans to construct a second, two-million gallon, concrete water tank on Bear Hill before the planning board and the zoning board May 21. The planning board voted 2-1 to give the tank a favorable recommendation, but the zoning board wants more information on alternate sites before considering a request for a height variance.

Zoning board members will meet with water commissioners again June 3 at 8 p.m. to discuss the tank.

Town meeting approved the $1.4 million tank on Bear Hill, and water commissioner Robert Kasameyer said the water commissioners were merely carrying out the town's wishes.

The 65-foot water tank being proposed is 30-feet higher than the town's 35-foot height limit in a residential zone.

Water commissioners approved plans at their May 8 meeting to build the 2-million gallon water tank on Bear Hill, despite pleas from abutters to consider alternate sites on Scituate Hill. The commissioners remained receptive to exploring Scituate Hill sites, including a possible location on land formerly owned by Webb Norfolk Conveyor, Co.

Town officials are concerned that fire flows are inadequate at night because the water plant is closed. A second tank would provide better capacity to fight night time fires, especially during the dry summer months.

Kasameyer cited other problems with the tank. He said the tank had never been completely drained and cleaned in its entire 30-year history.

Cohasset's Week

Town Manager is Topic

Selectmen will ask the Government Structure Committee to their June 9 meeting to discuss changes to the town manager article approved at this year's annual town meeting.

The GSC was on Monday's agenda but the discussion was postponed because Selectmen Ronnie McMorris and Michael Sullivan could not attend the meeting in time. They arrived late to Monday's meeting due to a school awards ceremony.

McMorris said plans are to discuss how to re-draft the act to deal with changes.

Selectman Nan Roth called the changes "amendments."

The town manager act, which requires approval by the legislature, has been approved by the House and goes before the Senate next week.

Lead citizen petitioner for the town manager article, Thomas Gruber, and Government Structure Committee member Lillian Curley attended a hearing before the House local affairs committee last week. No selectmen attended.

Roth said Monday the relationship that town manager will have with elected boards needs to be clarified. Selectman Merle Brown said some boards, such as the recreation commission, were left out of the article altogether.

Selectmen voted 4-1 against the town manager article before town meeting. Then-Selectman Peter Pratt was the sole selectman to support the move to town manager. Pratt did not seek reelection.

New Selectman Diane Sullivan, who supports the town manager, cautioned her fellow board members that the intent of town meeting be adhered to. She said town meeting wanted the town manager to "control everything."

Two weeks ago, selectmen conducted a town manager summit with other boards on the matter. At that time, it was agreed that the Government Structure Committee would meet with other boards individually to discuss concerns about the town manager form of government.

Drug & Alcohol Board Clarified

Selectmen clarified this week just who sits on the Drug & Alcohol Committee, Members are Margo Aikens, Bill Adams, Lisa Dick, Ron Hammer and student representatives Tony Bramblett and Jami Butman. Kathy Yaeger is the PSO representative on the board and Lisa Matos, PALS officer, represents the police department. Selectmen appointed new members Nancy Hurtig, 124 Lamberts Lane, and the Rev. Clifford Cutler, 24 Highland Ave.

Roth, who is the selectman's liaison to the committee, said more members are welcome. The committee's charge will be two-fold, she said. It will carry out special projects and meeting quarterly with other groups and board to discuss drug- and alcohol-related issues.

She said one of the first projects for the group is revitalizing the Safe Homes program which will be called "Casa" after the Spanish word for house. In Safe Homes, parents form a network and promise not to allow unsupervised teen parties nor condone underage drinking or drug use.

Labor Counsel Bill Paid

Selectmen authorized payment of $6,918.75 to labor counsel, McGowan, Engel, Tucker, Garrett & Shultz this week. The payment will wipe out the $4,700 remaining in the budget for labor counsel and will require a transfer of $2218.75 for the balance from the special counsel budget.

Town Administrator Ed McCann cautioned selectmen that the special counsel budget is running dangerously low but selectmen said the bill, which is overdue, should be paid.

The town appropriated $20,000 in fiscal year 1998, which starts July 1, for labor counsel because several union contracts will be negotiated next year. This year's budget was used for grievance matters. There were no contracts under negotiation, selectmen said.

Recycling Old DPW Garage

Selectmen suggested the cement DPW garage in the town parking lot might make a good Teen Center.

They said there would be more room for games and dances and a basketball hoop could be installed outside. The Teen Center is now housed in the Independence Building on South Main Street. Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., parent of the Teen Center, leases the building from the town for $1 a year.

Selectmen said the pink cement building would need some renovation, electrical and heating work, but is structurally sound.

The wood DPW barn which is also in the town parking lot will be torn down, they said. The DPW is now located in the new garage at the town landfill.

Yard Sale Signs Must Come Down

At the suggestion of Selectman Michael Sullivan, selectmen asked this week that citizens who advertise their yard sales on telephone poles and trees to please remove the signs immediately following the sale.

They said the old signs and deflated balloons are unsightly.

Drug and Alcohol Committee Searches for New Focus

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The drug and alcohol committee has struggled for the past several months to reorgato ze and find a new purpose. Last month the group revived the Safe Homes program to spark interest in its efforts, but town officials felt more was needed.

About 30 residents and town officials assembled at town hall May 22 to support the drug and alcohol committee's efforts and help it refocus its efforts. Residents brainstormed various solutions, including expanding Safe Homes, increasing the size of the committee and providing social activities for teenagers.

Parents and representatives from the health board, selectmen, the school committee, police, churches, and the parent school organization attended the meeting.

Members of the drug and alcohol committee said the group didn't have a clear set of goals or a vision for its future.

"There's no chairman or even enough members," said drug and alcohol committee member Margo Aikens. "Our meetings are just big free-for-alls."

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan proposed a larger committee of at least 18 members.

But school health coordinator Michael Gill said an 18-member committee was just too big.

Sullivan modified his proposal to create a community task force made up of members from the following organizations: the teen center, the parent school organization, the council on aging, the clergy, law enforcement, the health education committee, the health board, the student council, the chamber of commerce and the community center.

Sullivan suggested the larger group could meet quarterly to offer support to the drug and alcohol committee, while also discussing strategy and ideas.

"I see the task force as a reenergization of the drug and alcohol committee," Sullivan said. "All these committees feeding into the drug and alcohol committee will give it new life."

Anthony Bramblett, a student representative to the drug and alcohol committee, suggested the group organize social activities similar to what the schools offer, such as dances and ski trip.

But even these programs have their problems. According to published reports, four eighth-graders from Cohasset Junior-Senior High School have been suspended for 10 days for smoking marijuana on a school trip to Quebec last week.

Gill cited troubling statistics which show that the average age of first drunkenness in Cohasset is 13.7 years old. He added that recent trends show more teenagers experimenting with marijuana and inhalants.

Bramblett said the statistics reinforced his point that there had to be some kind of organized activities for teenagers.

"We have to find a place where students can have dances every weekend," Bramblett said.

Bramblett said group trips could work if a college-age adult would serve as a chaperone.

"Teenagers need someone close to their age who can serve as a role model, maybe even a Cohasset High School alumnus," Bramblett said.

Gill and police officer Lisa Matos agreed the committee should focus on organized activities, like alcohol-free, after- prom parties which have worked well in other towns.

Bramblett and sophomore Jami Butman proposed adding students from the middle school and the sixth grade to the committee.

"You can't say to kids 'don't do drugs' just two months before they're first exposed," Bramblett said.

The drug and alcohol committee is also seeking public support and input. The committee meets on the second Tuesday night of each month in town hall.

Cohasset's Week

Letter Withheld from Press

On the advice of interim town administrator Ed McCann and Selectman Ronnie McMorris, selectmen refused to provide the press with a copy of a letter regarding bills for the new DPW garage this week.

The Mariner asked for a copy of the letter which was discussed at the open meeting and was provided to selectmen but was not included in the press packet.

Editor Mary Ford said she would file a public records request.

McCann denied that the letter was substantively discussed and said it contained information that could possibly relate to future legal strategy.

During the discussion, McCann said the office had received two letters from town counsel, one on the DPW garage and one regarding a water commission matter.

He said the DPW matter needed to be resolved and said the DPW committee needed to sit down with the parties involved.

Selectman Merle Brown said the letter should be given to the DPW committee which should get back to selectmen with its recommendations.

"It's up to them to take the first stab at resolving the issue," he said.

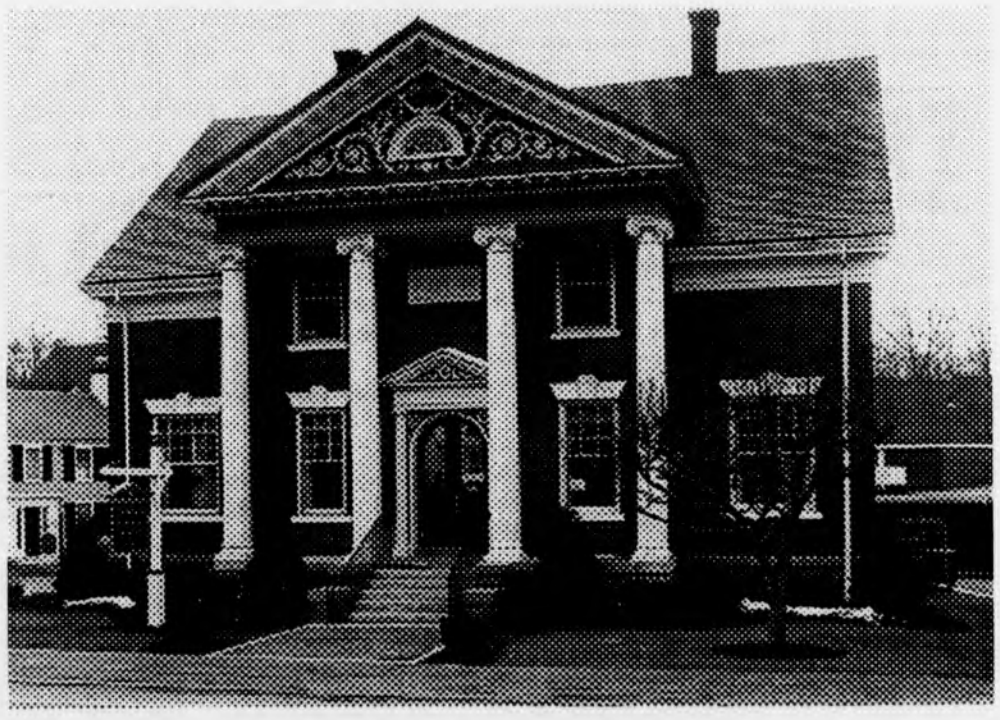
McMorris was not there for the discussion but agreed with McCann that the letter should not be given to the press.

Burn Time Flexibility Suggested

Selectman Merle Brown suggested this week that selectmen petition the legislature to allow towns more flexibility with open burning. Open burning is now only permitted from January to May 1. Brown said that citizens have lots of brush left over from the April nor'easter and can't burn it.

All burning is under the discretion of the fire chief who does not issue a permit if its too dry or windy, Brown explained.

Selectmen agreed to write state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and state Sen. Robert Hedlund to inquire about the matter.



They will also ask DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield for two more chipping days at the landfill so citizens could get rid of their brush.

Interim Town Administrator Ed McCann said there is no money in the DPW budget and no overflow personnel to handle more chipping.

Selectman Nan Roth said the board could ask for a transfer of funds to pay for it. Brown said chipping requires overtime.

Memorial Day

the soldiers who did not make it home. The two buses that pulled into the parking lot at that time dropped off another large group of veterans as well as the 14-member Festival Brass Band. They had been visiting cemeteries in the area since earlier that morning paying their respects at the grave sites of those killed in foreign wars.

A police car in the lead, and one tailing, the parade, sponsored by the George H. Mealy Post 118 of the Veterans Organization of Cohasset, as well as the local VFW, left the parking lot at 10:45 a.m. It made a right onto Sohier Street. They gained momentum as they passed the Osgood School where it was joined by Cohasset Girl Scout Troops 4768 and 4769, Cohasset Boy Scout Troop 28, Deer Hill School's own marching band, and an assortment of other similar troops of Cub Scouts and Brownies. With this conglomeration of children came dozens of excited, proud parents, some clutching camcorders, others with still cameras.

Traffic came to a standstill on North Main Street as the procession first proceeded down Joy Place to Central Cemetery where a short but touching ceremony was held by the Rev. Cliff Cutler. This was followed by Taps and a four-gun salute firing blank rounds into the air. This seemed to particularly excite a group of young boys who scurried between the soldiers' legs searching for spent shells, something to remember this day by.

The parade regrouped back on North Main Street and continued into town where a surprisingly large number of onlookers clapped and cheered as they all passed. At the town common the parade stopped at the Honor Roll Monument, where there was a definite smell of patriotism in the air. It seemed as though the entire town of more than 5,000, as well as visitors from as far away as South Carolina, Washington and Kentucky, had gathered in the immediate area while another short service was held.

Once again back on Main Street, running through the center of town, the parade now filling both lanes of traffic seemed to take on a life of its own. The mixture of old friends running into each other on the street, kids setting up a lemonade stand for the passers-by, the music, the patriotic ballads that the marching bands were playing, and the sight of the proud servicemen who had come to remember their comrades who had made the ultimate, supreme sacrifice, all led to the general idea that this is what Memorial Day is all about. It's a time to gather, remember, and pay tribute to those who gave their lives so others can live their lives the way they do today, and this was the underlying current that ran through the minds of those present.

After passing the police and fire stations, the parade made a right onto Border Street and circled around Kimball's By The Sea where it surprised several out-of-town guests staying there who were not expecting all the pomp and circumstance, and had come out to watch and join in the numbers.

Looking out towards the Atlantic, towards far away lands where so many young men gave their lives to ensure the future of America, the parade made its final stop by the water's edge at Cohasset Harbor. There, Captain Robert Jackson, United States Navy, gave a speech reflecting upon his deceased comrades-in-arms and the meaning this annual event implies. Pastor John Mulvehill of St. Anthony's Church said a prayer reminding everyone of exactly why they are free today and the gratitude that accompanies that freedom. The flower girls dropped colorful bouquets into the sea in remembrance of those servicemen who had died at sea. After a final salute by arms, the Deer Field Band played the National Anthem and a hush swept through the crowd as hats were removed and some heads bowed all in private remembrance and reflection.

With the conclusion of the parade came an exodus back into town, into cars and into near-by homes where the sun shone on backyard barbecues, children playing and families spending time together.

DRIVING TO ONE SIDE?

▶If a car drifts to one side or other on a straight and level road, it is likely due to a wheel-alignment problem. If the problem is severe, drivers may find themselves steering in the opposite direction to keep the car going straight. There are strict factory specifications for the position of both front and rear wheels. If one of the wheels is tilted inward or outward too much, or the wheels are not parallel, the automobile will steer to one side. This problem can also occur if the rear wheels are not aligned properly with the front wheels. Either way, an alignment check is necessary. While this involved only two wheels in older rear-wheel-drive cars, the advent of front-wheel drive cars with independent suspensions has made it necessary to align all four wheels.

▶Alignments may seem like an inconvenience, but they can significantly extend the life of your tires by ensuring even wear on the treads. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, (383-9090), reliability, precision, and reasonable rates are our commitment to you. We stand out because we work to exceed your expectations--and our own. You won't be sorry when you bring your car to 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (open Thurs., eves) Because we listen to your concerns and get the job done right.

HINT

Before submitting your car for an alignment check, make sure that an underinflated front tire is not causing your car to steer to one side.

Women Helping Women Is GEMS of Hope, USA

Roy Brings Mission to Cohasset

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"When you feel you have a lot, you want to give back," says Leah Taylor Roy.

Roy spent time on a cool, rainy mornng discussing in detail the non-profit organization called GEMS of Hope, USA that she founded in 1994 and now chairs with Mary Larson of North Main Street.

GEMS is based on the principles and work of GEMS of Hope, Canada, which has been active since 1982.

GEMS' primary mission is to help women and their families in communities in the neediest regions to become self-sufficient through local enterprise and to improve their health, education and skills training.

The exciting dimensions of GEMS of Hope, USA, are interesting facts, from its inception in Canada to its unique and effective means of 'getting the money' to a community's most needy people, many of whom are women who are single parents.

GEMS of Hope Canada originators were Doreen and Ben Wicks, he a famous Canadian cartoonist, she a woman who Roy spent time in Haiti with while volunteering there.

"I was in Haiti for four months. Doreen was there, visiting her daughter. While there, a number of children were going blind from a simple lack of basic vitamins. Doreen ended up getting them from a pharmaceutical company. This became her first project with GEMS," Roy recalled.

Roy realized the Wicks' commitment to the organization and began working as a consultant pro bono for GEMS of Hope, Canada, after returning from Haiti. She helped assess the strategic direction after the organization decided to reposition themselves.

"GEMS at that point was collecting medical supplies and medication no longer needed by pharmaceutical companies and giving them to the needy. That was good work, but they became more interested in doing project work, community to community," Roy said.

It was at this point when the goal of helping impoverished women become self-sufficient was established. Roy, in working closely with the Wicks, made the decision in 1994 to bring the GEMS mission to Cohasset, where she would be living. Thus, GEMS of Hope, USA, was formed.

"Meeting such great, competent women like Mary Larson and all of those involved with supporting the GEMS concept has meant a great deal to me, especially when I initially brought it to Cohasset. We are 100 percent volunteers, with no overhead whatsoever. It is all from our desire to help," she said.

What fuels Roy's altruistic nature?

"My father has always worked as a public servant. My mother raised us with values such as being a part of your community and always be willing to give back. National boundaries, in many respects, are very important. But when it comes to helping others, national boundaries have no place. A person is a person, no matter where she or he lives," she said.

Mary Larson of North Main Street in Pici, Brazil where she volunteers with the non-profit organization GEMS of Hope, USA.

"Fundraising small business loans to help women get on their feet appeals to me. It gives us all a sense of integrity. It's not a handout, but instead offers available business resources to those who suffer the most in poor communities, women and children."

Why an international focus?

"There are a lot more needy people out there than there are funds. The circumstances of the impoverished in the United States are generally different from other countries because in America there is a welfare system and government agencies that help. If you are a woman in Brazil and poor, you don't have clean water or heat in the winter. If she doesn't find a way to make a living, her children may starve and die. When you see this level of need just to survive, it is heartbreaking. But when you give them a $100 loan, it makes a difference because that money goes far, much farther than in the United States. Women start their own businesses on $200."

Roy also discussed the Mary Martha Learning Center in Hingham that she and Larson are currently investigating as a local venue for lending help.

"Their mission is like GEMS. Women helping women get self-sufficient. They do a wonderful job of getting women back on their feet. Becoming self-sufficient raises your self-esteem and increases health," Roy said.

The concept of the lending practice called micro-credit is both recent and revolutionary. Many American inner cities are benefiting from it as well.

"Simply put, micro credit is providing small loans to individuals who might not otherwise have access to credit markets," she said. This means all disadvantaged people.

Micro-enterprises, a result of micro-credit, include buying and selling clothing, setting up small stores out of homes, or selling coal door to door.

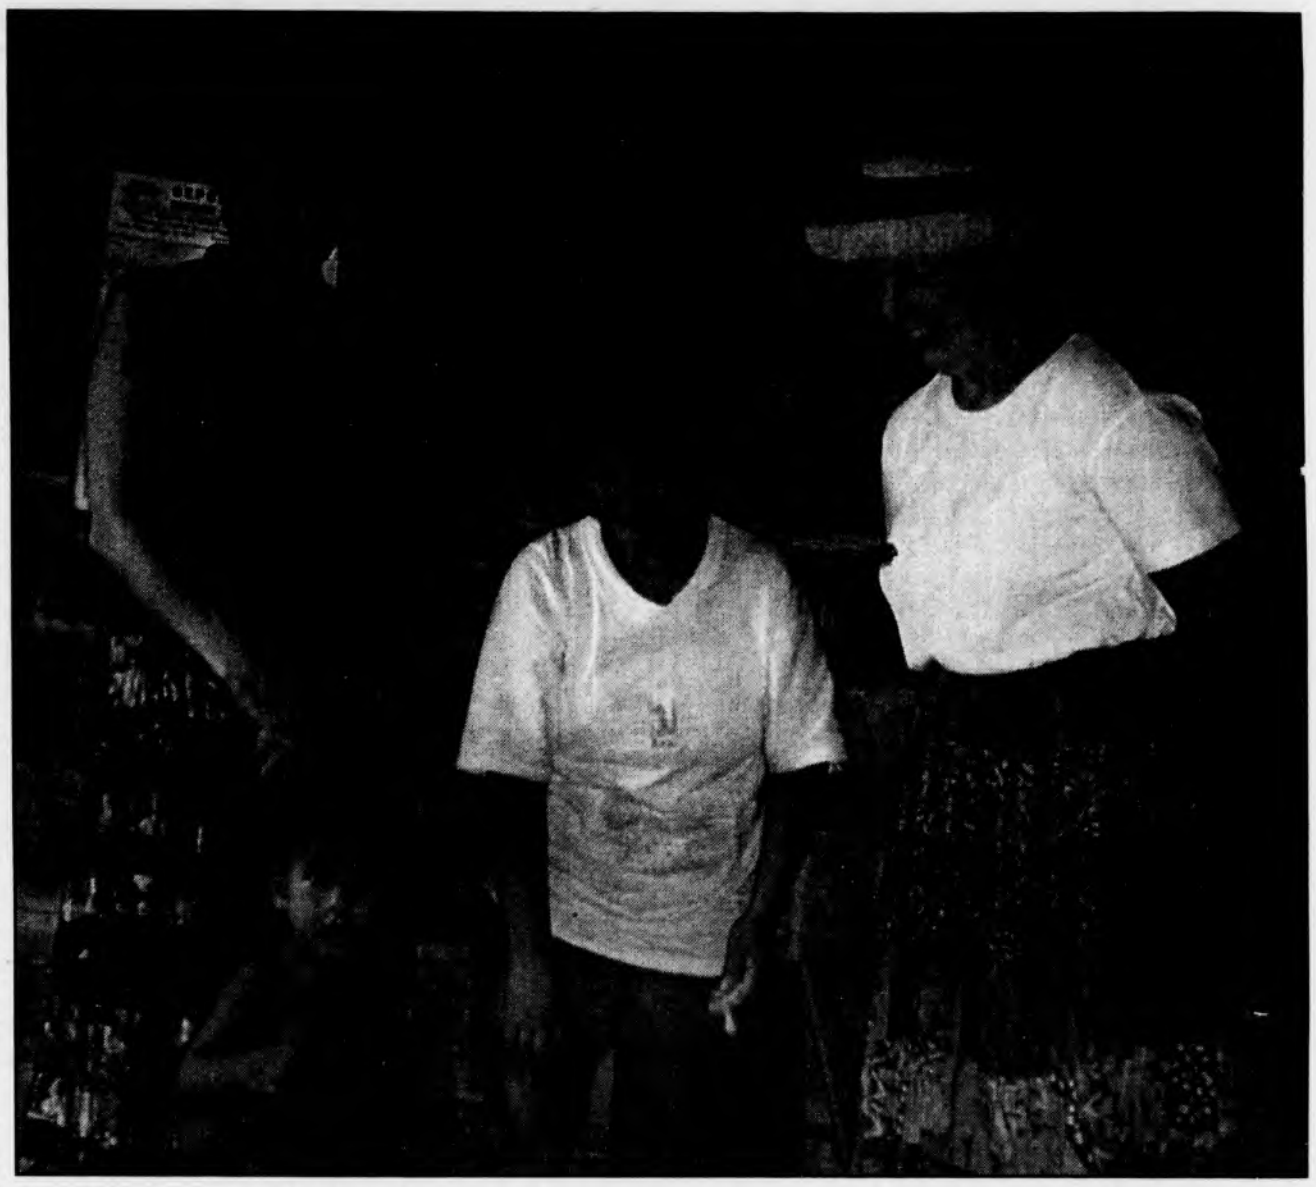
It is revolutionary because it is successful. The repayment rate in most programs is close to the 100-percent mark. The interest rate charged on a loan is very low, which is why commercial banks are still not participating to a large extent.

"The loan funders, community leaders in charge of setting up the fund, may have a degree in business or accounting. You don't have to be a banker to handle $100 loans with small interest, plus there's no regulation that may incur with banks involved. The low interest rate charge on a loan ($10 on $100 and only if the loan is outstanding for one year) cover administrative costs within the loan funding from the community's end."

GEMS raises the money and turns 100 percent over to the community, which GEMS has committed to assist for three years. The community then decides where the assistance is to go.

"We don't believe in the 'great white missionary' concept where one goes down and tells the people what to do. The community has strong support and commitment to its people. They are already making the steps to help their people move forward. When we take them on, we are just fulfilling their need for outside help," she said.



Roy acknowledges that the GEMS of Hope organization, a small one with a world-wide scope, sometimes feels like a small tool chipping away at a great wall.

"If everyone felt that they could help do something to banish poverty, the wall would come down. It takes a lot of people because the challenge is overwhelming, but it doesn't mean you shouldn't do something about it. It means you should," she said.

"We like that we don't have a paid staff or overhead. When we travel to a country that is a possible project, we pay for the trip ourselves. Every dollar we raise goes directly to the project. Not all charities can say that because they are large and have overhead and operating costs. We would actually like to see more charitable organizations do what we are doing. But in order to, they must remain small."

Roy feels that hands-on involvement is the best way to reach people. It is better, she says, to stay small and have people give their time and resources directly, than it is to be large and have to pay others. When GEMS entertains people and asks them to pay for their entertainment for charity, it goes directly to the people who need it.

GEMS' hard-working board of directors and committees are putting the finishing touches on plans for the second annual benefit croquet tournament June 8, 2 p.m., at the Roy estate. It is an event that welcomes both croquet and non-croquet players.

Leah Taylor Roy and Mary Larson with a Brazilian woman and little boy. The Cohasset women were visiting Brazil with GEMS of Hope, USA, an organization that helps impoverished families.

"It was a hugely successful day last year, not only because we raised $7,500, but also because everyone had a great, great time! People came from all over, several from out of state, who were guests in Cohasset that weekend," Roy said.

So what does a croquet tournament have to do with empowering disadvantaged women?

Leah laughs.

"Croquet has nothing to do with the women in South America or India or anywhere else in the world. It's just a fun unique event that people can look at as entertainment. We're asking you to pay for that entertainment by writing a check for charity. For $50 a person, you eat and drink from a sunset banquet and bar, meet new people and visit with friends, and play croquet, if you'd like. We want people to come and have fun, so they will come to our other GEMS events," she said.

Join Baby Carriage Corps at Harborfest!

Attention to all of you readers who we have written about — the ones with brand new babies, medium babies, first babies, the list goes on! The Harborfest Parade committee has come up with a wonderful idea for all of you! Join the "Baby Carriage Corps" for the Harborfest Parade. Show off your own little darlings! Decorate your carriages and join the clown contingent from the South Shore Joesys. March along the parade route from the Harbor to the Common! Give Bob Martin a call at 383-0787. Let him know you'll be there, and happy to do so! Maybe he could be enticed into offering a contest — best carriage, best boy outfit best girl hairdo, etc. ... in any case, it will be a blast, don't forget to call him!

Happy birthday greetings go to Coley Cook this week! Even though her birthday isn't until June 7, we promised that we'd put it in this week "in case anyone didn't know, or forgot!" After all, you are only seven once, and that is important! Hope your day is a happy one, Coley; be sure not to eat too much cake!

Remember last year when we told you about Lane Forrer and his being a student ambassador to Western Europe? Well, this year Lane is going to be a student ambassador again, this time to Australia and New Zealand. Lane had to raise all of his own funds for this adventure, you name a task or chore and he has done it! He also held a raffle, the prize being a 30-volume Encyclopedia (available in either 30 volumes in print or on CD Rom). The drawing was held recently, and Mr. and Mrs. David Holway of Linden Drive were the lucky winners! Lane leaves at the beginning of July, and will be gone for a month. He is still fund-raising (right up until take-off time) so if you have a chore for Lane to do, or if you just want to applaud him and his strong character, give him a call (he lives on Diab Lane). By the way, Lane is in the eighth grade at CHS Junior-Senior High School! An up-and-coming star, that's for certain!

Many people were saddened over the passing of Helen Livingston recently, she was quite a lady! Helen and Al have been living in Florida for a while now, but a service was held for her a few weeks ago. Unfortunately, her husband, Al was unable to come from Florida for the service, he is in a rehabilitation center there. We extend our sympathy to him, and hope that he regains his strength and feels "chipper" real soon!

Here's a real "two-fer" for you to consider — the AIDS Ministry of the archdiocese of Boston/Catholic Charities in conjunction with the South Shore Music Circus presents Ann Murray in concert Sunday, June 29, at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available on a first-come, first-served basis. It will be a sellout, so call now at 482-5440 (extension 47). Every year the Office of AIDS Ministry reaches out to persons and families whose lives are affected by AIDS. Also, a major part of their work is going out speaking to young people and educating them about AIDS (they speak to approximately 14,000) students, teachers and parents). No state financial support is available, so they rely on the generosity of people like you. Sister Zita Fleming hopes that your generous support will be there, and that you know that all donations are 100 percent tax-deductible. All of that, and Anne Murray gives an awesome show! Sister Zita is awaiting your call!

June 3 is a special day around here, it is Mimi Chatterton's birthday! Believe it or not, she will be 84 years young! Give her a special hello and a big hug, when you see her on or before her big day! She will love you for it!

Don't forget that your beach and recycling facility permits are almost expired — this year's are now available at the town hall Mondays and Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Thursdays from 4:30 to 7 p.m., and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Don't forget your registrations!

Hope you thanked your letter carrier recently, boy was the food drive a success! The Food Pantry is almost bulging with many things — lest you forgot to leave your donation there are still just a few things that are needed: toothpaste, detergent, paper towels, toilet paper — just drop it off.

That's the news for this week — with a three-day weekend just behind us, that means that you should all have news! Share it with us! Give me a call!

Recapping Spirituality and Healing Series

Program Resumes in the Fall

By Mary Sheppard Earon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The task force that has guided the spirituality and healing series this past year at the Second Congregational Church has decided to continue the series in September, according to task force leaders The Rev. Gary Ritts, Margo Cheel and Susie Coley.

People on the South Shore are showing a steady attendance and interest in the spiritual and holistic healing movement.

"Although it's grassroots here, it's important to those who attend. It may be all they have for exposure right now," said Rev. Ritts.

Some of the choices for 1997-98 include a second annual forum for practitioners, followed by a survey and a speaker series on homeopathic and naturopathic healing, acupuncture, Ayurveda, and music therapy.

This past year beginning in September, eight events were held every other month on Wednesday evenings at 7 p.m.

Dr. Susan Emmer of Cohasset and Dr. Bruce Indek of Hingham explained and demonstrated chiropractic therapy. Dr. Indek's emphasis was through naturally innate healing energies.

Debbie Barrett of Brant Rock brought her dodecahedron (a 12-sided copper geometric frame) and introduced people to the esoterism of music and sacred geometry. It is pure relaxation to sound therapy — spiritual music that resonates from six speakers within the space of the frame.

Jim and Patricia Berkeley-Watson practiced healing with age-old essences therapy, which benefits one all over, but greatly in the weak or injured regions of a body.

There was yoga and meditation with Page Railsback of Norwell and also with Charles Mangat Ray. Several fell into peaceful repose; most left relaxed and flexible, even though it was nine o'clock at night.

John Loupos of Cohasset brought Tai Chi from his studio, Jade Forest, while Marcia Hood showed how, through energy centers, negative thoughts and feelings about one's self can limit potential and happiness.

Joan Drescher, author and illustrator, and Joanne Cavatora, harpist, soothed their audience with the reading of spiritual pages, accompanied by harp music.

Nancy Dunn, a nutritionist from Cohasset, discussed good eating for good health, and the nine-week course this spring on food, exercise and positive loving thoughts from Dr. Andrew Weil's book, "Spontaneous Healing," was led by Gary Ritts.

The general public is invited to attend all or any event of the series when the program resumes in the fall.

OBITUARIES

John W. Powers

John W. "Jake" Powers, 69, of Cohasset, died May 13 at Quincy Hospital.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Parade Reflections

There is something grand about a parade – especially in our small New England towns.

Families line both sides of Main Street. Impatient for the music and the marching to begin, children in clean, white sneakers lick ice cream cones and wave flags.

When the lead police cruiser appears, its lights flashing, youngsters standing on tiptoes or perched on a parent's shoulders, peer toward the sound of marching feet, beating drums and bellowing bagpipes.

I went to two Memorial Day parades this year. One as a journalist and the other as a proud wife.

In one of the parades, my husband, a Gulf War veteran and Army reservist was part of the color guard.

I beamed with pride as he marched by — a little out of step in his battle dress uniform — knowing that he was far closer than I to understanding the oft-used expression "supreme sacrifice."

Amid all the noise and color, I heard a child eagerly ask her mother when the fireworks would begin.

"That's on the Fourth of July," the mother replied brusquely, making no attempt to explain the significance of this particular celebration.

I realized that for children there is little in a parade to distinguish Memorial Day from Independence Day or Veterans Day.

Men and women march with flags and banners and drums, convertibles carry a grand marshal and local dignitaries smile and wave to the crowds.

As we get older, we learn why rather than exploding fireworks on this day we hear the sorrowful song of the bagpipe and the somber tones of Taps.

We know that this day is to remember and honor the men and women who made a sacrifice that many of us cannot begin to comprehend.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wells Are Source of Water Supply

Board of Water Commissioners
Town of Cohasset
Gentlemen:

I read with utter amazement the article in the May 15 issue of The Cohasset Mariner entitled "D.E.P. wants town's plan for utilizing its wells." I feel obligated to correct the inaccuracy in the article and set the record straight.

First I must express an opinion:

No water supply system is complete or safe with only one source of supply and one pumping facility, or in fact one storage tank. The James Brook watershed well fields must never be abandoned at any cost or under any circumstances. The entire basin should be explored for future expansion as a secondary supply. Quote from the article, "The Sohier Street wells were last used in 1979 and the Ellms Meadow was last used in 1971," is incorrect.

In 1972, one of the driest summers on record, we were in desperate need of more water. I personally supervised the reconstruction of the Ellms Meadow well field, and the rebuilding of the triplex pump. All seven well points were pulled, cleaned, repaired and reset.

Valves were installed between the suction pipes and the main header to control each well individually. This allowed us to get maximum yield from the well field. Even though the pump was 75 years old, new parts were available. It was completely stripped down and rebuilt. The pump room was insulated and heated for year round use. Chlorination was the only treatment necessary. Two hundred thousand gallons a day of good quality water were available several days a week on a regular basis and also ready for emergency use.

That same year, Sohier Street well #1 was also rejuvenated. The original 1954 vertical turbine pump was removed. The gravel packed well was chemically treated, back flushed, test pumped and a new submersible pump installed. This well average daily yield was approximately 100,000 gallons of excellent quality water, no treatment necessary.

Fluoride, however, was introduced at this source. Well #2 at Sohier Street was in operating condition and used alternately with well #1.

On January 10, 1981, when I left as superintendent of the department, both Sohier Street wells and the Ellms Meadow wells were in excellent working condition and a valuable secondary supply for the distribution system. There was absolutely no mechanical or financial reason to allow these wells to deteriorate. Call it what you may, emergency, auxiliary, secondary or back-up, wells are a cost efficient source of water supply.

The James Brook watershed has been a source of ground water supply since 1886, however large or small the yield. It should never be abandoned.

With the new plant on line and both well fields operating in 1979, the Bear Hill Standpipe was successfully drained, cleaned and recoated with very little disruption of the distribution system or inconvenience to the customers.

Another quote: "I'd be surprised if you wanted to do anything with that other than turning it into a museum," Tutela said. In my opinion this is an unprofessional statement to make in response to a very serious problem.

Buildings, equipment and people come and go. Ground water is forever and should be utilized.

Edwin H. Pratt
former Cohasset Water Superintendent

Zoning Board

The second tank is necessary to take the first tank out of service four to six weeks for draining, cleaning and repairs.

But Wayne Sawchuk said the tank was taken out of service and cleaned twice: once in the 1970s and once in the 1980s. Sawchuk said the town also recently installed high-volume pumps at the water plant to provide faster refilling capacity for the tank.

Opponents of the Bear Hill site said the town has lived with current fire flow for decades, and spending more time searching for alternative sites wouldn't affect safety.

"It distresses me to hear the water commissioners talk about the dangers of low water reserves," said tank abutter Domenic Baccari. "That situation is caused by the way they operate the water plant. They could extend the water plants hours of operation."

Sawchuk added that the plant would be automated soon, ending problems caused when it closes at night.

Sawchuk and Glen Pratt have been working on behalf of Bear Hill abutters to find a new location for the tank.

Sawchuk said the John and Paul Barry would be willing to donate a piece of land on Scituate Hill to the town, the Coyne property. But John McNabb opposed the suggestion because the town is involved in six lawsuits with the Barrys over CHL.

Engineers from the town's consultant, Tutela Engineering, said the Coyne site could cost as much as $500,000 more than Bear Hill because the land is sloped and would require significant excavation.

Pratt said the Webb Norfolk site would cost about the same as the Bear Hill site, except for land acquisition costs.

Kasameyer said any site on Scituate Hill would delay the project for at least a year until town meeting could approve land acquisition. He agreed the Webb Norfolk site was the best location, but the owner was not willing to sell to the town the one-to-two acres necessary for a new tank.

Pratt said water commissioners were ignoring the town's legal right to take the land by eminent domain.

"For a public board to say private land is unavailable is amateurish because of the eminent domain option," Pratt said. "We seem to be dashing to plop the tank on Bear Hill because it's there."

Kasameyer said the Webb Norfolk land would cost about $60,000 per acre.

Pratt said the fire reserve argument was a scare tactic to get people to support rapid construction of the second tank.

Sawchuk added that in a severe fire the town could open valves to access water from Scituate and Hingham.

Planning board members heard the same presentation earlier in the evening and gave the tank a favorable recommendation. John F. O'Toole voted against the tank.

"This is a rush to judgment," O'Toole said.

Planning board Chairman Al Moore wondered what would happen if the first tank didn't pass inspection.

"Maybe we could get both tanks out of the residential neighborhood," Moore said.

Pratt said placing a second tank in a residential zone when an industrial site was available on Scituate Hill was an abuse of the town's bylaw permitting municipal uses in residential areas.

Zoning board member Mark DeGiacomo asked water commissioners to come back with more information about the Coyne site and why the litigation was relevant to the tank discussion. He also asked the commissioners to provide a compelling reason to support their argument that delaying the project to seek alternate sites was dangerous.

J. Anson Whealler wanted more information about the cosmetic effects of two tanks on the same site and how it would affect property values.

McNabb said water commissioners would paint both tanks sky-blue or gray to make them less visible against the background sky.

Whealler also wanted to know if it was safe to put two water tanks on a hill the overlooks a high school.

S. Woodworth Chittick wanted cost comparisons of all potential sites so he could make a better decision. He added that the cost of taking land by eminent domain on the Webb Norfolk site was "relatively insignificant compared to the total cost."

Station Comments Irk Selectmen

either support the decision the town has made or resign from the committee.

Although they stressed their difficulty with Rizzo is based solely on the village station issue, they also have a problem with the fact that he is an employee of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, which backs restoration of the Greenbush line. There could be a potential conflict of interest there, selectmen said.

Selectman Merle Brown initially said Rizzo, who is also vice president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, should be asked to step down from the committee. But he was persuaded to go along with the other board members who said Rizzo be given the choice that he no longer pursue the village station issue if he wants to remain on the committee. They agreed to ask him to resign as chairman of the committee which includes Michael Dick of the conservation commission; Marty Corry, citizen-a-large; the police and fire chiefs; and Gordon Hislop of the design review board. Rizzo is the representative for local businesses on the committee.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, who will serve as the board's point person on Greenbush, will talk the matter over with Rizzo.

Rizzo said he would wait to talk with Sullivan before he makes a decision on whether to remain on the committee.

Rizzo, who also sits on the Village Revitalization Committee which was started by the Cohasset Chamber a year ago to beautify and bring new life to the village, said he can distinguish between the different hats he wears.

He said he is able to remain unbiased and pointed out that he has been able to remain neutral as a member of the mitigation committee. While he favors a village station because the train is going to pass through town anyway, he said he is "personally not that in favor of the train."

Last fall, selectmen chastized Rizzo for writing a letter-to-the-editor on the non-binding in formal "straw poll" on the village station issue at the October special town meeting. Selectmen based their decision not to back the village station on the straw poll in which a majority said they preferred the Route 3A station.

Diane Sullivan said selectmen should remind all boards, dealing with Greenbush, that they leave their personal views on the train outside the door.

"I wouldn't want any board members who do not approve of Greenbush to bring their biases to the table," she said.

Blood Drive Scheduled for June 4

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, June 4. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., from 2 to 7 p.m. As in the past, babysitting assistance will be provided after 3 p.m. The Red Cross depends on regular donations to meet the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

Reading some of the recent Red Cross literature can help you understand the importance of giving blood. Here are just a few of the reasons they talk about:

• Giving blood can make someone else feel good.

Your donation may help restore health to someone with leukemia or cancer, a patient undergoing surgery, or the victim of a car accident. People with heart disease, bone fractures, bleeding disorders – even those undergoing transplant surgery – may benefit from your blood.

• Your donation may help as many as three people.

Since each unit of donated blood is separated into three components – red blood cells, plasma and platelets – your single donation can help treat as many as three patients.

• Blood can't be stored indefinitely.

Red blood cells can be stored for a maximum of 42 days; platelets can be kept for five days at most. To ensure there's always enough blood on hand for patients, healthy people must donate regularly.

• Every day, 1,100 units of blood must be donated to meet the region's needs.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls.

The American Red Cross Blood Services-Northeast Region sends blood to approximately 150 hospitals and transfusion facilities in Massachusetts and Maine, supplying most of the blood needed in these states. To do so, the Red Cross must collect an average of 1,100 units of blood each day.

• When you donate blood, you give something without losing anything.

We all have between nine and 12 pints of blood; slightly less than one pint is given during a donation. Your body replaces the donated plasma within 24 hours and the donated platelets within 48 hours. Your red blood cells start regenerating immediately, and they're replenished within three to five weeks.

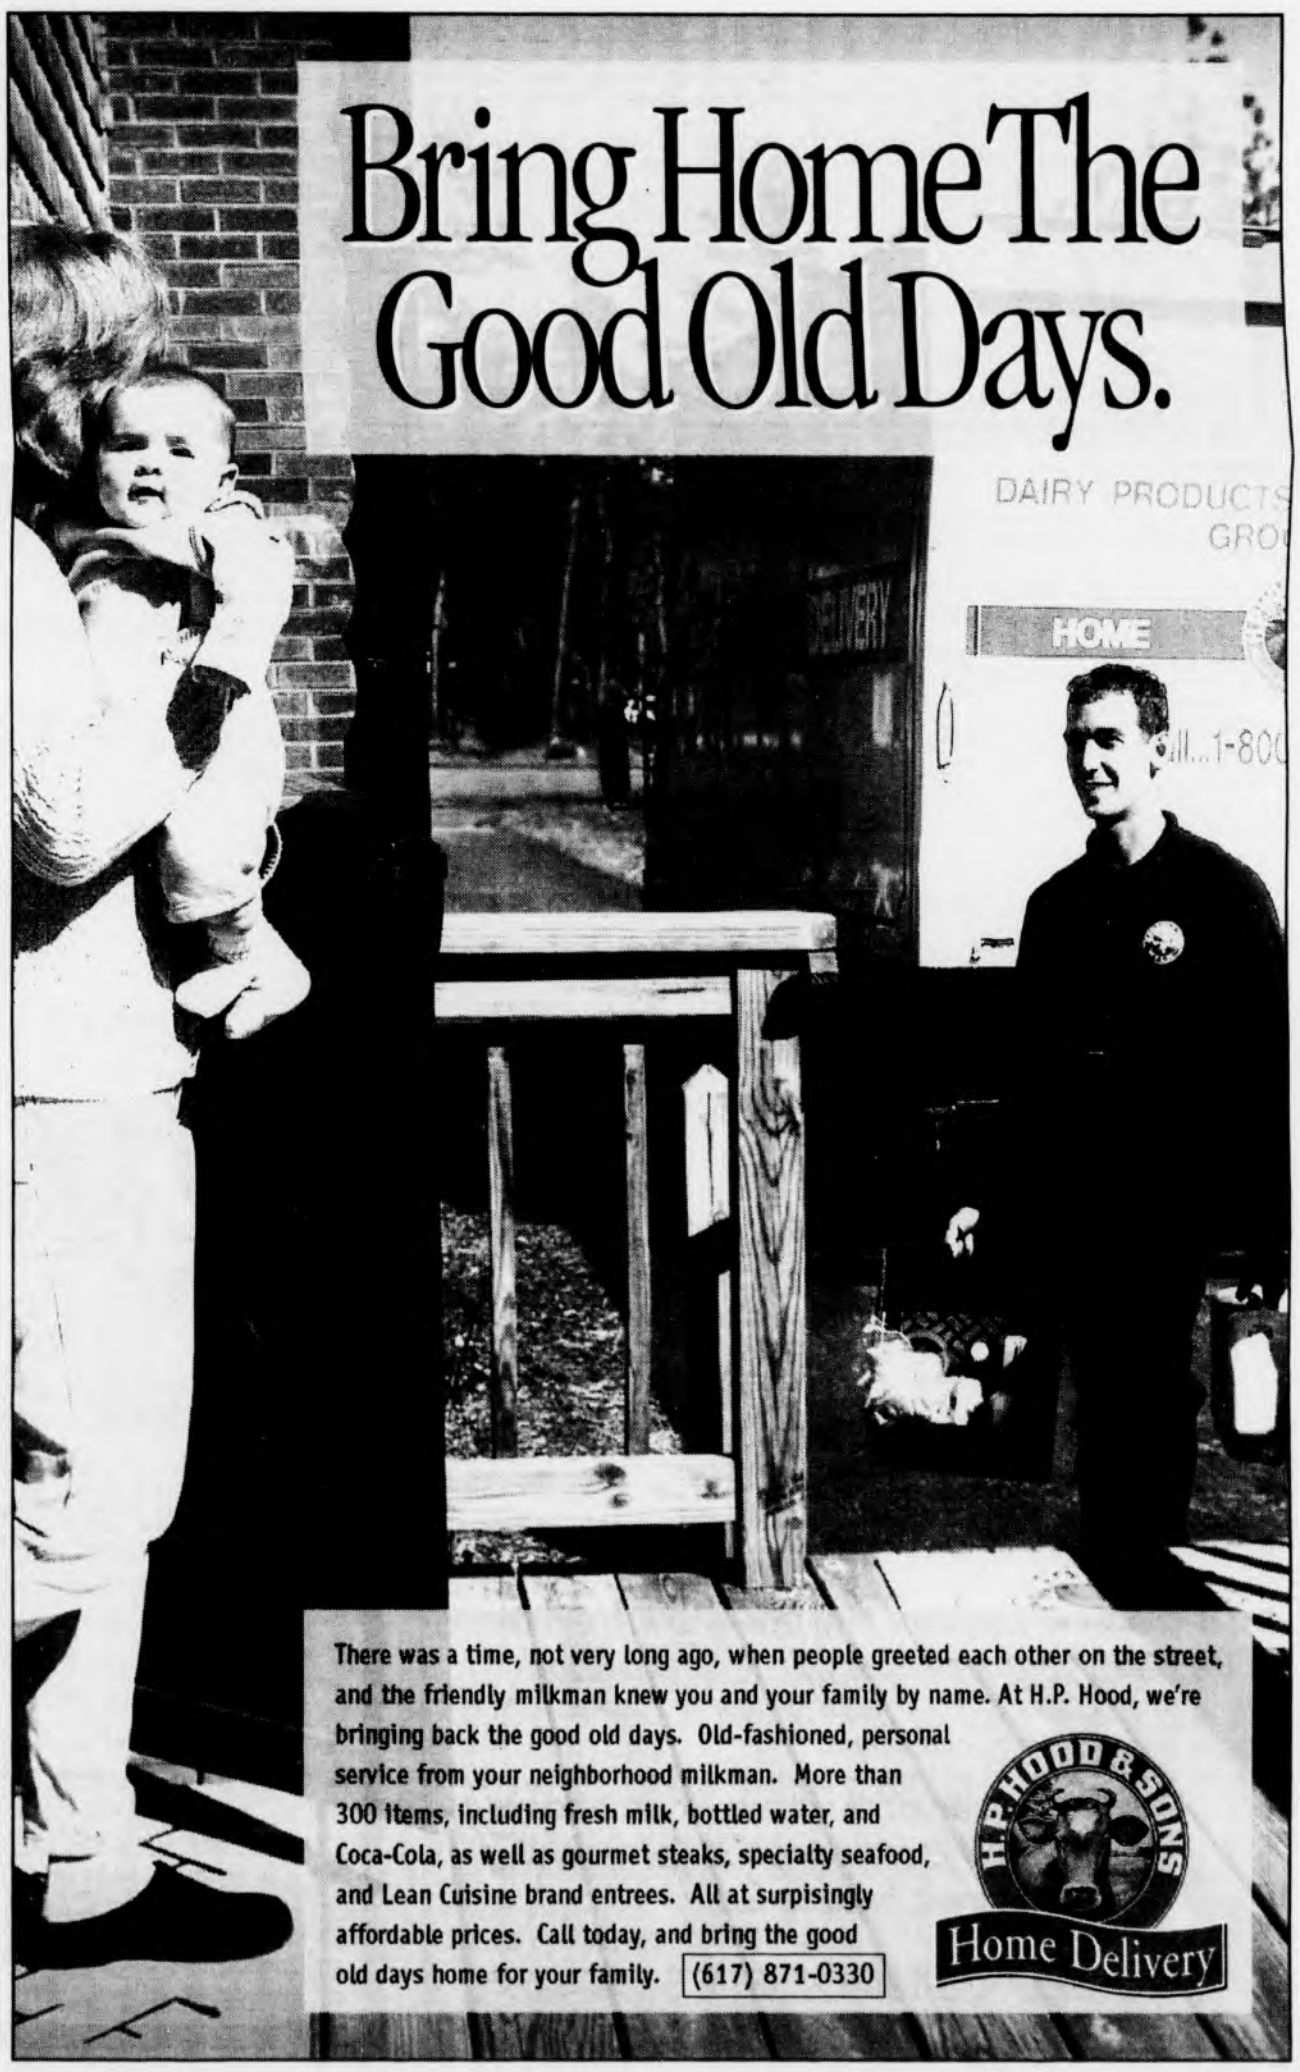
• Your blood may save a life. Isn't this reason enough?

If you are a middle-aged male, another reason for donating was cited in a recent Time Magazine Health Report feature. "Donating blood not only rescues others; it may also save you. Finnish researchers report that middle-aged men who periodically give blood reduce their risk of a heart attack by 85 percent. Reason: excessive levels of iron in the body seem to cause damage to arterial cells. When blood is lost, iron stores drop."

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Swimming Pool Meeting

A meeting will be held at the Stop & Shop Meeting Room, Route 3A, Cohasset, Thursday, June 12, at 7 p.m. at which time the feasibility of "gifting" Cohasset with an indoor swimming pool to celebrate the next millennium will be explored.



There has been a terrific response to a May 22 Cohasset Mariner notice. Please call Joe McElroy at 383-0505 if you have any questions.

Beach, RTF Permits Are Expiring

Current permits are expiring! Beach and recycling transfer facility permits are now available at the town hall Monday and Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 4:30 to 7 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., until Friday, June 27. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle, and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $65, $25 for second vehicle if application made at a different time, and $33 for a sole resident. Residents will need vehicle registrations or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). Residents are encouraged to purchase both stickers through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope. RTF stickers may be purchased at the RTF weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Mosquitoes to Make Early Appearance in Cohasset

Recent flooding and heavy, moisture-laden snowfalls have set the stage for an early appearance of mosquitoes in Cohasset. The Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee has two major goals: first, to reduce the likelihood of an outbreak of Eastern Equine Encephalitis, and secondly, to minimize the use of chemical pesticides in controlling mosquitoes.

Individual homeowners can assist in accomplishing these goals by the following measures:

1) If you have a birdbath, shallow wading pool, pet's water dish, or any similar outdoor water container, change the water every two or three days. Mosquitoes breed only in stagnant water.

2) If the gutters on your house are clogged with leaves or debris so that water does not flow freely through the downspouts during a rain storm, clean the gutters.

3) If a stream or ditch runs through your property, make sure that the water is free-flowing. Remove debris, stones, brush, leaves, or other material which may clog the watercourse.

4) If you have a small pond (100 square feet or less), growth of mosquito larvae can be controlled by treating the water with a product containing Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis (Bti). Such products include Mosquito Dunks, Vectobac, Bionide (Bti), etc. These products are usually available at hardware stores or garden centers. Bti is not harmful to humans, pets, or other species which may feed on mosquito larvae.

5) If you have a larger pond on, or adjacent to, your property, it can be treated with the same larvicide by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control District, which can be reached at (617) 585-5450. The PCMCD will treat such areas with larvicide only if larvae exist in numbers sufficient to justify the application.

To supplement information already on file, the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee is trying to locate and map potential problem areas in the town where mosquitoes may breed. Please report any natural areas of standing water in your neighborhood by calling 383-9900, Ext. 121.

To supplement information already on file, the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee is trying to locate and map potential problem areas in the town where mosquitoes may breed. Please report any natural areas of standing water in your neighborhood by calling 383-9900, Ext. 121.

In spite of all these defensive measures, adult mosquitoes will inevitably appear. They are most prevalent during early morning and early evening, their natural feeding times. If possible, stay indoors during these hours and keep children indoors as well. Make sure screens on doors and windows fit tightly and that breaks are mended. If one must be outdoors at these critical times, wear long-sleeved shirts and long trousers. Mosquito repellents may be applied to clothing or exposed skin. If chemical sprays or lotions containing DEET are used, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health recommends that the concentration of DEET be no more than 15 percent or less for use on children or in backyard environments. Commercial repellents containing greater concentrations of DEET are intended for deep woods environments and are not recommended for children. According to an article in The Boston Globe (5/24/92), pediatricians prefer that children use products containing 10 percent or less of DEET. One such product is Skedaddle. Repellents should never be used on infants.

Throughout the following months, the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee will report the extent and nature of mosquito populations. Informational packets will be available at conveniently located sites in Cohasset.

If you desire additional information, please call 383-9900, Ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

Social Service League Held Annual Meeting at St. Stephen's

The Social Service League of Cohasset hosted its 85th annual meeting at St. Stephen's Church hall Thursday, May 8. The league was founded in Oct. 1912 and has continued its operation to the present. The Social Service League is one of the few privately operated organizations in the state. Fifty percent of their budget comes from the consignment shop and the many hard working volunteers that work diligently to continue the operation.

Annual meeting records from 1912 have been entrusted to the Cohasset Historical Society.

President, Jane Russell, opened the meeting thanking the 100 volunteers from the consignment shop and the Meals on Wheels drivers who were present. Past presidents of the league, Sue Mullett, Fran Wakeman, Annette Sawchuk and Ginny Riley also attended.

Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse; Pat Carleton, LICSW social worker; and Andrea Merrill, consignment shop manager gave their annual reports.

Mary Hartwell presented with regrets a token of the league's appreciation to Helen Hooper who is leaving the league after almost 20 years of dedicated service.

President, Jane Russell welcomed the new members of the league's board of directors: Barbara Cook, Lillian Ketchum, Rita Kirk, Kyle Lubitz, Debbie Niessink, Betty O'Sullivan, Sydney Peterson, Sue Reardon, and Blanche Whitman.

A luncheon was served and all enjoyed the entertainment of the Showstoppers, "Forever Plaid".

Kovack's Tallies Lift Laxmen

Cohasset Beats Needham in Preliminary Round

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset coach Ken Ekberg wouldn't be surprised if the Winchester scouts, in town for the preliminary round of the state lacrosse tourney, left with smiles on their faces.

They'd have reason to. The 10th-ranked Skippers' 5-4 win over No. 23 Needham on Tuesday afternoon at Alumni Field was hardly worthy of being deemed a classic.

"It was ugly," said Ekberg, "but we got the W."

The 15-2 Cohasset squad, who advanced to the first round with a Friday game at No. 7 seed Winchester, did play strong defense throughout the contest and got a big offensive output from Steve Kovack, who scored a pair of goals.

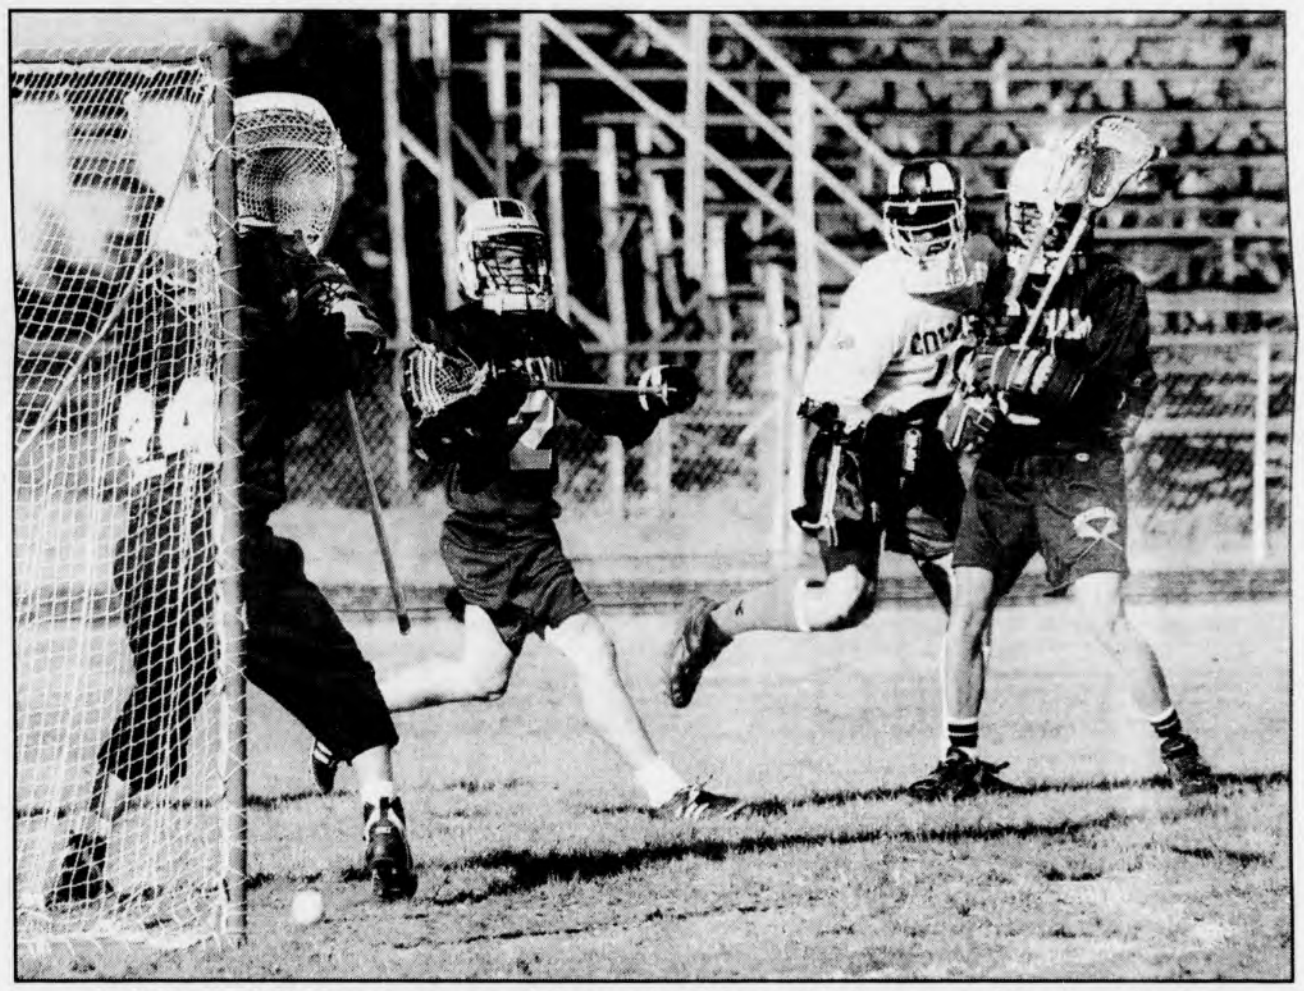
But it was the Skippers' difficulty in clearing the ball across mid field that concerned Ekberg the most.

"We have to get the ball to our attacking players," said Ekberg. "We'll work on that. When we start throwing the ball away we play defense and that makes for a long, hard game."

Cohasset got itself into a hole by falling behind, 4-3, but had a strong fourth quarter to tie and then take the lead back for good. Kovack tied the game with eight minutes remaining and Eric Moore whipped in the game winner with six minutes left.

Ekberg had high praise for the defensive squad, particularly Matt Belson. "Defensively, I thought we played quite well," he said.

Needham concentrated much of its attention on All-Stars Jamie Buick and Jon Lacks, both of whom have been key players on offense for the Skippers. The Rockets, however, made a crucial mistake in sliding off Kovack, leaving him open around the goal area. Kovack took advantage of his free reign around the net and fired in two shots.



Ekberg said the Skippers had several scoring opportunities they weren't able to convert because they were shooting ball too high, where the goaltender was holding his stick.

All-Star Ely Kahn stopped 16 Needham shots, including a half dozen serious scoring threats to keep Cohasset in the game, and was effective in clearing the ball to the Skippers' defenders.

Macarena Squad is Loaded With Stars

By Cheryl Bugler
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Macarena Maddness girls softball team, coached by Bill Earon, Bob Turgess and Amyre Chase began the season with high hopes. Krista Nicynski is a defensive star at first base. Alexis Bugler made an outstanding catch at second base and Marrisa Mello sparkled at third. Mary Devancy showed great skills in the outfield.

Nicole Perdle and Corey Evans share pitching duties on the mound. Nicole drilled a home run and Nicole Turgess played the entire game at catcher and showed great leadership behind home plate and in the batter's box.

Gillian Simons, Alison Earon, Nicole Durant and Amyre Chase provided lots of Macarena firepower, catching a number of hits.

It Doesn't Have to Cut Like a Knife

By Joe Reardon
COHASSET MARINER

I had no real illusions about being selected to the eighth-grade varsity basketball team, but it was still a bitter pill to swallow when my name wasn't among those who wound up having fans cheering for them all season.

It was a long, cold winter, but stupid me had to get in over my head.

I tried out for the team on a whim. Unfortunately, my competitive instincts took over and I battled hard. There was one problem. I play basketball the way old people drive.

What a pathetic lesson to learn.

You know how white men can't jump. Well that's just reason No. 35 why my winter wouldn't be spent in Braintree's East Junior High School gym. When it comes to basketball I have absolutely no instincts. In pick-up games, if someone passed the ball to me I instantly look for an open teammate to get rid of it quick. If I held onto the ball too long, a turnover was right around the corner. Not some of the time, always. And that's not an exaggeration. This was ugly stuff.

Dribbling was also a problem, mainly because I didn't know how to do it. God help me if I had to dribble the ball down the court. Whoever was defending me wound up with Grant Hill-like statistics for the game.

What's more I was 6-feet tall and a decent athlete at other sports. My teammates expected I'd be, at the very worst, an adequate rebounder. As it turns out, I was the "very worst" rebounder on the court. Boxing out was a foreign term to me and I never quite learned how to use my body effectively in the low post.

But that's all in the past. I'm still just as bad at basketball, but now I'm not in the postion where I have to show the world just how bad.

There are good athletes out there who excel at some sports, whether it be baseball, hockey, basketball or tennis. In others, well, they always come up short. To help those athletes out I prepared a list of ways to deal with being cut from a team and still be able to hold your head high.

• Make a joke about the team you were cut from. After all, laughter is the best medicine. Here's one you can try for starters. One warning: Stay away from this joke when it comes to football players and wrestlers. When it comes to tennis, golf and swimming...fire away!

Four members of the (fill in team name here) went to a restaurant. They were all in a good mood and the waiter asked what the occasion was.

"We just finished a jigsaw puz-

'For Women Only' Golf Tournament

New England women team up for a "women only" golf tournament to raise money to benefit the Breast Cancer Association. Scheduled for Monday, Sept. 8 at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham, the second annual "For Women Only" tournament is organized and presented by Carol Nashe of Carol Nashe Group, Boston.

The winning foursome will receive the ultimate golfing trip to Las Vegas in November, 1997. The trip includes round trip air transportation from Boston, three-night hotel accommodations, daily continental breakfast, and lots of golf. In addition to the first prize, there will be a variety of other golf prizes to be awarded.

Participating sponsors include The Joe Keefe PGA Report, the Golf Instructors & Coaches Association, Tee Time magazine, DePrisco Jewelers, Hajjar Couture and Dynasty Restaurant.

For more information on the golf tournament or sponsor inquiries, call Carol Nashe at (617) 437-9757 or (888) 562-2874.

Lacrosse Clinic

A lacrosse clinic will be held Monday at the Recreation Department evenings from 6:30 to 8 p.m., beginning June 30 and running through Aug. 18. The cost is $35 for an eight-week session. The clinic is for grades 5 and 6 (entering '97).

Adult Evening Tennis Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-6791.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: Beginners 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; Intermediates 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; Advanced 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; and Beginners 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four week sin duration and cost $35 per person, per session. Teaching will be NMr. John McGrory of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own, or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

zle and it only took two months," one of the players said proudly.

The waiter was hardly impressed and said, "That seems to be an awful long time for four guys to finish a jigsaw puzzle."

One of the athletes looked at him proudly and said, "Well it said 3 to 7 years on the box."

Well I liked it.

• Tell classmates, family members and especially your girlfriend that trying out for the team was research for a sociology term paper on how people are treated by others when they fail. You'll give people close to you the impression that you were cut from the team on purpose for the advancement of sociological knowledge. The hope is they'll assume you could have been selected to the team if you gave an honest effort.

• Another trick is to tell others you had no intention of trying out for the team in the first place, but the coach asked you to dress and serve as a scrimmage player. People will be impressed because the coach thought enough of your talents to ask you for the favor.

• Shrug it off, but be sure to let everyone know you were using the tryout sessions to loosen up your muscles for a season of weight training.

• If you sense your going to get cut, fake an injury. Step into that fastball during batting practice. Come down with swimmer's ear. This method, while underhanded and devious, almost always works.

• Never volunteer to be a team manager after being cut. Spending a season on the sidelines handing out water bottles, writing down stats and cheering the team on makes you look as though you're a "wanna be." Baseball is the absolute worse because you're the one who ends up scaling metal fences and hunting down foul balls in the woods. It's humiliating.

• Try reverse psychology. Act excited when you're cut and exclaim to everyone, "Now I can take that afternoon job at WBCN!"

• It's OK to admit you aren't to adept at the sport, but you have to be on another team during the school year to pull this one off. This approach makes you look mature beyond your years. People will think you're well adjusted and achieve big things in the sport you participate in.

• Get a job writing for your school paper or the local paper and cover the team you were cut from. Get as many names of players on the team in as possible. Do features on them. Quote them after games. If you do a good job the players will treat you like the second coming of Peter Gammons.

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

No Shortage of Mackerel

After puzzling over the septh finder for a minute, he said, "How deep is the water here?" This wasn't the first time he'd been fishing the area near the Davis Ledge Bell. "Oh, 50 to 60 feet," said his busy partner. Looking back at the instrument, he said, "Well how come it's only reading 11 feet?" The partner looked up at him with a smile, "That's mackerel. A solid school of mackerel."

The phone rang early at the shop, "Hello, Trask Tackle," Harry answered. After a short conversation, he hung up. On my way in from opening the gate, he said, "Jacks." "What?" I said. "Jacks. That guy on the phone has a 500-pound load of jack (big) mackerel to sell." "Hmm," I pondered, "Sounds like the mackerel are in thick."

Mackerel are flooding the area in huge schools. The silvery fish is prized striper bait and is sought to fill freezers for a summer-long supply. Owen McDonnell of Cohasset was weighing a couple nice ones in at the scale after a successful trip with his dad. Though wind conditions have kept a damper on the fleet, many got out over the holiday and reaped the bounty.

Mackerel chunks were turned into striper food by Dan Fitzgerald of Scituate. Fishing his favorite early season shore rocks, Dan connected with a hefty 22-pound striper that made the tape at 35 inches. "I was surprised," Dan related. Last year, he stated, it took quite a while to get the season's first keeper. The striper keeper size has been set for 1997, according to a letter received from the Division of Marine Fisheries. For recreational anglers, the limit is 28 inches with one keeper allowed per day. For commercial anglers, the length limit has been set at 34 inches with a daily possession limit of 14 fish.

Elsewhere, freshwater fishing has picked up, according to Joe Litchfield of Scituate. Joe was rolling his eyes with chagrin when telling of his latest fishing expedition to Two Rock Pond with brother Pete. Every two seconds it seemed, Pete had another fish on the line, Joe complained. I didn't have a chance, he exclaimed in feigned disgust. Shiner dunkers are continuing to fatten the sanctuary bass and continuing to release them to fight another day. One happy angler was chirping about catching three, four-plus-pound fish in a row. His partner concurred. Those fish are trained, I needled him. As soon as they hear a bobber hit the water, they know its dinner time and they all come running.

Stocked trout have scattered throughout the waters they were stocked in. No easy pickings now. Barry Sladen of Scituate methodically uses meal worms and tiny spinners to entice the wary brookies to the hook. A major mosquito hatch is also confounding trout anglers. Well-fed trout are skittish under anything but real insects right now. Don't forget the repellent when you head to the ponds and streams. Thick clouds of hemoglobin-challenged skeeters are in evidence already.

When you find a nice spot of shoreline, whether it be salt or fresh, be sure to leave it as clean or cleaner than you found it. Old monofilament line can be left for recycling at the shop. Let's all do our share to keep things looking good.

Catch one that's hard to carry!

Cohasset will have to get a fast start against Winchester. Ekberg is impressed with the team's skill and athleticism. And with a team loaded with seniors, Winchester has the experience and won't fall apart under pressure.

"We're going to have our hands full then," Ekberg said.

Cohasset headed into the tournament sharing the Pilgrim Conference championship with Hingham and Sandwich, after dropping Duxbury, 19-13, last Wednesday.

Unlike the Needham game, where the Skippers weren't as sharp as they have been, Cohasset's play was impeccable against Duxbury.

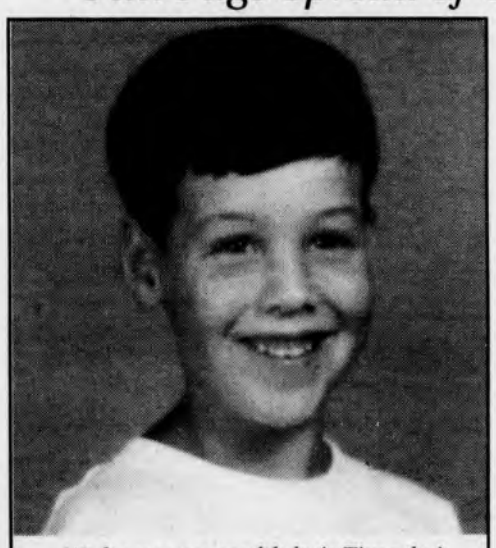
"We played as good lacrosse as Cohasset High School has ever played," said an extremely satisfied Ekberg. "We had a strong start and cleared the ball well."

Kahn was sharp in goal, turning away 22 Duxbury shots, while Buick finished with 10 points on a three-goal, seven-assist evening. "He was unstoppable," Ekberg said.

Lacks fired in five goals, while both Bob Stansell and Moore hit for the hat trick. Ted Goff added two goals and Belson recorded a single tally.

Cohasset was able to shut down the effectiveness of Duxbury All-Star Dan Taylor, thanks to the solid defensive play of Dave Noble.

"He was tenacious on defense and took on a large part of their defense," Ekberg said.



The Skippers made the mistake of falling behind 5-1 to Sandwich before staging a furious comeback, coming up just short, 10-9 on May 16.

"There was no magic switch," Ekberg said. "The way we play lacrosse, we have to go out and play offense. Our defense is there."

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

It's Happening

Soccer Club's Dance Cruise Music Line-Up Is Set

Enjoy a very casual evening watching the sun set over the skyline of Boston aboard the 200' Provincetown II, while being entertained by continuous live music from four bands on three separate decks. Passenger may board at the World Trade Center in Boston, or at Pemberton Pier in Hull. The gangplank will be raised at 7:15 p.m. sharp in Boston and 8:15 p.m. sharp in Hull. Tickets are $30 each, $37.50 June 1, for this June 14 music extravaganza, and may be purchased from any Cohasset Soccer Club coach, at Cohasset Hardware and The Good Sport. Mail orders accepted with a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Soccer Club, P.O. Box 409, Cohasset, 02025. When the last ticket is sold, you have missed the boat!

The middle deck will be home to "The Movers," an eight-piece jump blues band complete with trumpet, trombone and tenor sax in addition to piano, bass, guitar, drums and a vocalist. Recreating and revitalizing the feeling of the honest passion of the blues is what won "The Movers" first place at the 12th Annual International Blues Talent Competition on famous Beale Street in Memphis, Tenn. Previous winners have gone on to sign with a major recording label, so this is an opportune time to see and hear the best while they're still a "local" band.

"Basic Black," a newly-formed five piece blues, R & B and soul band, is made up of a Boston Music Awards finalist and a Harpers Ferry Battle of the Blues Bands winner. Their soulful yet powerful sound is derived from lead and rhythm guitar, bass, drums and a smooth Hammond B3 organ. "Basic Black," a band fast becoming a force to be reckoned with, will definitely tear up the top deck.

Continuous music will be played on the bottom deck by two groups that need no introduction. Cohasset's two favorite rock bands, "Bottom of the Fifth" and "The Grateful Dads," will provide non-stop searing rock 'n roll for your dancing pleasure. Bring your own life jacket because "The Grateful Dads" and "Bottom of the Fifth" set stages on fire wherever they go.

Cohasset Dramatic Club Meeting Scheduled

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will host a reception for its adult members Sunday, June 8, at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall.

Come by and have some refreshments while renewing friendships. Meet the scholarship winners and find out what is planned for the 1997-1998 season.

Farmers Market on the Common

The Cohasset Village Farmers' market on historic Cohasset Common will be held Thursdays 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. from June 5 to Oct. 9. It will feature a free folk music concert the first Thursday of each month along with organic produce, strawberries, herbs, perennials, bedding plants, bread, fresh flower bouquets, French pastries, and honey products.

The June 5 market will feature Mark Purcell, singer and songwriter, along with fiddle player Joseph Kessler.

Plan to visit village shops and cafés while supporting local agriculture on the South Shore.

Soprano and Harp Recital at St. Stephen's

As part of its music recital series, St. Stephen's Church will present Gayle Berman, soprano, and Susan Miron, harpist, in a recital Sunday, June 1, at 3:30 p.m.

Gayle Berman has performed as a soloist throughout the U.S. giving performances at the Choral Arts Society of New York, the Rome Festival Opera and the San Antonio Opera. She teaches at Eastern Nazarene College.

Susan Miron gave her debut at Carnegie Hall and is harpist of the Melisande Trio with whom she has recorded the critically acclaimed "Harp Songs and Interludes."

A free-will offering will be taken, and a reception will follow the program.

The church located at 16 Highland Ave. has handicap access, and plenty of parking in the village lot. For information call (617) 383-1083.

Making the Marriage Work

Some wives say, "I am a believer but my husband is not." How to maintain marital and family harmony, live an abundant life and honor one's religious convictions will be considered in an upcoming workshop for women. It will be offered free-of-charge Saturday, June 7, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. by Strait Paths Counseling of Cohasset.

The morning session, limited to women, will be led by a female family therapist and will center on group discussion, praise music and referral to Scripture and relevant current literature; among the scheduled activities for the afternoon are presentations by a panel of pastors and concerned women, a question and answer period and a review of the day's insights and recommendations.

Although no fee will be charged, registration is necessary; seating is limited. Call (617) 383-1346 for further information, registration and directions to Strait Paths.

'Eleanor Roosevelt' to Speak with Girl Scouts

The Cohasset Junior and Cadette Girl Scout Troops and the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs are jointly sponsoring an Ice Cream Social with Eleanor Roosevelt, portrayed by actress Elena Dodd. She will represent Mrs. Roosevelt in her years as the First Lady. The event will be at the Cohasset Lightkeepers' House on June 4 at 2:30 p.m.

The Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and Bergson's are contributors. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Tickets are $5.00. They are available at the Cohasset Elder Affairs Office at 3 North Main Street, Cohasset(383-9112), or by calling Mary McElroy(383-0505).

Maritime Museum Opens Sunday, June 1

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset center, will open for the summer season Sunday, June 1. Hours through September are 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. each day except Mondays. Admission is free and donations are accepted.

The museum features artifacts such as ship models, fishing gear, lifesaving materials, shipbuilding and shipwreck relics, as well as a collection of Native American stone tools relating to the history of this small New England village.

For further information call the Historical Society at 617-383-1434.

Local Parents Graduate from Parenting Class

A group of nine parents graduated the six-week "Active Parenting Today" class recently held at the Osgood Elementary School. Sheila Barrow, Dorian Brady, Tomi Bukowski, Janet Campbell, Paul Guinee, Jeanne Holway, Susan Tehranian, Susan Spofford and Diana Kinch were involved in the program to learn how to be more effective parents. The class was offered to parents of second-grade students as the students were also experiencing a program put out by the Active Parenting Program called "Free the Horses."

The video-based program is designed to help parents effectively deal with the special issues they face in the 1990s, as well as instilling qualities of cooperation, courage, self-esteem and responsibility in their children.

Joanne Hurley, the school adjustment counselor at the Osgood School, who facilitated the course, said, "Parents of children need to learn practical skills they can use to build on their children's strengths, minimize parent/child struggles and settle common conflicts. The Active Parenting Today classes suggest ways parents can build strong bonds with their children, develop open communication and increase the chances that their children will make good choices when they get older. There was positive feedback from the parents who took the class."

Reception Honoring Mrs. Price

Cohasset kindergarten teacher Marie Price will retire at the end of the school year. All students, past and present, and parents are cordially invited to an open house reception in her honor Sunday, June 1, at the Second Congregational Church (next to town hall), from 2 to 4 p.m. The room mothers are collecting contributions for a Memory Book for Mrs. Price.

All former students are asked to submit a message on an 8 1/2 x 11" sheet of paper to the boxes in the offices at each school building, or bring to the reception. Your contribution can take any format. For example, it could be a drawing, a letter, "then" and "now" pictures or a special story. Be sure to include your name and the year you had Mrs. Price. Also, help us spread the word, especially among older students and returning college students.

The Carousel in Hull opens Saturday.

Paragon Carousel Announces Grand Opening

Free rides, clowns and face painting will highlight the festivities planned for Saturday, May 31 at the Paragon Carousel.

The Carousel will open to the public at 10 a.m. and will offer free rides for its first two hours of operation. Beginning at noon children and adults alike will be entertained by the "Smile Specialists", Fruit & Jingles. Throughout the day, Fruit & Jingles will be face-painting, creating balloon animals and "clowning around."

The festivities will continue into the evening with a big band concert across the street from the Carousel at the Bernie King Pavilion beginning at 7 p.m. At 9 p.m. the evening will close with a spectacular fireworks display over Nantasket Beach, sponsored by the Hull-Nantasket Chamber of Commerce.

The Cafe at Carousel Station will be open for business. The cafe will be selling ice cream, sandwiches, hot dogs, coffees and other items. Also, gift items will be available at the Carousel Gift Shop.

Sea Side Kites will be on hand with kite-flying demonstrations and will be displaying a variety of kites, windsocks and other "wind items."

The Paragon Carousel is operated by the Friends of the Paragon Carousel, a non-profit organization dedicated to the restoration and preservation of this historic landmark. Single ride tickets will be $1.50. Frequent riders can take advantage of a ten-ride ticket for $13.50.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Savings tips from tightwad

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Many of us think about our money in two ways: how we can spend it and, when we aren't doing that, how we can increase its volume by investing it. Given the U.S. stock market's tremendous gains over the last two and a half years, it's not hard to figure out why there is such enthusiasm for both impulses. But amidst these prevailing financial attitudes, a different approach exists, one almost old-fashioned in comparison; earning through saving.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Perhaps the best havens for this cult of frugality are a handful of newsletters written by none other than born-again tightwads and reformed debt junkies. These newsletters offer suggestions on everything from investing to homemade household cleaners. While you may want to pass on their inventive uses for pantyhose, their tips for paying off credit-card debt and cutting spending may change the way you handle your finances.

Newsletters such as The Cheapskate Monthly, Bottom Line, Living Cheap News, and The Pocket Change Investor (roughly $1 per issue) do suggest creative ways to save a buck -- like "always buy in bulk," and "use coupons," etc. But most of them heed a higher calling: demonstrating how efficiency and savings do not have to result in a life stripped of pleasure. (The Cheapskate Monthly's motto reads: "bringing dignity to the art of living within one's means."). Almost all of the newsletters offer articles on pecuniary psychology -- are you a spender or a hoarder? -- and motivational speeches about not avoiding what you fear, whether it be credit-card debt or elevators.

And, to tell the truth, it's hard not to catch the tightwad spirit. Larry Roth, author of Living Cheap News, gives a rousing argument for stashing away $10 a day toward retirement instead of falling prey to "the retirement defeatism being bandied about these days." He even includes an amortization chart to show the accumulation over a lifetime of various yearly savings (and then ventures on to discuss increasing those yields by investing the savings at various percentages). His plan can seem compelling to those who resist the hyperbole of most investment literature.

But be aware that many of the suggested money-saving methods involve extra thought, time and effort to put into practice. Not to mention that it takes time and effort to find the new and clever among the pages of advice. Here are a few gems that we found:

*When it comes to paying off credit card debt, it doesn't pay to play by the rules. Bi-weekly payments, as opposed to traditional monthly installments, can significantly reduce the interest you pay on the debt, says The Pocket Change Investor. Why? Your credit card issuer must credit your account as soon as the payment is received, no matter if it arrives before the due date, which means less interest will accumulate on the balance. By ignoring the minimum payment required and sending in the same amount every two weeks you can save thousands of dollars in the long run. Say you owe $3,500 on a credit card that charges 17 percent, and your card company asks for a minimum payment of $70. And you are strapped for cash. Resist the temptation of simply paying the required minimum -- which will decrease as the balance drops -- until the card is paid off. Instead, pay bi-weekly payments of $35 (half of the current minimum) until the card balance reaches zero. The difference is striking. Paying off the balance by sending in just the required minimum would take 30 years and cost you around $7,000 in interest alone. Sending $35 every two weeks would mean taking only 7 years to become debt free and would cost you around $2,000.

*Don't give away those old pants and shirts without getting a proper estimation of their value, says The Cheapskate Monthly. Most people simply guess at the value of their clothing donations when deducting them on their tax return; they are either underestimating the value and missing out on savings, or overestimating and risking a tax audit and possible penalty fines. You might stuff a bunch of your old clothes into a bag and claim a $100 deduction, when the clothes could easily have been worth $1,000 (a woman's dress in good condition can be worth $65 alone). To solve this dilemma, the newsletter suggests consulting "Cash for Your Used Clothing," by William R. Lewis. The book lists values approved by the Internal Revenue Service for 750 items.

*And for those who find themselves in this position; beware of dentists prescribing expensive "night guards." If you grind your teeth at night and are tempted to visit the dentist for a cure, The Cheapskate Monthly suggests instead that you buy an athletic mouth guard at a sports store. Making the guard comfortable for nightware is easy: Follow the directions by dipping the plastic guard in boiling water and biting down on it to mold it to your mouth. Athletic guards cost only a few dollars while those custom-made in the dentist's office can cost several hundred dollars.

These newsletters all share a conversational voice, but have plenty of individual style. Roth's Living Cheap News seems to be one-part personal diatribe, woven in among his experiences and opinions and practical advice. Bottom-Line, on the other hand, is a compilation of sound bites from various peoples' books, addressing everything from health tips to family guidance. Its most valuable contributions may be the investing articles which quote advice from high profile Wall Street planners such as Byron Wien, chief investment strategist for Morgan Stanley & Co.

The Cheapskate Monthly rarely mentions investing, but does feature one helpful article on personal finance in each issue. It just may be the gold mine of make-it-yourself household products.

The Pocket Change Investor, perhaps the newsletter most focused on personal finance, gives more instructive -- if not always comprehensive -- advice on such topics as mortgages, credit card debt and car leases.

Beyond offering tips on saving, the newsletters also tend to be bastions of homespun advice on cleaning and cooking -- perhaps the kind of tips your grandmother acquired during the Great Depression. Take pantyhose. You can use them as an inexpensive replacement for a vacuum filter, a temporary fan belt for your car and a pouch for an oatmeal bath. Are you surprised? Then you probably aren't aware of the hidden uses of fabric softener either (e.g. as a cleaning fluid, hair defrizzer, air freshener, the list goes on...) Of course, all of these suggestions take up more time than the ready-to-use products you can buy at the store. And there are those who believe that time is money.

Derby Academy Summer School

"Everyone can become a better student!" Derby Academy is pleased to announce that its Academic Summer School is open to all students in grades 2 through 12 and will begin Monday, June 30. Now in its 19th successful year, the program of academic and review courses runs for four weeks through July 25. A new offering this summer — Computer Keyboarding and Word Processing — focuses on two-handed touch typing and academic report writing — two essential skills for today's student.

All academic summer school courses are taught by qualified and experienced faculty from Derby Academy and other area schools. Each class is limited to 10 students to maximize individual progress. Academic credit for courses may be arranged on an individual basis.

Classes are held in Hingham on the Burditt Avenue campus of Derby Academy. Selections include Study Skills I and II, designed to help students learn and study more effectively and efficiently; Reading and Writing Skills I, II and III which use high interest material to develop reading skills and comprehension and practice the clear written expression of ideas; and Math I, II and m, which promote mastery of skills and concepts in a relaxed and supportive environment.

For program brochure, registration forms or more information, call program director Connie Chapin at Derby Academy, 749-0746 or 749-0124.

Sign Up for Sunset Dance Cruise

Dust off those dancing shoes. The Cohasset Soccer Club will be hosting a Boston Harbor Sunset Dance Cruise Saturday, June 14. Enjoy a very casual evening watching the sun set over the skyline of Boston aboard the 200-foot Provincetown II, while being entertained by continuous live music from four bands on three separate decks. Passengers may board at the World Trade Center in Boston, or at Pemberton Pier in Hull. Tickets are $30 each until May 31 and $37.50 from June 1 on. Tickets may be purchased from any Cohasset Soccer Club coach or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Soccer Club, Sunset Dance Cruise, P.O. Box 409, Cohasset, 02025.

Proceeds will provide three $1,000 scholarships to selected graduating Cohasset High School seniors who are active in voluntary community service. Maintaining and upgrading soccer fields, equipment and uniforms. Continuing education — coaching courses, youth and adult refereeing courses, and pre-game soccer clinics.

Dr. John C. Peterson, executive director of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, presents Ben Guild of Cohasset with the prestigious Beket Lang Award for "outstanding effort by a junior (16 years old or younger)" at the 1997 New England Spring Flower Show. Ben is the son of Alexandra and Ned Guild of Cohasset. His winning entry was a grapefruit tree.

DRUG FACT

Signs of a "Pothead" physique are: Limp posture. Unmuscular body. Slow-motion walk. Red eyes. Flat facial expression. Slowing of speech. A combination of marijuana and alcohol is particularly dangerous, causing changes in depth perception, night blindness, concentration and reaction time. After several years of use marijuana causes damage to the brain by impairing long- and short-term memory. Experience does not become memory because learning does not occur. It widens the gap between brain cells, thus slowing down the nerve impulses. It gives abnormal EEGs when electrodes are planted deep within the brain. Marijuana impairs the ability to evaluate situations and sequencing ability. It impairs psycho-motor performance. Combining marijuana and alcohol is the most serious drug abuse problem among our children today!

Character Education Extends Beyond the Classroom

New Program Takes Root at Deer Hill

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Deer Hill School is reaching out to the families of its students for help reinforcing moral development. By providing each family with lesson material, the Deer Hill Character Education Project Committee hopes it will be easy for everyone to get involved.

The goal of the committee is to offer continuity between the values taught in school and those taught at home. Society moved to value neutral teaching in the 60s when everything was being questioned, but now is in the process of moving back to the traditional teachings because the need is so great. Character education is now being implemented in various schools around the country, officials said.

Ed Leonard, the adjustment counselor at Deer Hill, and Ruth Fennessey, elementary curriculum coordinator, attended a seminar with Thomas Lickona, author of "Educating For Character" two years ago. It was at this seminar that Leonard and Fennessey realized the need to make character education more formalized.

Lickona's focus is on the previous societal structure; family, school and church. For hundreds of years, this tripod of influences in a child's life worked together, each balancing the other making positive reinforcement inevitable. However, nowadays, family dynamics have changed, schools fear the blatant teaching of values, and many families don't go to church. The unity of the tripod no longer exists and children receive mixed messages.

Leonard has been teaching "character education" and conflict resolution at Deer Hill for 10 years. Discussions on making good decisions, being good people, and respecting others are examples of the activities Leonard would conduct with the students on a monthly basis. However, his teachings have not been making a difference with the children and he believes it is because Lickona's tripod is off balance.

Society moved to value neutral teaching in the 60s when everything was being questioned, but now is in the process of moving back to the traditional teachings because the need is so great.

"In order to provide another leg of the tripod for the children, we decided to get the parents involved," Leonard said.

The Deer Hill Character Education Project Committee was formed with volunteers from the PSO, parents, and other community members showing interest. The committee spent the first third of the school year doing research on what has been done with character education. The members contacted other schools and studied current literature written on character education.

"Through researching different programs, we found one that fit what we wanted in our school," Fennessey said.

The committee followed Kevin Ryan's (a Boston University professor) belief that it is OK to use character words. They developed a home-based program consisting of five key character words: respect, responsibility, kindness, courage and honesty. Each word will be the focus of a family lesson taught through literature, suggested dilemmas, and then the questioning and answering of the stories and dilemmas.

The period spent on each word will average two months to allow enough time for exploration with the lessons, school and the community. The teachers will be aware of what word is being worked on at home so he or she can utilize the word in everyday classroom activities. In addition, a b[illegible] might be placed in the [illegible] hallway with the current [illegible] acter word on it reminding children of its meaning and then hopefully they will practice it, officials said.

The lessons are kept simple in order to create discussion as opposed to creating work for the families.

"In putting together the lessons, we intentionally left room for various interpretation by the families," said Debbie Shadd, committee member.

The idea is to get people talking about what is acceptable and what isn't so children know what is expected from them.

The committee hopes this project creates a domino effect throughout the community at large.

"If the 'real world' isn't practicing the behavior we are hoping to instill in our children, how will our children see the reality of good behavior? It needs to be more than a school behavior but a community behavior," Leonard said.

The committee intends to start the program in the fall, however, plans to present this new program to the parents of the Deer Hill School and provide the materials are still in the works.

Introduction to Middle School

June 10, the new middle school will hold a morning fair from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. to welcome next year's sixth- and seventh-graders and their parents. The middle school teachers, guidance counselors and the nurse will each have a table set up for introductions and to answer questions. "Success Packets" will be handed out to each student. In these packets is a checklist, including the summer reading list, of what is needed to be a successful student at the middle school.

A separate bus schedule will be running this day. Please check with the main office for times.

The Crowley and Sullivan families were among hundreds who attended Hospice of the South Shore's Sixth Annual Mall Walk.

Thanks to everyone's support, more than $123,000 was raised to help Hospice of the South Shore provide care and comfort to terminally ill patients and their families.

The Mall Walk was made possible by scores of dedicated volunteers, including co-chairs Karen McArdle and Dianne Ritter Chase, Dolly Bicknell, Laura Bicknell-Carbone, Eleanor Hall, Robin Hoffman, Charlene Long, Karen Malloy, Tom McCarthy, Rose Mone, Jo Anne and Steve Olson, Teresa Sasserson, Phyllis Troupe, and Bud and Barbara Watts.

Special "thank yous" also go to Rockland Trust (the Walk's lead sponsor), Citizens Bank, Fleet Bank, and Hanover Mall.

Hospice of the South Shore, a program of South Shore Hospital, helps anyone with a life-limiting illness. Our nurses, aides, social workers, counselors, and volunteers are available 24 hours a day to support patients and their families. Donations help defray the $200,000 in free care that Hospice of the South Shore provides each year.

Appeals Board Leans Toward Tank on Scituate Hill

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

In deliberations Tuesday following a public hearing on building a second water tank next to the existing one at Bear Hill, the zoning board of appeals kept the door open for an alternate site at Scituate Hill.

Neighbors oppose the Bear Hill location near the high school because of aesthetics and potential impact on property values.

The water commissioners prefer Bear Hill because it is less expensive to build there and the $1.4 million tank could be constructed more quickly. They also say the Bear Hill location will better be able to maintain the water pressure required to fight a fire.

All agree a second tank is needed in town to increase fire-flow capacity town wide and to enable a tank to be taken off line for periodic cleaning.

The water commission needs a height variance from the

CHS Class of 1997 Graduates Saturday

Exercises at 1:30 p.m. at Music Circus

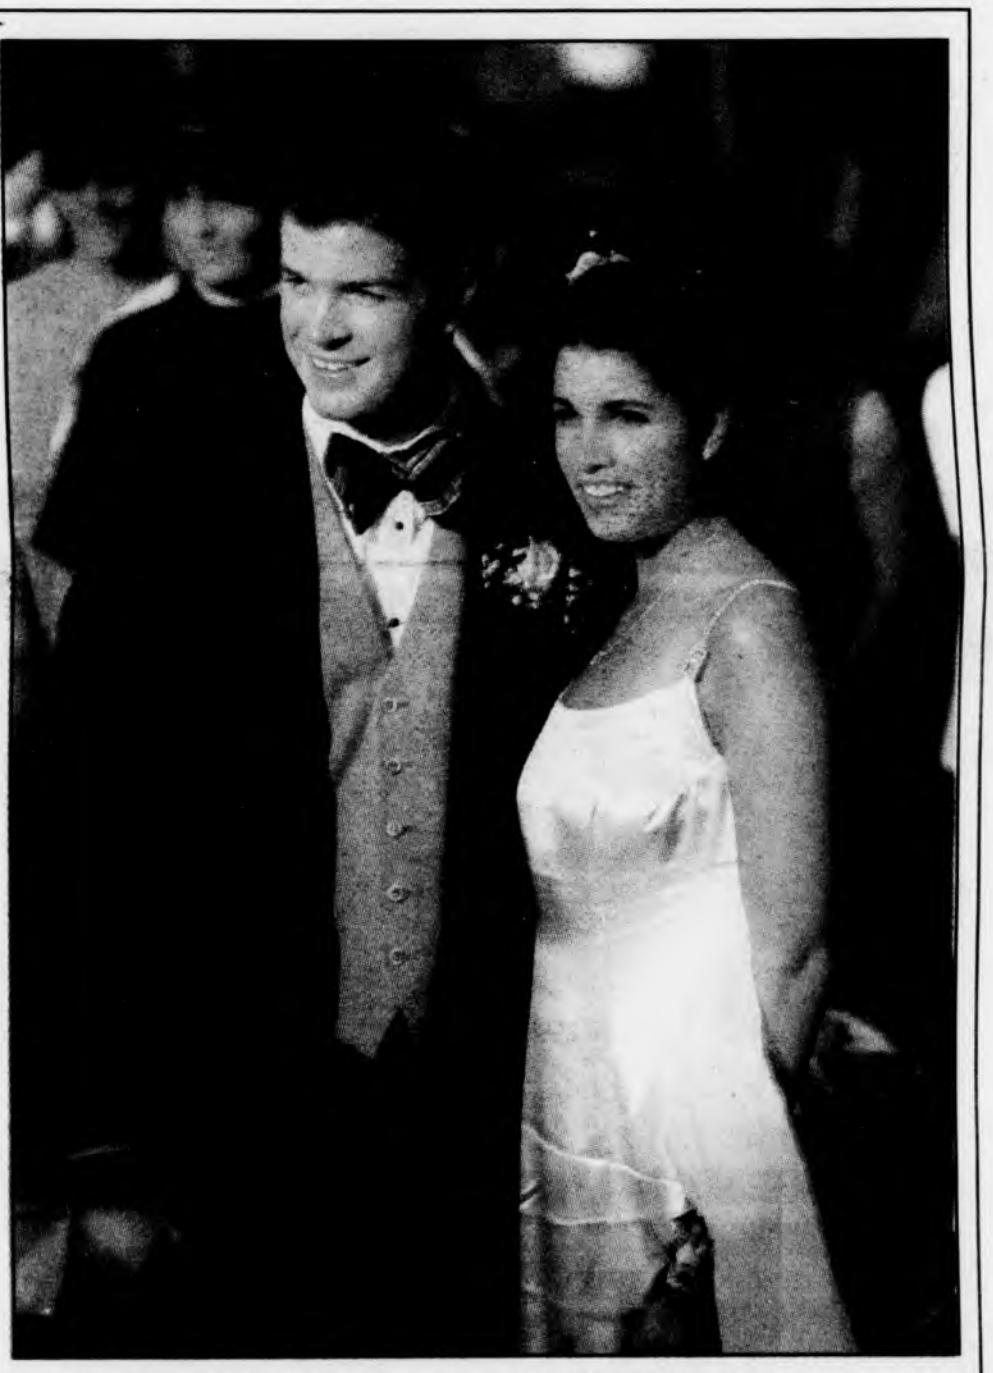
By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

When a class graduates from Cohasset High School, it's like saying good-bye to a member of the family.

And Principal Curtis Collins says this class is no different.

"Cohasset High is has a unique personality. There's very much a communal spirit here," he said.

What the 67-member Class of 1997 lacks in numbers when compared to other high schools, it makes up in its ability in the classroom and penchant for public service.



As graduation exercises get underway Saturday at 1:30 p.m., seniors will march into the big top at the Music Circus to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance."

Thirteen members of the chorus, all seniors, will lead the audience in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" to the music provided by the junior/senior high concert band, under the direction of Marcia LaJoie.

In the traditional "student-oriented" graduation, class president Matthew Belson will deliver the welcoming address.

Also speaking are salutatorian Ryan

MBTA Rebuffs Conspiracy Theory

Hingham Wants T Barred From Train Hearing

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for MBTA, is accustomed to dealing with people suspicious about the restoration of the Greenbush line. But Brennan said a letter from Greenbush Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) member Alexander Macmillan to the Army Corps of Engineers accusing the T of running a "conspiracy" is unacceptable.

"Conspiracy theories abound that I'm up to something, but I find this one personally offensive," Brennan said.

Brennan delivered his comments at the May 28 meeting of the CAC in Hingham town hall, which also focused on railroad crossings and concerns from Scituate. The letter Brennan was referring to appeared in the May 22 Hingham Journal.

The controversy began when Brennan sent a letter to the Army Corps requesting a joint public hearing with the MBTA and the CAC to discuss environmental impacts and the final environmental impact report.

Macmillan read Brennan's letter and wrote to the Army Corps of Engineers requesting that the MBTA be excluded from participating formally in any public hearing.

At a May 22 Greenbush informational hearing, Hingham officials expressed their strong desire for an Army Corps hearing conducted without MBTA participation. Macmillan said

Cohasset's Week

Towns to Work Together on Train Concerns

As Greenbush corridor communities continue to prepare for the return of commuter rail service to the region, local officials are considering working cooperatively as a way to more efficiently and economically mitigate the impact of the train.

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Martin Crane wrote to his counterparts, Michael Sullivan in Cohasset and Joseph Norton in Scituate, this week requesting that as negotiations over the Greenbush Line move forward, the three communities start working together where possible.

"Many issues including safety, noise, traffic, air pollution, wetlands filling and neighborhood and business community disruptions are shared by all of us to a greater or lesser degree," Crane wrote.

If technical studies are needed to review MBTA data relating to noise, air and water quality, grade-crossing safety and alternatives to whistle blowing, Crane suggested that the three towns might find it more cost effective to commission the work jointly.

Norton, who shared the letter with bhis board members at the Scituate selectmen's meeting Tuesday agreed that working together as a region made sense.

While some issues are town specific, Norton maintained that the train noise in Hingham will be the same as the train noise in Cohasset and Scituate.

"The noise, vibration, safety, and air pollution concerns are pretty much the same in every town," Norton said. "It's very important that we should investigate sitting down with these communities."

Norton said the board will respond to Crane and express interest in holding a joint meeting for all three boards in the near future.

Beach, RTF Permits Are Expiring

Current permits are expiring! Beach and recycling transfer facility permits are now available at the town hall Monday and Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 4:30 to 7 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., until Friday, June 27. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle, and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $65, $25 for second vehicle if application made at a different time, and $33 for a sole resident. Residents will need vehicle registrations or if not a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). Residents are encouraged to purchase both stickers through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope. RTF stickers may be purchased at the RTF weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Voter Registration is Ongoing

As the May 3 Annual Town Election is past, the Town Clerk would like to remind citizens that voter registration is an ongoing process.

Since July 1, 1994, new voters have been able to register without the need to come to town hall. Registration forms are available at the Town Hall, Registry, Post Office, Library, Department of Welfare, WIC, AFDC, Medicaid, Army Recruitment offices, and other offices that provide services to people with disabilities. Affidavits of registration are mailed to the clerk's office or sent electronically through the computer from the Registry. After certifying the affidavit, an acknowledgment notice is then mailed to the voter. The central voter registry maintains a statewide list of all registered voters in Massachusetts. This computerized listing is essential in prohibiting voter registration fraud.

In addition to broadening the opportunity to register to vote, the motor voter law also changes the way in which voters may be removed from the voting list. A voter may not be removed from the voting list on the ground that the registrant has changed his residence unless the registrant: Confirms in writing that he has moved to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction registers in another city or town; or Fails to respond to a confirmation notice and has not voted in the second general election for Federal office after the date of the notice. Registration closes 20 days before an election and Annual Town Meeting (10 days before a Special Town Meeting). Citizens may register during this period, but will not be able to vote at that election.

DPW Business Notes

During the month of April the D.P.W. accomplished the following:

Plowed and removed snow from April 1, 1997 blizzard; removed, washed and put away all plows and sanders; cleaned flapper at Treats Pond, gates at James Brook, drainage pipe on Steven Lane, brook on Lantern Lane; patched and swept road race route; chipped all brush, branches and trees belonging to the town on roadsides, following the blizzard; burned brush brought to the R.T.F. by residents; began repairing sod damage at various locations; removed stones and debris that washed onto roadways during the blizzard; continued annual road and sidewalk sweeping; put up signs on King Street at Pond Street, Jerusalem Road at Forest Avenue, Doane Street at Church Street.

Removed all trees and shrubs from Paul Pratt Library p[illegible] request of Dick Hayes; set up and removed chairs before and after town meeting; rebuilt basin on Parker Avenue; patched potholes at various locations; serviced all Tree and Park vehicles; prepared for four funerals; york raked Beechwood Ball Park, Little League and Miliken Fields; rolled, loamed and overseeded the Common area; rolled and mowed high school and Beechwood Ball Park; mowed and trimmed town hall, Paul Pratt Library and Little League Field; transported metal stantions to town hall for paining; set up voting booths for elections.

Work done at the D.P.W. garage site:

Put in roof drain pipes at new facility; hauled gravel to site for vent pipe to go from tite tank through garage roof; prepared area to pour footing for 275 gallon diesel tank to operate new generator; moved 275 gallon tank from the R.T.F. to the new garage; built caged area for storage of small power equipment; removed blasted ledge for parking areas.

Our goals for the month of May with weather permitting include:

Move into the new D.P.W. facility; clean up litter on roadsides; continue annual road and sidewalk sweeping project; remove 11 trees from Lamberts Lane; grade and asphalt outside areas around facility; patch driveway aprons damaged by snow plows; mow and trim all cemeteries, schools and parks; construct new sidewalk in the area of 137 North Main St.

Drug and Alcohol Committee Meeting

The Drug and Alcohol Committee will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, June 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall. The room location is noted in the foyer of the town hall. The Drug and Alcohol Committee will hold its meetings the second Tuesday of every month. All those interested are welcome to attend.

Swimming Pool Meeting

A meeting will be held at the Stop & Shop Meeting Room, Route 3A, Cohasset, Thursday, June 12, at 7 p.m. at which time the feasibility of "gifting" Cohasset with an indoor swimming pool to celebrate the next millennium will be explored.

Lottery Ticket Sales are Jackpot for Local Stores

Town Coffers Also Reap the Rewards

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

At Flynn's Grocery and Deli on Turner Road in Scituate, 50 percent of the store's customers over the age 18 purchase lottery tickets, said owner Larry Flynn.

Alice Myers scratched a $10 winner at Cohasset Foot Mart as Marc Boles looks on.

"It gets a little contagious," said Flynn, who also owns a store in Norwell. "We have a lot of regular lottery players, but even the people who don't buy tickets regularly will often buy one if the person in front of them buys one."

About 70 percent of customers who patronize Marylou's News on Country Way in North Scituate play the lottery, said store manager Lori Robinson.

"It's non-stop all day and it's the same people every week," Robinson said. "They buy their morning coffee and a ticket."

During fiscal year 1996, the towns of Cohasset and Scituate doled out millions of dollars on lottery tickets and received several hundred thousand dollars in local aid from lottery ticket sales.

This aid, which the state Department of Revenue determines by formula, can be applied to the town's budget however the town chooses, said Michael Coffey from the Massachusetts State Lottery.

Lottery customers in Cohasset purchased almost $2.5 million in lottery tickets. In return, the town received $262, 575 in local aid. Cohasset Town Accountant Michael Buckley said Cohasset's aid is added to the town's general fund.

Scituate patrons spent almost $4.6 million in pursuit of a jackpot. Local aid returns for the town totalled $893,977. Scituate Town Administrator Richard Agnew said the local aid Scituate receives goes into the general fund.

The instant "scratch" tickets, which range in price from $1 to $5, are the hottest sellers at the store, Flynn and Robinson said, with the $2 tickets getting the most play.

At the Cohasset Food Mart, the $5 scratch ticket called Winning 25 generates the most revenue — and the most excitement, with a $3 million prize, said night manager Paul Orrall.

Statewide, the 15 to 22 varieties of instant tickets on the market at any given time are the best sellers, Coffey said. Six lotto games — Megabucks, Mass. Cash, Mass. Millions, the Numbers Game, Keno and the multi-state Big Game — are also available in Massachusetts, he said.

"It's an impulse buy," said Orrall. "People come into buy what they're supposed to buy and they end up buying a ticket or playing a number. And of course, the higher the jackpot, the more people will take a chance."

In all three stores, the popularity of the lottery helps boost business and guarantees a core of customers, they said.

"You might lose business if you don't have the lottery," said Flynn, who tries to stock a variety of games for his regular lottery customers. "If someone wants to play the lottery and needs a gallon of milk, they're going to go to the store that has the lottery."

"We have about 35 to 40 regulars who play the lottery on a daily basis," said Orrall. "It helps the sales of other materials. They'll purchase something else in addition to the lottery."

The one percent of the stakes each store receives from selling winning tickets does not provide enough of an incentive for their stores to sell tickets, they agreed.

With a reputation as a lucky store, Flynn's averages $5,000 worth in winners in different denominations and keeps customers interested. A Megabucks ticket sold at his Norwell store yielded $1.76 million. During the two years that Flynn has owned his Scituate store, no one has hit the jackpot, but he expects that to happen any day.

"It's rare that we go through a week without a $400 or $500 winner," Flynn said.

At the Cohasset Food Mart, a customer won $100,000 on the Mass. Cash lotto game a couple of months ago, said Orrall.

Marylou's has had a Megabucks million dollar winner at its North Scituate location, a million dollar scratch ticket winner at its Hull store and two $50,000 scratch ticket winners in two weeks at the Rockland Marylou's, Robinson said.

Working in a store that is flooded with jackpot seekers, Robinson has seen some peculiar playing methods.

"Some people check the numbers on the backs of the scratch tickets, which come in numbered books. They won't buy a ticket unless it's in the middle of the book because they think there are no winners at the beginning or end," she explained. "That's not necessarily true. We've had some first and some last tickets that have hit."

Appeals Board Leans Toward Tank on Scituate Hill

zoning board before it can proceed. Town by-laws restrict structure heights to 35 feet in a residential zone. The tank would be 65 feet tall.

Robert Thompson, 31 Reservoir Road, who is an abutter, said two tanks at one location conjures up an industrial scene.

"Unless there is a compelling argument to the contrary, I ask the tank be on Scituate Hill," he said.

Thompson's point seemed to form the thrust of the deliberations later on.

Although siting the tank on Scituate Hill off Route 3A would be about 10 percent more expensive and require a land taking at the former Norfolk Webb Company property — the zoning board agreed both sites were suitable from an engineering standpoint.

Two other Scituate Hill sites were not considered due to problems with pollution and potential legal issues.

Members expressed concern about the time delay of about nine months to acquire the land at Webb Norfolk by eminent domain, but didn't seem to think that outweighed the concerns of the Bear Hill neighborhood. They disputed the importance of the water commissioners' assertion about water pressure differences between the two sites for fire-fighting purposes.

"There is no difference technically. Both locations are sound," said Don DeMichele.

Barbara Power said she has a strong inclination to keep non-residential uses out of residential areas.

Anson Wheeller said the board had always given a great deal of weight to the concerns of neighbors when considering a variance.

Woody Chittick said the cost difference between the two locations, which varies by about $150,000, is minimal because money for screening with landscaping and trees would not be needed at the more expensive Scituate Hill site as it would be at Bear Hill.

Chairman Mark DeGiacomo said two tanks do have more impact aesthetically than one in a neighborhood.

The board took the matter under advisement and will consider written submissions from both sides and take another look at the matter at its June 25 meeting. The board has to issue a decision by mid-August.

It is not clear if water commissioners will have to go back to town meeting for approval to use the Scituate Hill site. The zoning board asked for a written opinion from town counsel on the matter.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said the water commissioners and engineers answered his concerns about Bear Hill particularly that the northern part of town would be adequately served if the tank were located there. He said placing the tank at the "hub of the distribution system" in a thickly settled area is a priority.

Water commissioners approved plans at their May 8 meeting to build the two million gallon tank on Bear Hill, but at the time remained receptive to exploring various sites on Scituate Hill, which is near Cohasset Heights Landfill.

But this week, water commission Chairman Robert Kasameyer said it was time to move on.

"Bear Hill is an excellent site. It meets all the legal requirements. We would like to move ahead," he said.

Kasameyer said the water commission was committed to minimizing the visual impacts of the tank on the neighborhood.

MBTA Rebuffs Theory

the MBTA would taint any independent review by the Army Corps.

In his letter to the Army Corps, Macmillan also refers to a "confidential 5/9/97 e-mail message" to Army Corps officials from an MBTA lawyer attempting to prevent an independent hearing.

Macmillan restated his beliefs at the CAC meeting.

"The confidential e-mail to the Army Corps was an attempt to slip in language that the MBTA does not really need to comply with the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act," Macmillan said. "The Army Corps rejected that e-mail. We don't just want an Army Corps hearing, we want an independent environmental review."

Macmillan added that the Army Corps would take a back seat to the MBTA in any joint hearing.

Macmillan also complained that the minutes of the CAC meetings, which are taped and reviewed by Brennan, unfairly supported the MBTA's positions.

Brennan said the whole assertion of a "secret e-mail" was absurd.

"The idea that any attorney would send an e-mail to a government employee and expect it to stay confidential is ridiculous," Brennan said.

Brennan said the intent of his letter to the Army Corps was to ensure full disclosure of all environmental aspects of Greenbush.

In other business, Randy Dickinson from the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) answered questions about grade crossings, quadrant gates and horns.

The Swift Rail Development Act of 1994 requires all trains to blow horns at grade crossings for safety unless approved alternative measures are in place.

Approved mitigation measures include median dividers, grade crossing closures, partial closures at grade crossings and quadrant gates.

Dickinson said the FRA had not yet taken an official position on quadrant gates — which block all access to grade crossings while trains pass.

Dickinson said there are some concerns that cars will become trapped between the gates and panic. A car could easily smash through the gates, but psychological research has shown that elderly people are more likely than younger people to panic and sit between the gates as a train approaches.

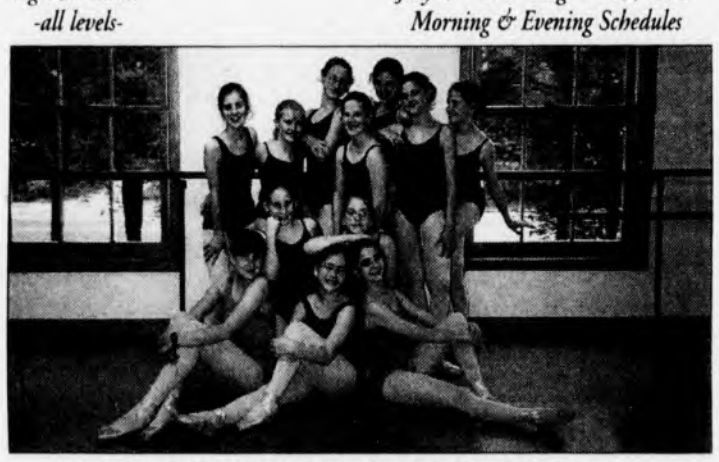
Last year the state legislature directed the MBTA to install quadrant gates at all grade crossings, Brennan said. He said the MBTA is not yet following that directive because it wants some kind of FRA-approval for quadrant gates.

Dickinson said railroads oppose whistle bans and Brennan admitted that the MBTA was not in favor of a ban. Whistles are the most effective way to alert people that a train is coming, Dickinson said.

He added that he safest grade crossings are ones that are closed.

Scituate Selectman Joe Norton updated CAC members on problems with the MBTA's plans for Scituate. Norton said the MBTA has not followed up on its promise to pay to cap the landfill which is to serve as a layover facility. He added that if the MBTA didn't follow up on that commitment soon, Scituate would cap the landfill.

Norton said the landfill must be capped by Dec. 1998 to comply with state regulations.



Debbie Cook, one of Cohasset's CAC representatives, wanted to know what the MBTA would do if the town capped the landfill and kept the land.

Brennan replied that an eminent domain taking was one possibility. But he added that the MBTA probably would have to address the issue of capping the landfill sometime in the near future.

Alternatives to Nursing Home Care

SOLUTIONS TO MEETING YOUR PARENTS' IMMEDIATE AGING NEEDS

FREE SEMINAR SERIES

Sunday, June 8; Tuesday, June 10; Wednesday, June 11

Lack of knowledge of the alternatives is a major contributor to unnecessary nursing home admissions. Lifestyle is also a major determinant as to whether a prolonged stay in a nursing home can be avoided. No one wants to be in a nursing home. And a lengthy stay in one can ruin a person's financial health.

At our informative seminars you will learn

- What types of alternative living arrangements exist for seniors who need aditional support but who can no longer safely stay at home.
- How costs and quality of life compare between home care, assisted living, and the nursing home.
- What lifestyle changes your elderly relative can make to enhance their health and reduce the risk of a nursing home stay.
- How to convert home equity into housing which also offers dining, housekeeping, transportation, and personal care services.
- How to put your new knowledge into action.

Guest speakers will include nationally known experts in the fields of senior living and health care: M. David Vail; Sumer Verma, M.D., and Lois C. Schuster, R.N.

Seating is limited, so call today for reservations: (617) 843-3700.

The South Shore Strikes a Blow Against Cancer

Relay for Life Starts June 13

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Beginning at 3 p.m., Friday, June 13, the track at Cohasset's Junior-Senior High School is being put to a new and innovative use. At present count, 19 teams of walkers and joggers will embark on their 24-hour trek encircling the track, in an effort to raise money for the American Cancer Society. This will be the first annual "Walk for Life" held in Cohasset, however Hanover has held similar events in the past, which have met with tremendous success, last year raising more than $57,000.

Every day, more is learned about cancer and how it operates in the human body, scientists come a little closer to a new breakthrough, and more of the nation is educated about potential risks. To do this, it takes time and money, the latter being something that can be influenced by charitable events such as this.

The honorary chairperson of the relay will be state representative and Cohasset resident, Mary Jeanette Murray.

"Cancer is a disease that has touched every family including my own. I encourage anyone interested in striking a blow against this devastating disease to participate in the Relay for Life," Murray said.

Olivia Peters, who ran in the fund-raiser the past two years and this year is now a team leader, says "There is a very festive atmosphere, which allows everyone to appreciate all the people directly or indirectly touched by this disease.

"It is also very touching and moving, especially the prayer service that precedes the luminary walk," she said.

The Relay for Life Committee hopes to raise more than $15,000 during the walk, which will help to support the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education and services to cancer patients and their families. The great majority of the funds brought in by the Relay For Life are not raised by corporate sponsors but rather by personal donations and pledges to the participants.

Every team, whose average number is about 10, must have one runner or walker on the track at all times. Throughout the 24-hour journey, there will be music, games, exhibits, demonstrations, food and more including a luminary walk at 9 p.m., Saturday. At this point the track is lined with incandescent containers and candles. There will also be three survivor walks to be held at 6 p.m. and one at 9 p.m., which kick off the luminary walk, and another one at the conclusion of the marathon at 3 p.m., Sunday. Everyone on the South Shore is invited to come and be a part of the festivities, the gratitude for survivorship, and the continual challenge of raising funds, which are all equally prominent features of the relay.

RVs and tents are welcome for those who are planning on staying through the evening. Teams may opt to have runners come in shifts.

The Relay for Life is an opportunity to become involved in a good cause, for example, St. Anthony's Church has entered three teams to participate.

Kathy Carlson, who received the Healthy Contributor Award presented by the Welch Care Health organization in conjunction with The Duxbury Clipper and several other organizations, now holds a new position as The American Cancer Society's field executive for development. She stressed that Cohasset's Relay for Life should not be looked at as solely a Cohasset event but rather a South Shore one, which teams and residents from all over the South Shore are invited to enter as well as anyone who would singularly like to participate in this important event. All runners are asked to obtain a minimum of a $100 sponsorship.

There is still time to get your team together and participate in this event. For more information, please call the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society at (617) 741-9844.

CHS Class of 1997

McWilliams, who is headed to UMass Amherst and co-valedictorians Ely J. Kahn and Christopher T. Lesniewski-Laas, who will attend Harvard and MIT respectively.

In keeping with tradition, Cohasset School Committee Chairman Maureen Jerz will deliver the graduation address.

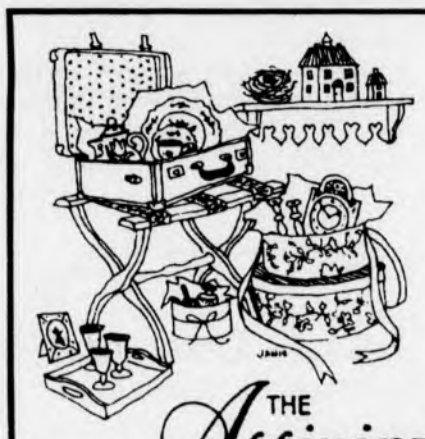
Teacher Paul Narkiewicz will present the national honor society members with commemorative plaques.

Following the exercises, the junior class will host a reception for graduates and their families under the smaller events tent on the Music Circus grounds.

Collins pointed out that the two valedictorians received early admission acceptance to their respective colleges. Lesniewksi-Laas completed his high school education in three years.

"The class is strong academically and they did their part in athletics too," Collins said.

He described the group as somewhat carefree and laid back.



"They take life as it comes," he said.

He said 35 members of the class participated in "senior projects" involving community service ranging from Head Start to working with the DPW.

"It's a structured program in which the seniors can give back to the community or region," Collins said.

Thanks to being able to use the Music Circus, graduates are not restricted to the number of guests and there is plenty of parking.

NO DOUBTING ST. THOMAS
Searching for paradise? Try St. Thomas. A popular bet among the locals of this amiable territory in the U.S.Virgin Islands is that if you sample their tropical treats, you may never bother to plot a course for any other Caribbean retreat. For starters, the white sand and azure waters are exquisite. Add the facts that English, spoken with an intriguing island lilt, is the official language, and that U.S. currency can be used without any conversion hassles, and St. Thomas becomes a simply divine vacation haven. Scuba divers and snorklers will be enchanted by the colorful canvas of underwater animal and plant life. For more timid souls, touring submarines offer the same up-close and personal views.

Hingham Resident Named Executive Director of South Shore Art Center

Dillon Bustin Brings Colorful Background to the Position

By Patricia Murray DiBona
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A yellow Marshfield Public Schools bus pulls to a labored stop in front of the South Shore Art Center (SSAC) on Ripley Road in Cohasset.

As 20 high school students stream out of the bus' accordion doors, Dillon Bustin, the new executive director of the SSAC, graciously interrupts his interviewer and springs into action. Leading the young tour group and their teacher chaperones into the center, he provides a knowledgeable tour of the current exhibitions within the Bancroft and Dillon Art Studios, gives the group a peak into the upstairs work studios, and encourages the junior and senior students to submit artwork into the Festival on the Common's "Young Artist Exhibition," to be held June 20-22.

On the job just a few weeks, Bustin is clearly a quick study, with a thorough understanding of the center's numerous services as well as its key audience, South Shore residents of all ages.

"Dillon embodies all of the attributes the SSAC needs in an executive director," says Susan Redgate, president of the center's board of directors. "His background is rich and varied; his work with non-profit organizations includes wonderful ventures with entire school systems and a successful history of grant writing.

"Dillon is a team player with the ability to get people of varied ages and backgrounds to work well together."

In addition to his business background, Bustin's calm, composed presence also impressed Redgate.

"Dillon gives you his undivided attention when you speak with him. He listens carefully and adds poignant, thoughtful comments which consider the whole experience," she says.

For the past six years, Dillon, 46, has headed Dillon Bustin and Associates, a community arts and education consulting firm offering planning, fund raising and programming. His clients — established art centers, community art councils, schools and others — have led him across much of New England and into the Appalachian Mountains of West Virginia.

Dillon Bustin is the new director of the South Shore Art Center.

Bustin spent three recent years overseeing "Sailing Alone," a program he developed for the Martha's Vineyard Public Schools in honor of the first solo circumnavigation of the earth by Joshua Slocum, 100 years ago. Working closely with school faculty, Bustin developed a global studies curriculum integrating geography, history, life and earth sciences with the performing and visual arts. Funded by the Massachusetts Department of Education, the project culminated in a musical production featuring 180 children and 40 adults as well as an exhibit of the students' artwork at the Vineyard Museum.

Bustin, who holds an undergraduate degree in folklore and anthropology from Indiana University at Bloomington, was hired by the Library of Congress to conduct field research in the Appalachian Mountains. This assignment required Bustin to assume a different identity, that of cultural detective.

"My job was to explore the folklore of Appalachian residents, to discover who the community storytellers, wood carvers and quilters were," he recalls. "My investigative methods were relatively simple. I had my hair cut at the local barber shop, listened, learned and asked questions."

After completing his research, Bustin drafted recommendations for the National Park Service, identifying people who best represented the mountain culture and advising how their talents be used within a cultural center.

Bustin's dedication to the cultural arts has never veered off course even when state budget cuts might have declared otherwise. From 1985 to 1990, Bustin held various positions within the Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC), working his way up from staff folklorist to director of support for individuals. In this position, he created and administered a funding program which supported artists, educators and independent scholars. He also managed Art in Public Places, a program securing permanent placements of sculptures and other artwork, and helped create the New England Artists Trust, a 400-member educational and advocacy organization.

"In the early 1990s, state cuts reduced the total budget of the MCC from $26 million to $2.6 million," Bustin

Education Foundation Nears its Goal for Language Lab

At the May meeting of the Cohasset Education Foundation, President Michael Hurley announced the latest tally on the 18-month drive to complete the funding for a "state-of-the-art" language lab for the high school. Present funding has brought in contributions and commitments totaling $79,000. With a project cost of $100,000, the effort is nearly 80 percent complete.

Please help the CEF finish the job. Make your donation and the CEF will memorialize your gift with a plaque acknowledging your family, firm or loved one.

There are two options:

A) $1,500 per student desk unit (15 sold/15 available).

B) $5,000 memorials for the main console (4 sold/4 available).

Donations to the CEF are tax deductible and can be scheduled in installments over time.

With the goal so close at hand, the CEF has focused on a fall opening for the new foreign language center.

People interested in learning more about tax deductible donations for the language lab project and the mission of the foundation are encouraged to call the CEF at 383-2833 or to write to P.O. Box 224, Cohasset, 02025, for a copy of the brochure and additional information on the programs. A registered non-profit organization, all donations to the project fund are tax-deductible and dedicated to enhancing the educational environment of Cohasset public school students.

remembers. "The staff was sliced from 60 to six, and all of the programs I had worked on were terminated."

Many of Bustin's downsized colleagues chose vastly different career paths.

"I have friends who became financial planners and technical writers," Bustin says. "But I made the firm decision to stay within the arts and humanities field."

> 'With Dillon's help, we will re-examine our current programming and services and improve our facility. We want the center to be viewed throughout the South Shore as a strong cultural resource.'
> — Susan Redgate, president of the art center's board of directors.

A noted lecturer and author of numerous published essays and reports, Bustin has kept himself well-grounded, personally, within the South Shore. He is a resident of Bradley Woods, an active, family-oriented neighborhood off Route 3A in Hingham.

"We moved to Bradley Woods eight years ago primarily because my wife, Martha, could catch the commuter boat to her job as an editor with Houghton-Mifflin in Boston," Bustin explains. "We were pleasantly surprised to find ourselves in the midst of such a wonderful neighborhood."

Bustin serves on the board of governors of the Bradley Woods Association. He and Martha have a son, Andrew, 10. The family is active in the First Parish Church in Hingham.

Bustin declares he is "still in the learning mode" in his new role at the South Shore Art Center and says his primary goal is to strengthen the many programs already in operation, a sentiment echoed by Susan Redgate.

"With Dillon's help, we will re-examine our current programming and services and improve our facility. We want the center to be viewed throughout the South Shore as a strong cultural resource."

The South Shore Art Center, open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m., has two major galleries that feature eight exhibitions annually. The SSAC offers art classes and workshops throughout the year and an educational outreach program for area schools. The gift gallery features fine art and gifts by regional artisans. This year's Festival on the Cohasset Common will feature exhibitions, demonstrations and the work of 115 craft artisans. For more information, call 383-ARTS.

Class of '37 to Celebrate 60th Reunion with Informal Get-Together

'Tis the season for reunions, and I certainly have been writing about plenty lately! Here's a special one to tell you about — the Class of 1937 (Cohasset High, natch) is planning to celebrate with a luncheon and an informal get-together! No paid speaker or anything, just tons of fun and remembering! It will be held at Kimball's By The Sea June 20 (that's a Friday) at noon. The buffet luncheon will cost $18, and you are asked to RSVP by June 10 to 383-0711 or 383-0388. Please send your check to Arthur Lehr, 200 North Main St., Cohasset. By the way, and this is important, they really hope that members of surrounding classes will join this gala, you are all "near and dear" to them. The 60th anniversary committee is hoping for a great turnout; be there! Then they can call me, and I'll tell you all about it! What fun!

Did you see all of the flags flying the week before Memorial Day in the Memorial Park in front of the Legion? Didn't they look grand? The reason for them being there was that there was a POW convention at Kimball's By-The-Sea — Rocco Laugelle represented the Legion, Ralph Perroncello was the representative for the VFW; and Tom Wigmore represented the Sons Of The American Legion. Ray Buckley was installed as state commander. Fred Piepenbrink was there as an ex-POW, as was Hugh White from Scituate. They had a wonderful dinner at Kimball's, and an enjoyable time was had by all — including enjoying all of those flags, representing the 50 States, which gave us all great pleasure!

Speaking of Memorial Day, did you know that we had 70 veterans marching in our parade? And that they came from everywhere, including Kentucky, Vermont, South Carolina and Washington State? That's really amazing for a small town, we are so proud of all of you! And we thank you for helping to make our lives what it is today! God Bless America!

On April 30 at 4:39 a.m. at South Shore Hospital, into the world came Mairead Treanor, the daughter of Elizabeth and Jeff Treanor — Mairead joins her big brother, Jake. Her maternal grandparent is James Conway, of Coatbridge, Scotland, and her paternal grandparents are John and Ruth Treanor of Cape Coral, Fla. Congratulations go to all of you!

Derby Academy students recently took part in a basketball shoot-out to raise money for helping children with disabilities. In the process they raised more than $1,200 for Easter Seals. Hats off to Morgan Pierson for taking part in this effort, what a wonderful thing to do!

Maria C. Kierce graduated from Nichols College May 17 with a bachelor of arts degree in psychology. Maria certainly has a list of achievements and activities that go along with that degree! Bison, theatre company, orientation leader, teacher's assistant, residential adviser, psychology club, women's rugby, treasurer of the psychology club, secretary of the Republican Club for two years — wow, will she be an awesome figure in whatever she decides to do! Maria is the daughter of Christopher and Rose Kierce of 189 South Main St.

Kendra Gray, a Union College Class of 1999 economics major, recently participated in the college's Steinmetz Symposium on student creative, scholarly and research achievements. Kendra is a resident of 40-B Nichols Rd. and a 1995 grad of Cohasset High School.

It's time to congratulate Elizabeth M. Hills again! Elizabeth (grade 11), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hills, achieved high honors for the winter term at the Mercersburg Academy. That means she had a 90-100 gpa! GREAT!

We end this week by congratulating Meka-Mari Laugelle, the daughter of Rocco and Peg Laugelle! Meka-Mari graduated from Quinnipiac College last week, and everyone is oh-so-proud of her! Best of luck in the business world to a great gal who is sure to do extremely well!

Don't forget to fill me in on what is going on in your world!

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

A Dangerous Precedent

'I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it.'
— Voltaire.

Some readers did not like the story we ran two weeks ago on how village merchants long for a study on the pros and cons of the village station. We reported how some business owners, most of whom are not residents, feel disenfranchised by the way the decision on the Route 3A train station was reached through what was touted as a non-binding, informal poll at the fall town meeting.

One reader dropped us a note saying the story was not newsworthy.

We disagree and think what matters to the village should matter to Cohasset. We think citizens need to know how the businesses feel even if their view doesn't change anything or disagrees with a "town" decision.

In investigating the story, we called Dean Rizzo. Mr. Rizzo, who by the way is a Cohasset resident, is vice president of the local Chamber of Commerce and is a paid employee of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. He also has served for the past year as the leader of the Cohasset Village Revitalization Committee, a group dedicated to breathing new life into Cohasset's struggling downtown. Thanks to Mr. Rizzo, the Chamber and the Rotary — a "charette," a design of an enhanced village — was developed which many hope will become the blueprint for the future. The village farmer's market, which resumes this week, is a reality, again thanks to Mr. Rizzo and others.

Mr. Rizzo also serves as chairman of the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, a volunteer board appointed by selectmen to get the best deal for the town with the MBTA regarding train mitigation matters.

Sadly for the town, Mr. Rizzo's participation in our story so outraged selectmen — who want to put the village station to bed once and for all — that they demanded he step down as chairman of the mitigation committee. They also gave him the option of remaining silent on the village station or resign from the committee, on which he serves as the representative for the business community.

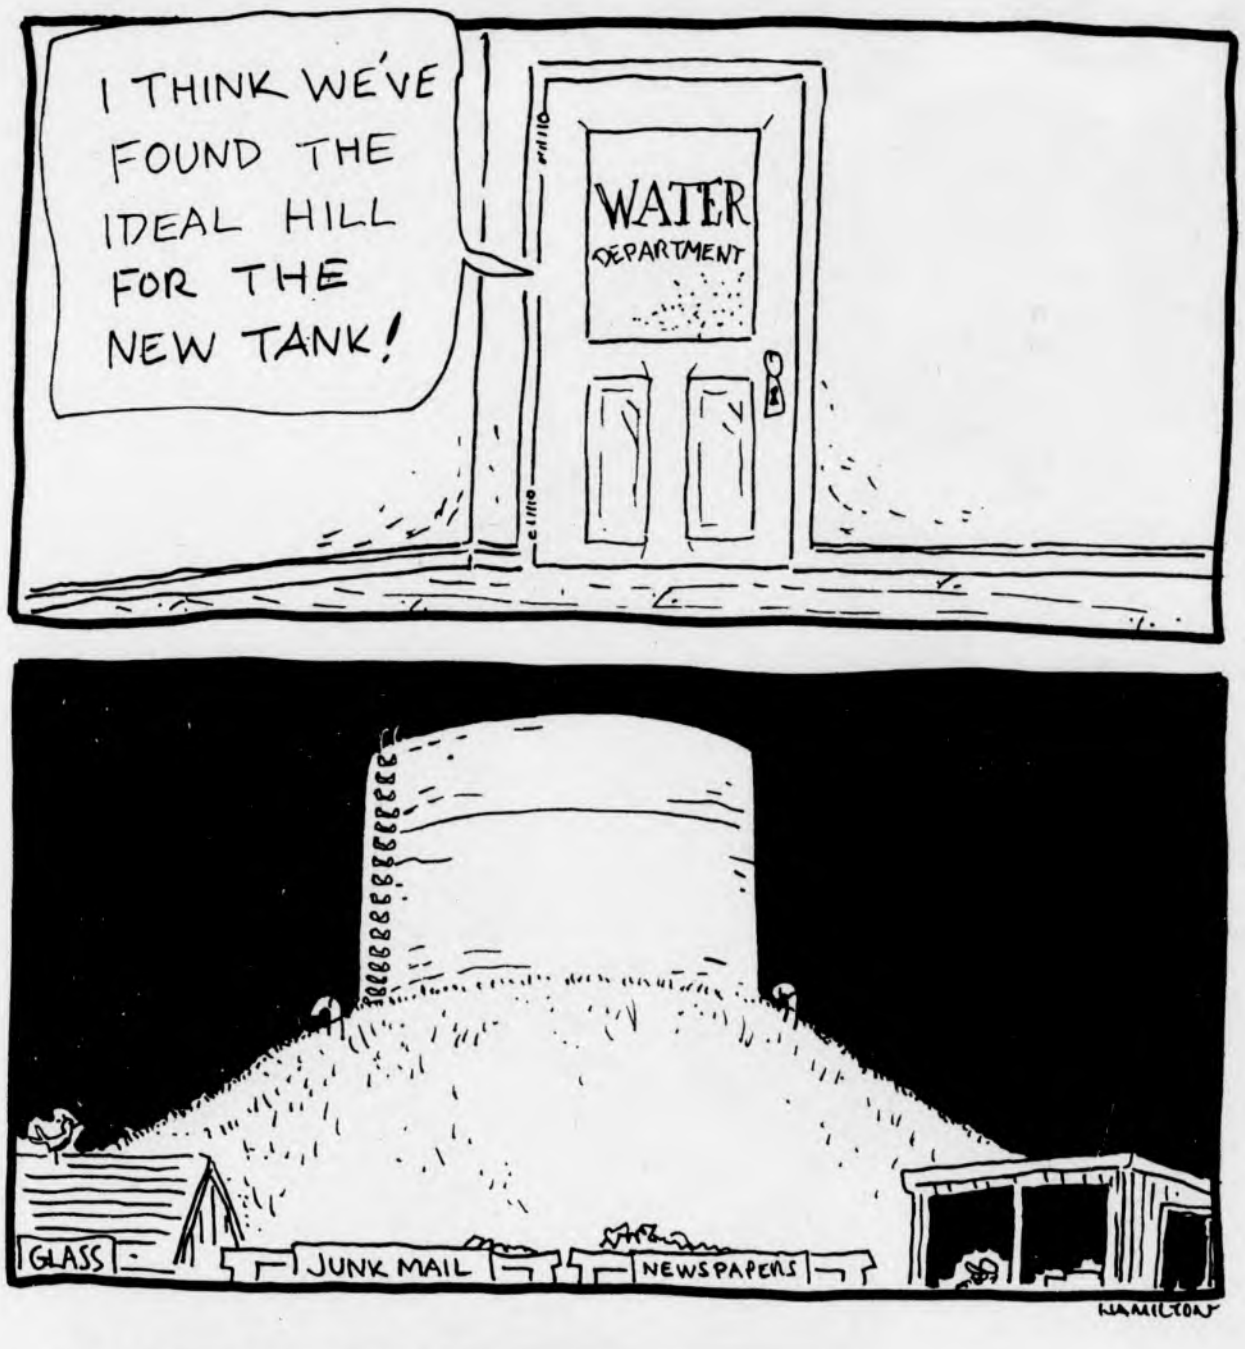
Selectman Nan Roth said the decision on the location of the train station was made and selectmen are not interested in having it revisited.

Selectmen seem miffed that Mr. Rizzo speaks his mind. Seeing a potential conflict, they are also uncomfortable with his employment by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, which backs restoration of the train, a project which about half the town supports.

Yet by their own admission, selectmen cannot find fault with Mr. Rizzo's actions on the committee. They praised his hard work last week and acknowledged that finding someone to replace him with his knowledge of the issue wouldn't be easy.

While selectmen have the authority to ask for Mr. Rizzo's resignation — we think their action amounts to intimidation. We hope they reconsider or they will be sending a message to all appointed board members: tow the company line or you're out.

This is a small town where citizen volunteers often wear many hats. We've sat through a selectmen's meeting, for example, where conservation commissioner Tom Callahan, who is a lawyer, represented a client who had business before the selectmen and his own board.



And as far as speaking out on "decided" issues. Selectman Ronnie McMorris wrote us a letter to the editor disagreeing with the "process" by which a town manager form of government was adopted after town meeting opted for it. Where's the outrage from her fellow board members that she was going against the will of the people?

We can assure you that the Mariner won't back off interviewing those whom we feel we need to, to get a story.

We can only hope that citizens will continue to have the courage to speak their minds even when their opinion is a minority view and is not popular with the powers that be.

Enduring ridicule for unpopular opinions takes backbone. Lashing out at those who do requires none.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Dissent Must Not Be Tolerated'

To the Editor:

What ails the Cohasset Board of Selectmen? They seem appalled that someone thinks the railway station would be better located in Cohasset village where it was originally, and where it might benefit downtown business, increase property values (and taxes), and encourage greater ridership. Now it seems that the selectmen figure that if we've got to have a train, let's get it out of sight as far and as quickly as possible. So put the station in the middle of Great Swamp on the far edge of town where it will be handy to Woodside Cemetery, the back end of the golf course, and Whitney Woods. It might even be called Great Swamp Station.

Enter Dean Rizzo, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce representative on the railroad mitigation committee which chose him to be its chairman. In an interview with a news reporter he expressed thoughts that a railway station in the village would help downtown businesses. The selectmen considered this heresy and asked that he either cease to speak contrary to their view or resign from the mitigation committee. Among other things, he works for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce which backs restoration of the Greenbush line—guilt by association. Dissent must not be tolerated!

So much for speech control, except that the selectmen might come closer to achieving their desires if they were to follow their own admonition to Dean Rizzo, i.e. keep quiet, and let the chips fall where they may. The office of selectmen seems better suited to presiding than to taking sides.

It wouldn't hurt to bear in mind that most of those involved in this fuss, whether elected or appointed, are volunteers and wear many hats. Let not the pot call the kettle black.

The question remains. Why? The selectmen arbitrarily closed the door on the issue last year, three weeks prematurely, based on a contrivance, a straw poll which most of the electorate ignored. Why the haste? Why this adamant defense on the part of the selectmen? Why this tempest in a teapot?

ASP Thanks Local Eateries

To the Editor:

The Appalachia Service Project would like to thank the many local eateries which donated gift certificates to A.S.P.'s annual silent auction fund raiser. These gift certificates are always a terrific help in raising money to send the youth of Cohasset to Appalachia, where they assist in making home repairs for people in need.

Our much appreciated thanks go to the Red Lion Inn, the Log & Line, Zinnias, French Memories Bakery, Strawberry Parfait, The Village Butcher, and Wilbur's of North Scituate. The Appalachia Service Project greatly appreciates the support of these local businesses.

We had an ugly day at Barnes Field, Saturday. For me, I apologize for my part in that melee.

Outdoor Golf Lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments will co-sponsor outdoor golf lessons for beginner and intermediate levels throughout the spring and summer months. The lessons will be taught by Cohasset Golf Club's assistant pro Rick Altham.

Sessions will begin at various times throughout May, June and July and are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., and again from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. Also, morning classes are available Wednesdays at 10 and 11 a.m. during May through August. The fee for this program is $65 per person for the five-week session.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, or the Scituate Recreation Department at 545-8738. Should you need to borrow clubs to participate in lessons, indicate this at the time of registration.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will continuously, throughout the summer, offer dog obedience classes taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset.

For both the beginner class and the intermediate/advanced class, dog owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $48 for the eight-week, one hour per week program.

To register for the next available session, call the recreation office at 383-6791. A new session will begin approx. every eight weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Youth Tennis

Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 30, and continue for seven weeks through Aug. 15. Youth tennis registrations will be held, starting Monday, June 16, and continue throughout that week, as follows: Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and again 1 to 3 p.m., and Thursday evening, from 5 to 7 p.m. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18. The program is designed on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. The fee for the one seven-week session of instruction, two days a week, is $44. $5 discounts are available for additional children in a family.

Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Fridays are special clinic or tournament days.

Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 a.m., all tennis classes will be canceled for that day.

Nelta Tournament

The Nelta Tournament will be held Friday, Aug. 1. More information will be forthcoming through the tennis classes. Registrations for this event will be done through the youth tennis classes. If interested, register through the recreation department office the week of June 16 at the designated times and days listed above. Classes will begin Monday, June 30.

Adult Tennis

The recreation department will offer tennis classes for beginner and intermediate tennis players continuously throughout the summer on various evenings. The classes are one hour long and a session is four weeks in duration. New sessions will begin approx. every four weeks.

Beginner classes meet various evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and the intermediate classes will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Advanced (tournament level instruction) classes meet Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and advanced beginner will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursdays. Classes will be limited in size. Additional classes will be formed should demand dictate. All classes will meet at the recreation commission tennis courts at the top of Norfolk Road, next to Miliken Field.

To register, call the recreation department office at 383-6791. The fee for the four-week program is $35 per person, payable by check to the Town of Cohasset. Each participant will need a racquet. Classes do not meet if weather is inclement, and should you be in doubt, due to weather conditions, call the recreation office prior to class time.

Recreation Commission Year-Round Services

The recreation department conducts children, youth and adult programs and events on a year-round basis. Special after-school recreation programs for children 4 through grade 6, are conducted in three seven-week sessions, (fall-winter-spring). Information regarding recreation activities appears in all local news media, fliers home from school, school menus and on cable TV local listings. You may call the office daily at 383-6791 for information on all services.

South Shore Music Circus Registrations

The Music Circus Children's Show registrations will be open to children in the playground programs. We will be attending the 10:30 a.m. performances Thursdays at a group rate. Registrations must be made two weeks prior to the show date as indicated below. No late registrations can be accepted. Payments must be made at the recreation office, Thursdays between 9 a.m. and noon, or between 5 and 7 in the evening on the indicated dates below.

July 3, Goldilocks and the 3 Bears, $5.25, Thurs., June 19; July 10, Jack and the Beanstalk, $5.25, Thurs., June 26; July 17, Alice in Wonderland, $5.25, Thurs., July 3; July 24, Beauty and the Beast, $5.25, Thurs., July 10; July 31, Cinderella, $5.25, Thurs., July 17; Aug. 7, Little Red Riding Hood, $5.25, Thurs., July 24; and Aug. 14, The Funny Stuff Circus, $5.25, Thurs., July 31.

The Music Circus is optional, regular playground activities will continue for those who do not attend. On rain days: see Kristen regarding pick-up and drop-off routine. Programs are subject to change by S.S.M.C.

Band Concerts

During the past eight seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Assoc., Inc. Each June the board of directors of the South Shore Music Circus take under consideration the request of the recreation commission, for concert funding, hence, certainty of concert is not absolute until mid-June, each season. The SSMC donation is matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians, N.Y.C.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 1997 season is as follows:

Saturday, June 14, 2 p.m., (Frank's Big Band); Tuesday, July 8, 7:30 p.m.; Tuesday, July 22, 7:30 p.m.; and Tuesday, Aug. 12, 7:30 p.m.

Performances on Tuesday nights will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available.

Charter School Funding, Assessment Top Debate

By Jennifer R. Horan
COHASSET MARINER

Funding and accountability remain two of the biggest questions looming on the horizon for Massachusetts charter schools.

Associate Commissioner of Education Scott Hamilton and state Rep. Janet O'Brien, D-Hanover, vice chairman of the legislative committee on education, debated the progress and future of the one-and-a-half-year-old pilot schools recently at an education forum hosted by state Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield. More than two dozen educators, parents and officials from Marshfield and Scituate attended the forum.

Established through the 1993 Education Reform Act, 22 charter schools have opened across the state. The closest school to Scituate — the South Shore Charter School in Hull — has already reached the end of its second year of instruction.

With non-traditional curricula and independent governance structures, the schools are designed to offer parents and children an alternative to their district's public schools. But funding for the experimental schools has been a bone of contention for local school districts.

The 1993 Education Reform Act stipulated that school tuition would follow students from their district public school to a charter school if they chose to enroll, meaning local schools stand to lose state aid dollars along with students.

"That was seen as inflammatory," Hamilton said, adding that the Legislature then created a reimbursement scheme to compensate the district schools for enrollment losses.

"It's a really contentious issue," said O'Brien. "Just because a public school loses 10 students, the school's overhead costs don't go down. It doesn't mean the school will be able to save money."

O'Brien suggested that charter schools should be funded by the state.

"That would eliminate a lot of the antipathy public schools hold for charter schools," she said.

Hynes said he doesn't see state funding for charter schools as a separate budget line item becoming a reality until after the five-year trial period is exhausted in 2000 and 2001.

Fifteen charter schools opened for instruction in the fall of 1995, seven opened in the fall of 1996 and three more are scheduled to open this September, Hamilton said.

If charter schools are not succeeding, the state will shut them down, Hamilton said.

Legislators have questioned how to accurately measure a charter school's student success rate and compare charter school and public school students' educations, O'Brien said.

"I have heard a lot about accountability," said O'Brien. "There needs to be an objective evaluation procedure."

Hamilton said charter schools conduct the same state standardized tests as the public schools in their districts to measure student progress from the beginning of the year to the end of the year.

"But I hope charter schools will not be evaluated solely on standardized test results," he said.

Because charter school administrators develop different goals and themes for their schools, teachers teach and students learn in a non-traditional way, Hamilton explained.

"Too often public schools have been asked to be all things to all people," Hamilton said. "Charter schools ought to create schools that can be different from one another and create different options for different kids. All children don't learn in the same ways or the same environments."

In addition to standardized test scores, each charter school will be evaluated according to a seven-page accountability plan the school's administrators conceive, he said.

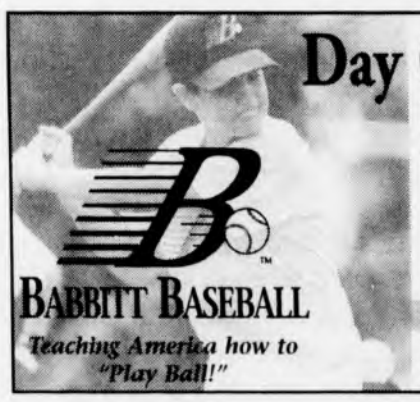
"We will have lots of information to base our decision on of whether or not to renew a school's charter, " Hamilton said.

O'Brien said she hopes to see the charter schools succeed in their mission, which includes serving as a "model of innovation" to improve the state's public schools.

"Some charter schools are for-profit organizations that do not want to share their product with public schools," she said. "Some don't agree with the vision. It has to be a collective effort so that the goals are in sync."

Hamilton and O'Brien agreed that the future of public education may somehow incorporate both charter school and traditional public school models.

Historic and Architectural Walking Tour



The Historic and Architectural Walking Tour series will begin a new season of tours at 3 p.m., Sunday, June 8. The first tour will be of the Lincoln National Register Historic District. The tour group will meet in front of Old Ship Church at 90 Main St. and will include historical and architectural highlights of Hingham Square. Included on the tour will be Old Ship Church, Memorial Bell Tower, Hingham Cemetery, St. Paul's Church, Old Ordinary, new North Church, The Community Center, Derby Hall and Loring Hall.

The tour series will continue every other Sunday throughout the summer. The tours will typically start at 3 p.m. and will last 1-1/2 hours. A new tour of South Hingham is being developed and will be ready by early July. The tours are free and open to all interested. For more information call Rick Desmarais, at 749-2463.

Investing: What you need to know to trade at the best price

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

How do you know that you got the best price for stocks you bought or sold? Experts agree that it's hard to know for sure -- stock trading is like a complex dance between millions of buyers and sellers with no precise measurement for success.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

But rules exist to manage the mayhem. Probably the newest and most significant for individual investors is the Security and Exchange Commission's requirement that traders post each stock's buy and sell prices for individual investors to see (the SEC had concluded that some Nasdaq traders didn't always do that).

The more you understand this change and how the trading procedure works, the better you will be able to pose relevant questions to your broker about how you can get the best prices for your equity investments.

First, you should understand what "getting the best price" means. Every stock has "bid" and "ask" prices that fluctuate, depending on the market for the stock. The current bid price is the most anyone is willing to pay for the shares; and the current ask, conversely, is the lowest price at which anyone is willing to sell.

The quote on Microsoft shares, for instance, may be 126 1/8 (the bid) to 126 1/4 (the ask). If you tell your broker to sell immediately at the going market price, he'll simply match you up with the bid price. To get a better price your broker would have to find a price in between the bid and ask prices — in the "spread." And the narrower the spread — or the closer buyer and seller come to finding a value for the stock — the better the price.

You can also say: the narrower the spread, the less the broker makes. Broker dealers — whether they be Nasdaq market makers or New York Stock Exchange specialists — use their own capital to buy stocks from sellers and sell the securities to buyers. Along with trading commissions, they pocket the difference in the prices (the spread) for their trouble.

The SEC drew up new rules about pricing procedures because it found that some Nasdaq market makers weren't posting the most favorable bid and ask prices. The result: wider spreads and more money for the brokers. Now, when an investor places a limit order (an order to buy or sell at a specific price) that is more favorably priced than the going bid or ask price, the market maker must display the order for all market makers to see. Before, the dealer could sit with the order until the market for the stock moved to meet the limit price, in effect hiding the competitive price from other investors.

Take note, though, that you can't necessarily take advantage of smaller spread on all stocks yet. The Nasdaq is slowly phasing in the "limit order" rule — it applies to only 300 stocks so far, out of over 5,000 stocks — so it can carefully monitor the results and make sure the brokerage firms don't go out of business.

Therefore, you may want to ask your broker if the stock you are buying or selling is among the bunch. If it's not, and if the spreads are larger than 1/8 or 1/4, you may not want to buy or sell at the going market price.

"The answer [to getting the best price] is limit order, limit order, limit order," says John Markese, the president of the American Association of Individual Investors and a member of the Nasdaq's board of directors. But it may take longer for the order to be filled.

Another factor in what price you ultimately get can be the choice of exchange you use.

Many investors don't know that about 70 percent of the stocks that trade on the New York Stock Exchange also can be traded over the counter on Nasdaq's electronic system, according to Ray Pellecchia, spokesman for the NYSE.

While the SEC rules may increase the similarities between the Nasdaq and the NYSE trading methods, such as posting favorable limit orders, there are still differences between the exchanges. For example, one may offer a slightly smaller spread because it trades your stock with greater volume. Discuss this possibility with your broker before you solidify your order.

One more suggestion: Keep an eye on the brokerage commissions you pay. Industry experts suspect that brokerage houses, especially discount brokerages, could make up for lost spreads by raising what they charge for trades.

Some discount brokers already agree to send their stock orders to certain market makers in return for a fee of a few cents per share, a practice called payment for order flow. "I can't believe this has improved prices [for customers]," says Markese. "The question is whether it's getting worse prices for customers."

With this information in mind, you and your broker can better draw up a strategy for buying and selling stock for your portfolio.

But at some point it's necessary to take the leap of faith that your broker and other market makers will do a good job. Someone may decide to sell their1,000 Microsoft shares for a song, and by no real fault of his own your broker may not be the one lucky enough to see them first and buy them. He'll continue to move through the electronic network of bid and ask prices — the dance of curtseys and bows, if you will — to find the next best price.

As John Markese says "Trading is an art, not a science."

Pierson to Person Show Going off the Air

Wigmore Pierson, host of the public affairs television show "Pierson to Person," announced June 2 that after a 10-year run the show will go off the air with the last live show scheduled for Thursday, June 26.

In making the announcement, Pierson said, "It has been a great pleasure, privilege and source of pride for all the volunteers behind the camera and me over the years to have attracted a wide range of fascinating guests to offer their views and insights into issues facing our communities during the last 10 years."

Pierson went on to say that 10 years is a long, long time for any show to stay on the air in commercial television but even rarer for a show produced entirely by volunteers.

Since the first show aired only in Cohasset in October 1987 with-then Cohasset Town Moderator William Weeks discussing an upcoming town meeting, more than 500 shows have aired in 34 South Shore towns, nearly 2,000 guests have appeared on the program, and more than 200 volunteers have assisted in getting the show on the air.

In making this announcement, Pierson quoted from Ecclesiastes, "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven."

"It's time to take my leave and to close this chapter of my life and move on," he said.

Paying special tribute to "Pierson to Person"'s executive producer for 10 years, Bob Belliveau, he said, "Bobby always gave me the confidence to do whatever made sense and no matter how challenging technically it was going to be, he would say 'Let's do it' and 'Don't worry, I get paid to make you look good.' Without Bob Belliveau, this show would neither have gotten on the air, nor had such a long and award-winning run."

Wigmore Pierson, left, interviews then-Senate President William Bulger on one of his Thursday night programs. Pierson is retiring from his program after 10 years on the air.

The June 5 show will be a repeat of last year's ninth anniversary show. June 12 will feature 83-year-old Cohasset lobster fisherman Herb Jason, and separately Rhonda Myers and others from the South Shore Art Center. The June 19 show will feature many South Shore elected officials.

And the last show will spotlight the Sparky Miele quartet and a retrospective of the last 10 years.

Wellspring Walkfest to Feature Sand Sculpture Contest

On Saturday, June 14, when Wellspring Multiservice Center hosts its annual Walkfest, the new dimension of art will be added to the festivities. Nantasket Beach, right in front of the Bernie King Pavilion, will be the site of the first annual sand sculpture contest, with free admission and an array of fantastic prizes.

All artists, young and old, serious sculptors and whimsical artists alike, are invited to participate. The rules for the contest are as follows:

1) All sculptures must be made of sand; 2) any supporting structures must be natural and indigenous to the sea shore, i.e. driftwood, not plywood, etc.; 3) any decorative features on the sculpture must be natural and indigenous to the sea shore, i.e. shells, not plastic bottles; 4) when the tide comes in, the sand sculpture should wash into the sea and become a part of nature again.

Wellspring and nature will supply the sand and water. Bring your own tools and buckets. Starting time is anytime after 9 a.m., when you can register for a sand-space. Judging time will be 11:30 a.m. Bring your ideas, your family or fellow artists, your entire class, or just yourself and your fans, if you are a fiercely independent sculptor, but be sure to come. There will be an old-fashioned brick-in-the-sand treasure hunt for young children, and of course, the 10k beach walk, all to support the good work of the Wellspring Multiservice Center. Call 925-3211 for more information.

Girls Lacrosse Finishes With Solid 5-6 Record

The Cohasset High School girls lacrosse team finished its season at 5-6 with a pair of solid victories over Marshfield, and tough losses to undefeated Martha's Vineyard and Duxbury.

In the season closer, the Lady Skippers dropped a 10-9 heartbreaker to Duxbury, a squad that had handled Cohasset easily earlier in the season.

"That game showed how far we'd come this season," said Cohasset coach Rose Kahn. "We could have won, given that two goals were disallowed on questionable rulings."

Caitlin Donovan exploded for five goals, while Katie Devine, Ali Kinchla and Meghan Connolly fired in single tallies.

In the Marshfield victory, defenders Kathleen Fitzsimmons, Emily Libby and Jackie Kahn held the visitors to just four goals, while Donovan tossed in three more. Freshman Jenny Chastain had a pair of goals. Fitzsimmons and Kinchla netted one each.

Against the 14-0 Vineyard squad, which had been winning its games by an average of 10 goals, the Lady Skippers played an outstanding first half, and trailed by just one, early in the second. Despite a final 10-4 score, Kahn was impressed with the team's effort.

"Martha's Vineyard was very athletic and mature," said Kahn. "Our young girls gave a tremendous effort."

Devine, Donovan, Connolly and Chastain scored for Cohasset, while Kinchla and Carolyn Cameron combined for seven saves in goal.

"All in all, it was a fine season," Kahn said. "If we'd been able to play our second game against Cape Cod Academy, we'd probably have finished at .500. For a second-year team playing as many eighth and ninth graders as we did, that's not bad."

Caitlin Donovan led Cohasset in scoring with 23 goals, followed by Meghan Connolly (12 goals), Ali Kinchla (eight) and Jenny Chastain (six) All four players return in 1998.

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

The Stripers Were Hot This Week

Joe O'Brien carefully examines the treble hooks laid out on the counter.

"This is the one," he said, holding up a #2 Mustad.

"Using small lures," I asked.

"With great results," Joe said, relating the details of the trip that had massacred his lures. "I went down to the Plymouth jetty with a couple of buddies. We had about four hours to fish. The stripers were hot. We caught 101 stripers before we had to leave."

"How big," was my inevitable question.

"Twenty-seven inches was the biggest," Joe conceded.

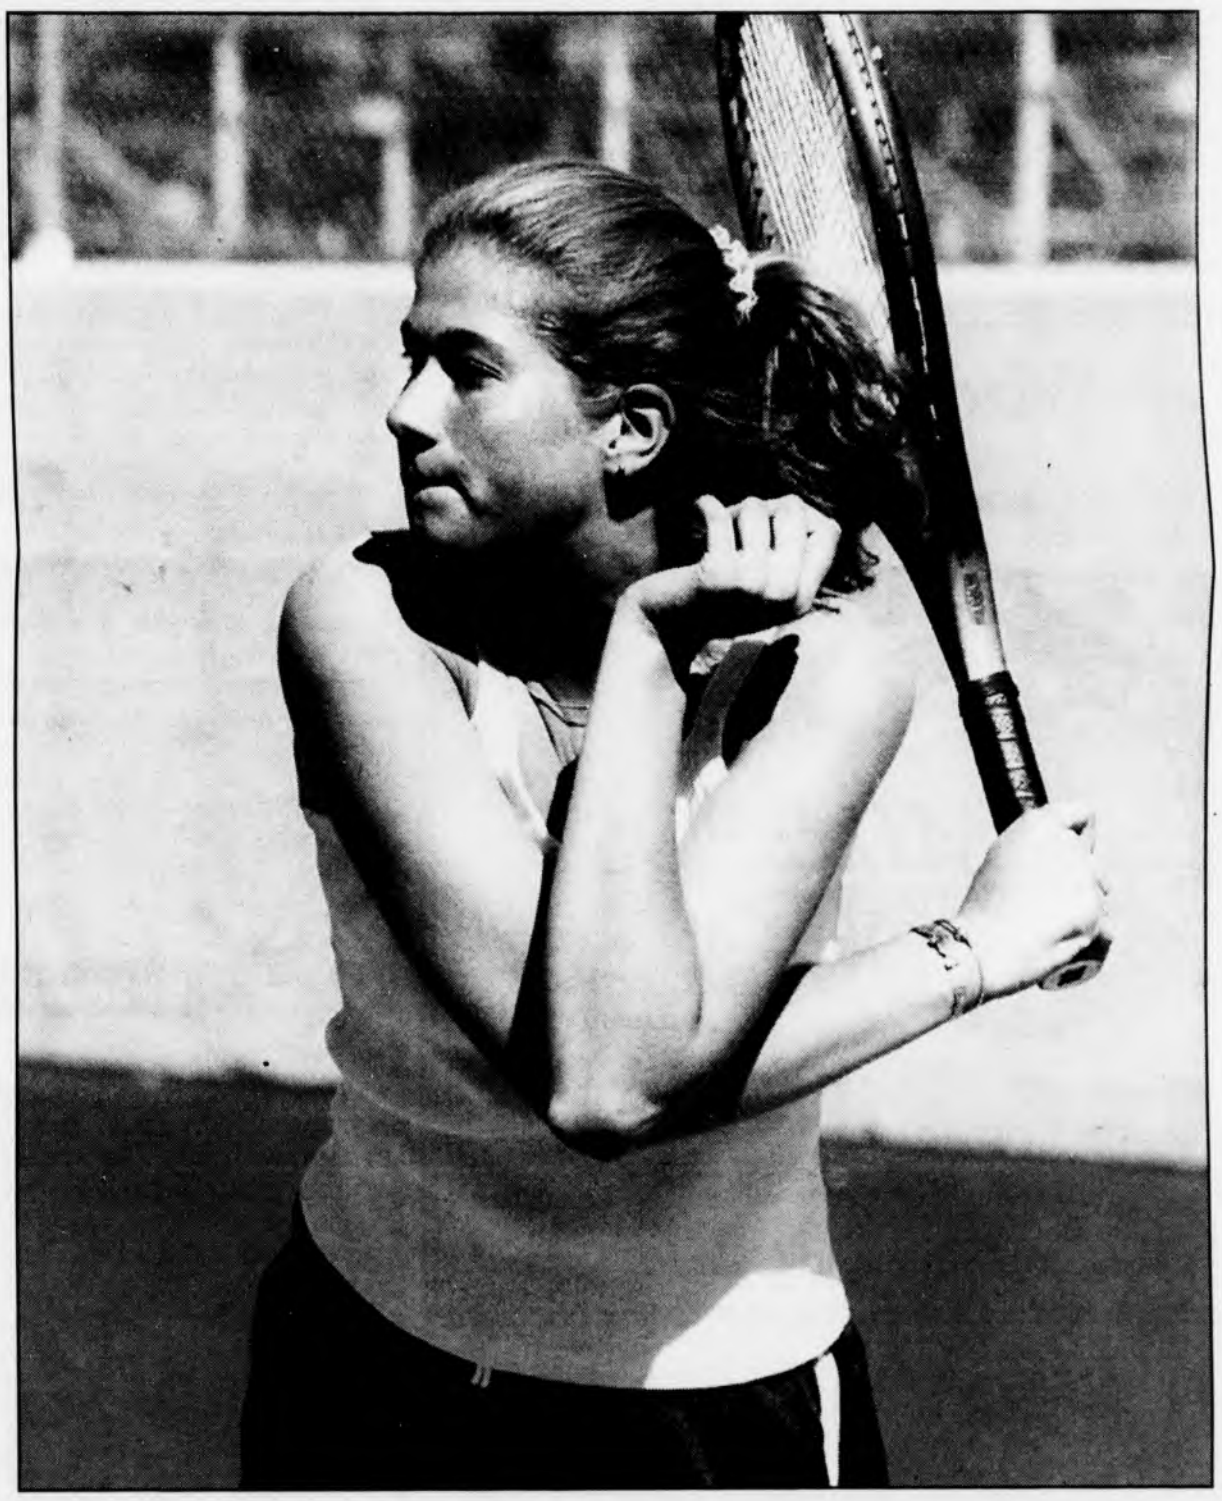
"And the smallest?" I asked, joshing him.

Joe held his hands, "about 7 inches apart," and we both laughed.

So the week was off to a good start. The sun shone down warm and everyone was in a flurry of getting ready or heading out to fish.

Meanwhile over at Cohasset Harbor I was chatting with Bob Baggs the assistant harbormaster. Across the river on the beach by the Charthouse Restaurant, an angler was working a small lure in the backwash.

"Hey, he's got one," Bob said.



Small splashes through the shallows were the sure sign...Now watching the angler's every move, we were amazed for every second or third cast produced a fish, all 18-22 inches. A small group of onlookers cheered every successful catch and hooted unwittingly as he released them for another day.

Bill Litchfield took a safari into the wildlands of Bound Brook this week. Most of the easy fishing spots have long since been cleaned of trout. The only ones to be had are deep in the brushy vine-woven woods that canopy the brook. True to form, Bill harvested two fine brookies using his favorite yellow roostertail spinner.

Dave (Dad), a renowned angler from Cohasset, and Jack (son) were haunting the ledges surrounding Minot's Light, catching a fair number of the mackerel school in the area. Much to Jack's surprise, holding amongst the mackerel was a feisty 17-inch striper, which tested the 6-year-old mightily. In true fisherman style, Jack garnished all the details when reporting back to Harry at the shop.

There's a New Kid in Town

Ladies and gentlemen, please don't adjust you television set. The name you see at the top of this column is not a mistake.

After numerous years on this beat, Joe Reardon left us this week to pursue a new career direction. With his departure, I get to fill a dream of mine and make the jump from the drudgery of budgets, plague, planning board meetings and the occasional tragedy that is the news department to the world of sports.

Simply stated, Yahoo!!

First off, I need to toss an editorial bouquet in the general direction of Mr. Reardon. As fine a writer as he is, even that is overshadowed by his general nature. Joe is without a doubt the finest gentleman that I have encountered in this business and he truly will be missed around the newsroom as a friend as well as a colleague.

I cannot even endeavor to fill his shoes, but instead I'll try to cut myself a new path to follow.

My theory here is simply, have fun and get out into the community as much as possible by meeting you people as well as cramming each bit of local sports information that I can into this newspaper each week.

It's a daunting task, yes, but one that I fell can be accomplished with your help. Without your help, I fail. It's a simple as that.

So know you're asking yourself, "Self, just what can little old me do to help Dave avoid failing and having to revert back to his prior

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.
